1530. To same branch of court—Application for payment out—Though relating also to fund in another branch of court.]—Lands were devised by A. & by B. upon trusts almost identical; a railway co. took part of A.'s lands, & an order for investment of the purchase-money was made by Stuart, V.C. Subsequently the co. took part of B.'s lands, & a similar order for investment was made by Wood, V.C. One petition for payment out of both funds was presented to Wood, V.C., who made the order, but entertained some doubt as to his jurisdiction:—Held: (1) all subsequent orders in a matter should be made where the first order was made; & (2) in dealing with both funds, that in Wood, V.C.'s jurisdiction should have been transferred to Stuart, V.C., to whom the application for payment out should then have been made.—

B. Incorporation of Acts.

1587. General rule—"Act incorporated therewith." (1) Lands which were settled, & under the trusts of which several persons were entitled absolutely, were taken by a railway co. for the purposes of their line, & the money was paid into ct. under the special Act. The Act provided that the co. should pay the costs of a reinvestment in land, but provided for nothing more. This co. was amalgamated with two other cos., & the three were constituted one co., & it was provided that any sums which were paid into ct. by any of the three cos. should be applied & disposed of according to their respective special Acts, which special Acts were declared to remain in force for such purposes, & Lands Act, 1845, was incorporated with the amalgamation Act, subject to such provisions as to costs. The parties entitled to the money representing the land sold, petitioned for payment of same out of ct., & that the amalgamated co. might pay the costs:—Held: the money should be paid out of ct., & the co. should pay the costs.

(2) Where a railway co.'s special Act contains certain provisions & by an Act amalgamating the railway with another the special Act is repealed, but its provisions are adopted in the amalgamation Act, the latter Act is an Act incorporated with the special Act within the meaning of Lands Act, 1845, s. 80.—Re ELLISON'S ESTATE (1856), 8 De G. 1805. Incumbrancers—General rule.]—Parts of certain settled estates were taken by two cos. & the purchase-money paid into ct. under Lands Act, 1845. Two separate petitions for reinvestment in land were presented by the tenant for life of the estates, & served on certain portion trustees & persons having charges on the estates. At the hearing of the petitions the counsel for petitioner & resps. held separate briefs on each petition:—Held: the cos. must pay the costs of one petition only.

Whenever there is a simple petition for the reinvestment of purchase-money in land the proper course is to serve such persons as mtgees. & annuitants with a copy of the petition, & to pay 40s. for costs with an intimation that if they appear at the hearing they will probably not get their costs. PART XII. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 1. A.

q. Who entitled to costs—Not parties who are each in default.]—A tenant at will, having agreed to give possession of lands, subsequently refused possession unless his sister, who had an equal interest, was also satisfied. The money was offered to be paid on his giving possession, but was not formally tendered. The co. lodged the sum agreed on in ct. to the separate credit of the tenant, alleging in the warrant his refusal to accept it as the reason for the lodgment: Held: the tenant was entitled to draw the entire money out of ct. Costs refused, each party having been in default. Re SOUTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1849), 12 L. Eq. R. —IR.

r. — Not promoters for motion when continuing order to pay out would avoid.]—An application to draw out of ct. a sum lodged there by a ry. co. could have been avoided had the co., on bringing in the money, obtained a continuing order to pay it out: Held: the co. were liable for the costs of the motion. Ex p. CREMEN v. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. CO. (1852), 4 Ir. Jur. 182.—IR.

s. — Not owner who wilfully neglects to make title.]—Upon compulsory purchase of land, under an Act incorporating Lands Act, 1845, & Railway (Ir.) Act, 1851, the purchasers lodged in ct. the compensation award, as the owner had failed to deliver a statement of title within the time prescribed by notices published under the Act: Held: owner should bear his own costs of drawing the money out. Re DUBLIN CORPN., Ex p. DOWLING (1881), 7 L. R. Ir. 173.—IR.

t. — — —.]—The owner of lands taken declined to accept the compensation awarded or to make title, & the money was lodged in ct.: Held: the owner's costs of application to draw the money out must be borne by him, he being guilty of "wilful default" within Lands Act, 1845, s. 80. Re ROSCREA GUARDIANS & WALLACE (1906), 40 I. L. T. 211.—IR.

1820 i. What costs included—Costs of application.]—Notwithstanding previous orders for payment to a tenant for life of dividends on purchase-money of lands compulsorily taken, costs of which have been borne by the co., the ct. will order the co. to pay the cost of an application by the tenant for payment out of ct. of the corpus to trustees under Settled Land Act, 1882. Secus where applt. was absolutely entitled to the fund at the time when the application for payment of dividends only was made. Re BELFAST CORPN., Re GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO., Re BALLYCASTLE RY. CO., Ex p. HARBERTON (VISCOUNTESS) (1893), 51 L. R. Ir. 258.—IR.

1820 ii. — — —.]—An arbiter ordained a ry. co. to deposit in bank the sum he found due by them for an estate acquired by them; & he also ordained the proprietor to grant a disposition of the land; which he failed to do. The ry. co. consigned the money & completed their title under Lands (Scot.) Act, 1845, s. 76: Held: the expense of an application for warrant to uplift the consigned money formed a valid charge against the ry. co.—MONCRIEFF v. EDINBURGH & GLASGOW RY. CO. (1857), 19 Dunl. 1952. — — — Only when costs not readily apportionable.]—On a petition by B. Foundation, which by arrangement between petitioners & resps., certain public bodies who had purchased different portions of the charity lands, was treated as one for reinvestment in land as far as the costs were concerned, the question arose whether these should be borne ratably or equally as between resps.:—Held: as the general rule laid down in Ex p. London (Bishop), No. 1808, ante, that these costs should be borne in equal shares, only applied to such costs as were not readily apportionable & not to the ad valorem stamp duty & the surveyor's fee, which should be paid ratably, the fact that the scale fee had been adopted on the purchase of the land for reinvestment in the present case readily furnished a means of apportionment & there being a great inequality in the amounts of purchase-money, these costs should be apportioned to the extent of the scale fee.—Re BISHOPSGATE FOUNDATION, [1894] 1 Ch. 185; 63 L. 2005. — Confers equitable estate only—Customary heir ordered to be admitted—As trustee for promoters.]—An Act of Parliament incorporated certain persons as a co. for the purpose of making a canal, & gave them powers to purchase & hold lands for the purposes of the Act; it authorised persons to contract for, sell, & convey their lands, gave a form of conveyance of all the estate, right, title, & interest of the person conveying, & enacted that all such contracts, agreements, sales, conveyances, & assurances should be valid to all intents, etc. S. was a tenant of copyhold land, a portion of which was wanted for the purposes of the canal; he sold it to the co., & executed a conveyance according to the form given by the Act. The land was then applied to the purposes of the canal. On the death of S. the lord made a proclamation for the heir of S. to come in & be admitted as a tenant on the rolls of the manor. No one appeared to claim admittance, & the lord seized the land quousque. He afterwards brought ejectment against the canal proprietors, & obtained judgment against them on the ground that the conveyance under the Act had only vested in them an equitable estate in the copyhold land. He then interfered to stop the course of the navigation. The canal proprietors filed a bill against him, praying that the customary heir of S., or such other person as plffs. might appoint, might be admitted to the copyhold premises, plffs. undertaking to pay the fine & fees upon such admission; & further praying for a perpetual injunction & general relief:—Held: the customary heir of S., who had been made a party to the suit, should be admitted tenant to the copyhold premises in question, & when admitted should hold the same as trustee for plffs. in the suit, & the amount of the fine was referred to the master, & an injunction should be granted.—*DIMES v. 2039. — For existing lease not surrendered—Though new tenancy granted after notice to treat.]—By an agreement dated Mar. 15, 1905, F., as agent for the mtgees. in possession of certain premises, let the premises to S. for three years from Mar. 14, 1905. On May 15, 1905, notice to treat under Lands Act, 1845, in respect of the premises was served by defts., a tramway co., on the lessors. By an agreement dated Jan. 23, 1906, S. agreed to stand possessed of the lease of the premises in trust for pltf., & in Feb. pltf. entered upon the premises. Subsequently S. informed F., the lessors' agent, that he wished to transfer his interest to pltf., & it was arranged between S., pltf., & F. that the old tenancy should be surrendered, & a new tenancy should be granted to pltf. for a term of three years, being about a year longer than the residue of the former term. Accordingly on Feb. 14, 1906 an agreement was entered into by which F., as the lessors' agent, let the premises to pltf. for three years from that date:—Held: either pltf. or S. as trustee for him was entitled to compensation in respect of the tenancy under the original agreement of Mar. 15, 1905, which still subsisted, in the absence of a valid surrender of it.—*ZICK v. 2044. ——— Under invalid lease—For improvements executed on faith of validity of lease—Not for loss of trade.—(1) As regards leasehold interests the function of a compensation jury summoned under Lands Act, 1815, extends only to ascertaining the value of the leasehold interest claimed by the landowner, & if too large an interest be claimed, the ct. itself will, after the compensation money has been paid in by the co., direct a proper apportionment, & order the excess in the amount paid into ct. to be returned to the co.

(2) A railway co. requiring certain premises in the occupation of A. gave him notice to treat. A. claimed compensation in respect of two leases, one for 21 years & the other for 80 years, & for loss of trade. A jury awarded £1500 for the leases & £700 for loss of trade, which sums were paid into ct. by the co. to the credit of ex p. the co., the account of A. The leases were in fact invalid, in consequence of their having been granted by the exors. instead of the heir of a last surviving trustee:—Held: A. was entitled to so much of the £1500 as represented the value of certain improvements effected by him on the faith of the leases being valid, the amount to be ascertained by an inquiry in chambers, & the residue of the money paid in must be returned to the railway co.; A. having served the persons who were interested in contending under the will that the leases were invalid, the co. would not be ordered to pay the costs of their appearance; a jury or arbitrator could not determine the title of the party but only the value of the interest.—*Re NORTH LONDON RY. 2084. — No landlord's notice to determine given—Notice requiring possession given—Land not taken till after expiration of notice—Entitled.]—By Lands Act, 1845, s. 121, if lands in the possession of a tenant from year to year were taken compulsorily, & such person was required to give up possession before the expiration of his term or interest therein, he should be entitled to compensation for the value of his unexpired term or interest in such lands, & for any just allowance which ought to be made to him by an incoming tenant, & for any loss or injury he might sustain. Under a local Act incorporating the above sect. defts., in Nov., 1865, served upon pltf., who held certain premises as yearly tenant, a notice stating their intention to take the premises, & requiring possession in six months. In fact possession was not taken by defts. until 1867, & pltf. meanwhile remained in possession, & continued to carry on his business upon the premises. In Jan., 1867, defts. took an assignment of the interest of pltf.'s landlord, the lessee for a term of the premises, but no landlord's notice to quit was ever given to pltf. In Feb., 1867, defts. demanded immediate possession of the pltf.'s premises, declining to pay any compensation, & upon refusal, obtained possession under a provision of their local Act, which, however, required that no such possession should be taken until payment or deposit of purchase or compensation money should have been made. Pltf. having sued them in trespass:—Held: defts. had not complied with their local Act, & were liable, & pltf. was entitled to compensation.—CRANWELL v. LONDON CORPN. (1870), L. R. 5 Exch. 284; 39 L. J. Ex. 193; 22 L. T. 760.

A railway with compulsory powers for the purchase of land gave N. notice to treat as to part of the land. N.'s lessor then gave him three months' notice as to that part of the land. During the currency of the notice the railway took possession. The compensation was assessed by a metropolitan magistrate:—Held*: assuming that N. was entitled to compensation for damage to the residue of the term in respect of the adjoining lands, the magistrate had no jurisdiction under s. 121 to assess it, & he had only jurisdiction to assess compensation for the value of N.'s interest in the land taken & for damage to the adjoining lands during the currency of the notice.—BEXLEY HEATH RY. CO. v. NORTH, [1894] 2 Q. B. 579; 64 L. J. M. C. 17; 71 L. T. 533; 58 J. P. 832; 10 T. L. R. 528; 9 R. 751, C. A.

2106. — Not within six months of notice of claim.]—By Lands Act, 1845, s. 124, if, after the promoters of the undertaking have entered upon lands which they are authorised to purchase, & which are permanently required, any party shall appear to be entitled to any interest in or charge thereon which through mistake was not purchased, then the promoters shall remain in undisturbed possession; provided within six months after notice of the interest or charge, in case the same is not disputed, or, in case the same shall be disputed, then, within six months after the right thereto shall have been established by law, they pay the compensation therein mentioned. Defts., a railway co., under their Act, which incorporated Lands Act, 1845, in July, 1858, entered upon lands of which the mtgor. had been in possession; & although the purchase-money was not paid to him, the parties were treating for arrangement, & the entry was with the knowledge & consent of the mtgor. Pltf. was mtgee. in fee of these lands, but the mtge. was not known by defts. to exist until pltf.'s attorney, having discovered the entry by defts., sent a letter in Aug., 1859, to defts.' attorney, asserting pltf.'s rights. A correspondence ensued, in which pltf. gave no information of his title & defts. did not dispute his title, but asked for a short delay while their legal advisers were absent from London. In the following Oct. pltf. brought ejectment:—Held: ejectment could not be maintained, inasmuch as, the title not being in dispute, the above enactment gave the defts. a right of possession for six months after notice of the pltf.'s claim.—JOLLY v. SECT. 1.—WHAT LAND MAY BECOME SUPERFLUOUS.

owners of the adjoining properties in proportion to the frontage of each, frontage meaning, what would be the length of the line of contact of each property if the line were made straight from the point of intersection of the boundaries on one side to the point of intersection of the boundaries on the other side.

(3) By a subsequent Act obtained by the co. the periods limited by the several Acts relating to the co. for the sale of their superfluous lands were extended to five years from the passing of the last Act, & the several Acts were to be read as if that period had been fixed by each of those Acts:—Held: this enactment did not defeat a right to unsold superfluous land already vested under a former Act at the time of the passing of the last Act.—MOODY v. 2110. Land in respect of which promoters wish to reserve easement.—A railway co. constructed a tunnel by arching over a cutting & placing soil on the arch:—Held: (1) they could not sell the surface soil over the tunnel as "superfluous land" within Lands Act, 1845, s. 127; (2) "superfluous land" within the sect. must be land separated from other land required for the purposes of the railway by a vertical & not a horizontal line.

(3) Seem: a railway co. cannot, without a special power, sell as superfluous land any land in respect of which they wish to reserve an easement.

PART XIV. SECT. 1.

2111 i. Land not superfluous at end of prescribed period.—A ry. co. had at the prescribed date two plots close to its terminal station, used partly as a private means of access to the station, but principally as garden ground. These plots were the only ground available for any extension of the station or ry. buildings:—

existing at the prescribed period & (2) the plots were not superfluous.—MACFIE v. CALLANDER & OBAN RY. CO. (1898), 25 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 19; 35 Sc. L. R. 413.—SCOT.

2120. Not minerals apart from surface—Land bought with minerals.—Lands had been acquired by a railway co. by agreement under their statutory powers. The time within which they might be sold if not required for railway purposes expired in 1863, at which time they had not been used for such purposes nor sold. The lands were in close proximity to W. station, & since 1868 additional sidings had been required at the station, for which the lands would be needed, but for want of funds such sidings had not been constructed. Meanwhile the lands were let, first to an agricultural tenant, & afterwards to a mining co., the lessors having the right to re-enter at any time at short notice. The lease to the mining co. reserved to the lessors the right to regulate the manner of removing the minerals, so as to prevent injury to the surface. Upon an action brought in 1875 by adjoining landowners to recover the lands as superfluous within Lands Act, 1845, s. 127:—Held: (1) the lands were not superfluous, the fact that they were required for the railway in 1868 being strong presumptive evidence that they were so required in 1863, & the burden of proof, especially after so great a lapse of time, being upon pltf. to show that they were not; (2) the minerals were not superfluous.

(3) Seem: where land is bought by a railway co. with the mines under it the minerals cannot be claimed as superfluous land apart from the surface.—HOOPER v. BOURNE (1880), 5 App. Cas. 1; 49 L. J. Q. B. 370; 42 L. T. 97; 44 J. P. 327; 28 W. R. 493, II. L.; affg. (1877), 3 Q. B. D. 258, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 2.—FROM USER OF AND OTHER ACTS RELATING TO LAND.

2121. General rule.—(1) The meaning of the phrase "superfluous land" in Lands Act, 1845, s. 127 is land acquired by the promoters of the undertaking but not required for the purposes of the undertaking. The word "required" does not mean demanded but necessary, & when it ceases to be necessary this land becomes superfluous land. It may be so in any one of four ways: if more land has been taken than, on the execution requisite for their purposes.—GLOVER'S TRUSTEES v. CITY OF GLASGOW UNION RY. CO. (1869), 7 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 338; 41 Sc. Jur. 202.—SCOT.

j. Land taken for purpose of future doubling of line.—Land taken compulsorily by a ry. co. for the future doubling of its line cannot be regarded as superfluous within Lands (Scot.) Act, 1845.—BROWN v. NORTH BRITISH RY. (1906), 8 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 534.—SCOT.

Sect. 2.—How land becomes superfluous: Sub-sect. 2.]

of the works, appears to be needed; if the co. has been forced to take it by reason of not being able to obtain a part of any property without taking the rest; if taken for works then deemed to be required for permanent use, but which afterwards are found not to be required, & are therefore abandoned; if taken only for a temporary purpose, when that temporary purpose has been answered. The conversion of it to other purposes than those of the undertaking is evidence of its being superfluous. Though land acquired for the purposes of the undertaking has been actually used by the promoters, if that use is only one of a temporary nature, the land having satisfied that use becomes superfluous land.

(2) Where land cannot be shown to be required for the purposes of the undertaking, it vests absolutely in the adjoining owner under the above sect. & having so become vested in the adjoining owner, it is not affected by the circumstance that a private Act, passed afterwards, though before it is claimed by an adjoining owner, extends the time within which the directors may dispose of the superfluous lands belonging to the co.—GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. v. MAY (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 283; 43 L. J. Q. B. 233; 31 L. T. 137; 39 J. P. 54; 23 W. R. 141, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. MAY v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 26, Ex. Ch.

2122. Land abandoned on abandonment of undertaking.]—Defts. in 1846 obtained an Act of Parliament for the construction of certain branch railways, called the W. & H. branches, in which were the usual compulsory powers for the purchase of land, but they were not to be exercised after the expiration of three years from the passing of the Act, & the undertaking was to be completed within five years. The term limited for the exercise of the compulsory powers was subsequently enlarged until July, 1851. Defts. purchased from pltf. certain portions of his land for the purposes of the W. railway, an undertaking particularly advantageous to pltf., & commenced constructing the line. It was, however, never completed, & in 1850 was entirely abandoned. Subsequently defts. introduced a bill to construct another line, & for that purpose intended to use the lands purchased from pltf. On demurrer to the bill for want of equity:—Held: (1) although a landowner has been compelled to part with his land to a railway co., however beneficial it may be to him that the railway should be made, no obligation is thrown on the co. to complete their undertaking, & no right exists in the landowner to compel them to do so; (2) if the co. should altogether abandon the undertaking, & apply the land taken under the powers of the Act to a different purpose than the making of the railway, the landowner has not any new right, arising from the state of things, which can be enforced in a ct. of equity.

(3) The term "superfluous lands" in ss. 127, 128, of the Act preceded by the expression, "the lands which shall not be required for the purposes thereof," is sufficient to include the case of an undertaking being abandoned.

(4) The landowner's right of pre-emption under s. 128 does not arise before the expiration of ten years, unless the co. by some act of theirs have shown that they are about to sell & dispose of the land.

(5) The word "dispose" in the Act means the transfer of the land to some other person, & not the application of it by the co. to a different purpose.—ASTLEY v. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. CO. (1858), 2 Do G. & J. 453; 27 L. J. Ch. 478; 31 L. T. O. S. 188; 4 Jur. N. S. 567; 6 W. R. 561; 44 E. R. 1065, L. C.

2124. Land taken for one purpose & used for another—Land taken for construction of railway—Used for accommodation works.]—A railway co. brought from pltf. a small piece of land, the whole of which, according to their original plan, would have been covered by the embankment of the railway. Being obliged to provide a communication between severed lands of another landowner, the co. altered their levels so as to narrow the embankment & leave unoccupied a strip of the land purchased from pltf. This strip they turned into a road for the use of the landowner. Pltf. thereupon, before the period named for the sale of superfluous lands had arrived, filed his bill to enforce a right of pre-emption as to the strip:—Held: the land was not superfluous land, for that the making accommodation works which the co. were compellable to make was one of the purposes of their Acts, & pltf. had no title to relief.—BEAUCHAMP (LORD) v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1868), 3 Ch. App. 745; 38 L. J. Ch. 162; 19 L. T. 189; 16 W. R. 1155, L. JJ.

2125. Sale of land—Land advertised as "surplus land."]—(1) Where a co., having purchased land for the purposes of its railway, after using some of the land, sells the rest, calling it in the advertisement & particulars "surplus land" this form of sale must be deemed a declaration that the land sold is "superfluous land" within the meaning of Lands Act, 1845, s. 127.

(2) Qu.: whether Teddington is a "town" within the meaning of s. 128 of the Act. The lands near it, situated close to the railway station, & not continuously built upon, are not lands within a town, nor lands used for building purposes, within the sect.

PART XIV. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

2123i. Land abandoned on abandonment of undertaking—Not within Lands Act, 1845, s. 127.]—Lands were compulsorily taken in 1863 by a ry. co. under their statutory powers. The ry. was to be completed in 1869, but was not finished until 1875, when it was found defective; was never used by the public for traffic, & after 1875 the ry. co. never made any use whatever of it. The public passed over the line as they wished:—Held: the lands had not become superfluous within above sect.—Re DUFFY'S ESTATE, Ex p. EVOY, [1897] 1 I. R. 315; 31 L. L. T. 131.—IR.

k. Land taken for one purpose—Part used for another purpose—Non-user of remainder.]—A mining co. was empowered by private Act to acquire land for connecting their mine with the coast. The act provided that, if the railway ceased to be used for three years continuously, the land should revert to the original owners. Part of the railway had not been used for more than three years, the other part was used by the co. in conjunction with a new line:—Held: the Ry. had ceased to be used for three years continuously within the proviso.—PERPETUAL TRUSTEE CO. v. WILLIAMS (1913), 17 C. L. R. 469; 31 N. S. W. W. N. 5.—AUS.

(3) Lands acquired by a railway co. for the purposes of the railway, but not so employed, & merely capable of being afterwards used for building purposes, are not, on account of such capacity alone, to be treated as building land, or "lands used for building purposes," within the exception contained in s. 128.

(4) Though the directors of a railway co. are not compelled to sell their superfluous land within ten years, yet if within that time they make the attempt to sell, the right of an adjoining owner to claim the benefit of pre-emption at once arises. Such land must under s. 128 be first offered to persons whose lands, or some of them, have been taken in virtue of the co.'s Act, or who are "owners of the land adjoining."

(5) A person may be an "adjoining owner" to superfluous lands within s. 128, although he purchased such adjoining lands from the co. itself.

(6) Where, by agreement, a wall has been built on land dividing the property of an individual from that of the co., & the individual & the co. are, by the same agreement, the joint owners of the land on which the wall is built, that circumstance does not affect the individual, so as to prevent him from being considered an "adjoining" owner.

(7) Where an adjoining owner claims from a railway co., a right of pre-emption of certain lands which the co. is about to sell, such lands never having been his, nor severed from any part of his estate, the ct. will direct an inquiry whether there is any other adjoining owner who is equally entitled with himself to make such claim.

(8) Lands will not be brought within the exception in s. 128 as "used for building purposes" merely by being marked out in plots for, & by being capable of being used for, building purposes.—LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (DIRECTORS, ETC.) v. BLACKMORE (1870), L. R. 4 H. L. 610; 39 L. J. Ch. 713; 23 L. T. 504; 35 J. P. 324; 19 W. R. 305, H. L.; *varying S. C. sub nom. BLACKMORE v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 2126. — Whether conclusive—Ultra vires sale to another company for joint purposes.]—The mere fact of a railway co. purporting to convey away lands acquired by them for the purposes of their undertaking is not conclusive to show that the lands so conveyed are superfluous lands within the meaning of Lands Act, 1845, s. 128.

The M. Ry. Co. having, under their special Act passed in 1872, acquired for the purposes of their undertaking certain lands forming part of a farm belonging to H., purported, acting in excess of their parliamentary powers, to sell & convey the lands to the S. Ry. Co. under a bonâ fide arrangement by which they were to be held & used for the purposes of the undertakings of both cos. Upon an action brought by H. against both cos. to establish his right of pre-emption, under the above sect. in the lands conveyed, the ten years from the time fixed by the M. Co.'s Act for the completion of their works not having yet expired:—Held: (1) the mere fact of the conveyance was not sufficient to show that the lands were superfluous within the meaning of that sect.; (2) as it appeared that, had the lands remained in the hands of the M. Co., they would not have been superfluous for the purposes of that co. within the sect., pltf.'s right of pre-emption had not yet arisen & the conveyance from the M. Co. to the S. Co. must be set aside as ultra vires.—HOBBS v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1882), 20 Ch. D. 418; 51 L. J. Ch. 320; 46 L. T. 270; 30 W. R. 516.

2127i. Land unused & unsold within prescribed period.]—Ground, acquired by a ry. co. under compulsory powers, had not been used by the co. for more than ten years after completion of their works, & had not been sold by them. It could not be utilised by the co. unless they could take adjoining land, which was beyond their statutory powers:—Held: the ground was superfluous within Lands (Scot.) Act, 1845, s. 120.—STEWART v. HIGHLAND RY. CO. (1889), 16 R. (Cl. of Sess.) 580; 26 Sc. L. R.

2137. Negotiations for sale during & after prescribed period—Lease of portion.]—The mere facts that both before & after the expiration of the ten years limited by Lands (Scotland) Act, 1845, s. 120, a railway co. has negotiated for a portion of their land, without however effecting a sale, & has leased another portion, are not conclusive evidence that such portions have become "superfluous" within the statutory meaning of the word.—*MACFIE v. In order to prove this, the auctioneer was called as a witness, who deposed that he had received his instructions for the sale from one of the directors of the co.,

& also from a person who had acted as their solr. on former sales of land:—Held: this was not even prima facie proof that the sale was by the authority of the co., although more than twelve months had elapsed between the sale & the trial.—MOODY v. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. CO. (1861), 1 B. & S. 290; 31 L. J. Q. B. 54; 9 W. R. 780; 121 E. R. 722.

SUB-SECT. 1.—CONDITIONS OF SALE.

See Lands Act, 1845, ss. 127–129.

2141. Sale must be absolute—Covenant for re-purchase—Of land sold—Void.]—A railway co. sold a piece of land which they did not at the time, but probably would eventually, require for their works. The purchaser covenanted with the co. that he, his heirs & assigns, owner & owners for the time being of the land, would at any time thereafter, whenever the land might be required for the works of the co., upon certain notice given, & upon receiving the purchase-money, reconvey to the co. The land was afterwards sold to the defts. with notice of the covenant:—Held: having regard to Railways Act, 1845, s. 127, the conditional sale by the co. was ultra vires.—*LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. PART XIV. SECT. 3.

1. Mode of trial—Reference.] The rule that ry. cos., when acting in good faith, are the best judges of what lands, &c., are required for the ry., does not apply in proceedings by a creditor against the co.; in such case the ct. is the proper authority to determine that point, & may refer the matter for inquiry whether the co. held any lands which were superfluous or not necessary for the use of the co.—ERIE & NIAGARA RY. CO. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1872), 19 Gr. 43.—CAN.

2138i. Burden of proof—On party claiming land as superfluous—Sufficiency of proof.]—A ry. co. under compulsory powers acquired land, most of which they used for the purposes of their undertaking, which was to be completed in 1850. In 1854 they sold to M. the whole unused land except a small portion close to a station. The latter portion was occupied by M. & his successors along with what he had bought until 1877, no rent having been paid for it. The ry. co. in that year claimed possession of the small portion which they required for the purposes of their line:—

Held: (1) the onus of proving the lands to be "superfluous" lay upon defts.; (2) to make the lands superfluous it was not sufficient to prove that at the end of ten years from the time for concluding the undertaking the lands were not actually in use. This was merely the point of time which was to be looked at for determining whether the lands were or were not superfluous.—NORTH BRITISH RY. CO. v. MOON'S TRUSTEES (1879), 6 R. 2150. — Offer for sale within prescribed period.]—(1) Land situate within the limits of a parliamentary borough is not necessarily land situate within a town within the meaning of Lands Act, 1845, s. 128. To come within the sect., as situate within a town, the land must be surrounded or covered by continuous, as distinguished from contiguous, houses.

(2) By “land built upon” in the sect. is meant land which, though not in a town, is covered with continuous buildings codem modo that the scheme of a town is described to be covered with continuous buildings.

(3) By “land used for building purposes” is meant land actually so used, & not land merely suitable for building purposes.

(4) Although the right of pre-emption cannot be claimed in regard to superfluous land which remains in the possession of the co. until the expiration of ten years from the time limited by its Act for the completion of its works, yet, if the co. at any earlier period offer the land for sale to a third party, the right arises at once.

(5) The right is confined to land acquired by a co. under its parliamentary powers; but if the usual notice to treat has been given in exercise of the powers, the right is not lost in consequence of the price being subsequently settled by agreement instead of an award or inquiry before a jury.

(6) The right is not confined to the proprietors from whom the co. purchased, but devolves to future proprietors of the lands from which the purchased lands were severed.—CARINGTON (LORD) v. WYCOMBE RY. CO. (1868), 3 Ch. App. 377; 37 L. J. Ch. 213; 18 L. T. 96; 16 W. R. 494, L. J.

SUB-SECT. 4.—RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PURCHASERS.

stipulation that the purchaser should assume & admit that everything, if anything was necessary, was done by the co. to enable them to sell the land as surplus land, & should not call for or require production of any evidence to that effect; & a further stipulation that if the purchaser should fail to comply with the terms of the agreement the deposit should be forfeited to the vendor. The land was not situate in a town or used for building purposes. In the course of the investigation of the title the purchaser discovered that the prior owners had not waived their right of pre-emption; & as the vendor refused to remedy the defect, the purchaser brought an action claiming a return of the deposit & damages. The vendor then sold the land to one of the prior owners:—Held: the purchaser was bound by the stipulations to admit the title of the co. to sell to the vendor; & as he had refused to abide by that stipulation he had broken the contract, & could not claim a return of his deposit.—*BEST v. 2174. ——— No greater than those of vendors—Right of support to surface of land.]—In 1865 the owner of land demised the minerals under it to deft. for a term of years, & in 1867 such owner conveyed the surface of the land to a railway co. under the compulsory powers of the Lands Act, 1845, which was incorporated with the co.'s special Act, & some years afterwards the co. sold part of such land as superfluous land to persons who ultimately sold it to pltf. The railway co. never purchased the minerals nor made compensation to deft. as such lessee under the powers conferred on them by the Railways Act, 1845, & deft. worked the mines in the usual manner of working in the district &, by so doing, caused a subsidence which damaged some houses erected by pltf. upon the land. In an action against deft. for working the mines without leaving a sufficient support for pltf.'s land:—Held: (1) deft. had not interfered with any right of pltf., who could have no greater right than the railway co. from whom he derived his title; (2) if a railway co. had exercised the option they had under the Railways Act of purchasing land under their compulsory powers without the mines & minerals thereunder, the owner, lessee or occupier of such mines & minerals had a right to work same without regard to whether such working would let down the surface, provided the working was according to the usual way in the district.—*POUNTNEY v. 2176. Liabilities of purchaser—Revival of restrictive covenants against purchaser.]—An inclosure Act passed in 1806 provided that no buildings should at any time thereafter be erected on a certain strip of land. In 1865 a railway co. under their statutory powers acquired a portion of the strip of land for the purposes of their undertaking. A part of the land thus acquired became superfluous land, & the co. in 1868 sold & conveyed the superfluous part to a purchaser who demised it to deft. Deft. in 1885 commenced building on the land:—Held: the land acquired by the co. was freed from the prohibition of building only for the purposes of the co.'s undertaking, &, when part of it was sold as superfluous land, the prohibition of building revived in respect of that part.—*BIRD v. money raised by new shares or mtge. should be applied only for the purposes of the extension Act. A contractor, to whom the co. was indebted in respect of the construction of the original line, obtained judgment against the co., extended certain surplus lands acquired under the powers of the extension Act, & then applied to the ct. for a sale:—Held: the creditor was entitled to an order for sale for that, whatever might be the rights of the different classes of shareholders inter se, the lands were lands of the co., liable to be sold for payment of any judgment debts of the co. —Re OGILVIE (1871), 7 Ch. 2194. Right to compensation—Enforceable by mandamus.]—A mandamus to make compensation for damage done to houses by sewerage works executed by a local board of health in pursuance of the Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), recited that claimant had applied to the local board to make him full compensation, & that they had denied all liability to compensate him, & the writ then commanded the local board to cause compensation to be made out of the general or special district rate. Defts. by their return alleged that they had not denied all liability, & were willing to make compensation when it should be ascertained, that it had not been ascertained, nor had the prosecutor taken any steps towards having it ascertained, nor given any notice of the amount, nor whether it exceeded £20, nor appointed an arbitrator, as by the Act provided. The return having been traversed, the jury found that defts. had denied their liability, but that the prosecutor had made no claim for any certain amount:—Held: a mandamus might issue in the first instance to compel the local board to make compensation, & it was not a condition precedent that claimant should demand a specific sum as compensation, nor inform the local board whether or not it exceeded £20.—R. v. BURSLEM LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH (1860), 1 E. & E. 1088; 29 L. B. Under Metropolitan Paving Act (Michael Angelo Taylor's Act), 1817.

(a) In General.

2252. Power of compulsory acquisition—Limited to altering, widening & extending streets—Does not extend to raising level of street.]—(1) The ct. will look behind the adjudication of the Comrs. of Sewers of the city of London that certain lands are required for the purposes of their intended improvement & will restrain the Comrs. by an interlocutory injunction from acting upon such adjudication, if it appears to have been made under a misapprehension as to their powers.

(2) The owner of property to whom a notice to treat has been given, & who enters into negotiations upon the basis of the notice, is not debarred from afterwards objecting that the Comrs. are acting in excess of their powers, unless he knew, during such negotiations, that the acts of the Comrs. were ultra vires.

(3) Metropolitan Paving Act, 1817, authorises the Comrs. to take compulsorily houses or lands for the purpose of altering, widening, & extending a street, but it does not empower them to do so for the mere purpose of altering the level of an existing street, so as to make it agree with the level of a new street which is being made by the comrs.—LYNCH v. SEWERS COMRS. OF LONDON (1886), 32 Ch. D. 72; 55 L. J. Ch. 409; 54 L. T. 699; 50 J. P. 548, C. A.

houses abutting or fronting upon a public thoroughfare as well as the actual roadway or footways yet the strict & prima facie meaning of the word "street" is confined to the roadway & footways.

(2) In the construction of Holborn Valley Improvement Act, 1864, which gave the Corpn. of London powers to construct a viaduct or raised way over Holborn Valley, & to make certain new streets & to acquire lands for the purposes of the Act, & which by s. 36 enacted that in any case in which the Corpn. might require to take any lands already purchased by the L. Railway Co., & the Co. were unwilling to dispose of same, or required same for the purposes of their railway, it should be referred to arbn. in manner provided; provided always that this provision should not be construed to prevent the Corpn. taking all such lands of the Co. as might be required for the construction of the viaduct or raised way of the line of the new streets authorised by the Act:—Held: the latter provision did not apply to a case where the Corpn. required to take a piece of land already purchased by the Co., but did not require same for the construction of the actual roadway or footways of the viaduct or new streets, & the Corpn. were restrained from taking the piece of land till the matter had been determined by arbn. as provided by the Act.—*LONDON, CHATHAM & DOVER RY. Acts of state—By foreign Governments.]—See Part VIII., Sect. 5, post, & generally, PUBLIC AUTHORITIES & PUBLIC OFFICERS.

Foreign sovereign—Actions by & against.]—See ACTION, Vol. I., pp. 45–50.

1. Foreigners generally — Permanently or temporarily within allegiance of English Crown.]—The English Ct. of Bkpcy. has no jurisdiction to make an adjudication of bkpcy. against a foreigner domiciled & resident abroad, who has never been in England, even though he is a member of an English firm which has traded & contracted debts in England, & against which an execution in respect of a judgment debt above £50 has been levied by seizure & sale of goods of the firm in England. In such a case the ct. ought not to make an order for service out of the jurisdiction of a bkpcy. petition on the foreigner. An act of bkpcy. must be a personal act or default, & it cannot be committed through an agent, nor by a firm as such.

Prima facie an English statute affects only English subjects, or foreigners who come, either permanently or temporarily, within the allegiance of the English Crown.—Re SAWERS, Ex p. BLAIN (1879), 12 Ch. D. 522; 41 L. T. 46; 28 W. R. 334, C. A.

2. As regards extra-territorial jurisdiction.]—COCKNEY v. ANDERSON, No. 340, post.

3. As regards territorial jurisdiction.]—(1) Territorial jurisdiction generally attaches upon all persons so long as they are either permanently or temporarily resident within the territory but it does not follow them when they have withdrawn from the territory. It always exists as to land & may be exercised over movables within the territory &, in questions of status & succession governed by domicile, it may exist as to persons domiciled, or who when living were domiciled, within the territory.

(2) No territorial legislation can give jurisdiction which any foreign ct. ought to recognise against absent foreigners who owe no allegiance or obedience to the power which so legislates.

(3) In all personal actions the cts. of the country in which deft. resides, not the cts. of the country where the cause of action arose, should be resorted to.

b. — — —.]—All legislation is, prima facie, territorial. It binds all subjects of the Crown, but only such subjects of other countries as have brought themselves within the allegiance of the Sovereign. The vessel was accordingly hired by them, & proceeded on her voyage & having taken on board a cargo of tobacco in the Flushing Roads, arrived & was unshipped at Cork without payment of the duties. An information was filed against A. for assisting & being otherwise concerned in unshipping the tobacco, the duties not having been paid; A. was not proved to have taken any part in the transaction further than above stated:—Held: he was not triable on this information in England.—*A.-G. v. For the purpose of enforcing payment the council were empowered to distrain the goods of the owners liable to contribute &, in addition to the remedy by distress, to recover by action the amounts due & payable. Being unable to recover by means of distress the amount of contribution due from an owner of property within the improvement area, the council brought an action in this country to recover the amount:—Held: the action would not lie in this country, because (a) the liability being imposed by the foreign state solely for its own domestic purposes, the action to enforce it was analogous to an action to recover a penalty or a tax; (b) the action was one relating to real property situate abroad.—*SYDNEY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. In this respect it is all one whether the foreign Govt. has been recognised as a government de jure or de facto.

The Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic passed a decree in June, 1918, declaring all mechanical sawmills of a certain capital value &

all woodworking establishments belonging to private or limited cos. to be the property of the Republic. In 1919 agents of the Republic seized pl'ts.' mill or factory in Russia & the stock of manufactured wood therein. In Aug. 1920, agents of the Republic purported to sell a quantity of the stock so seized to defts., who imported it into England. In letters dated in Apr. 1921, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs stated that His Majesty's Govt. recognised the Soviet Govt. as the de facto Govt. of Russia; that a govt. known as the Provisional Govt. came into power in Mar. 1917, & was recognised by His Majesty's Govt., & remained in session until Dec. 13, 1917, & was then dispersed by the Soviet authorities. In an action by pl'ts. for a declaration that they were entitled to the wood above mentioned :—Held : (2) the Govt. of this country had recognised the Soviet Govt. as the de facto Govt. of Russia existing at a date before the decree of June, 1918; (3) the validity of that decree & the sale of the wood to defts. could not be impugned, & defts. were entitled to judgment.—AKSIONAIRNOYE OBSHESTVO A. Part II.—Domicil.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

18. Domicil.—(1) Domicil implies a permanent not a mere temporary home.

(2) Change of domicil can only be effected animo et facto, i.e. intention to change the existing place of residence for a permanent residence in a new place must accompany the act of change. The fact of change may be conclusively evidenced by residence in a new place, but with regard to the intention, residence is an equivocal act.

(3) The domicil of origin is not so readily lost as is an acquired domicil.

(4) In order that a new domicil may be acquired the existing domicil must be abandoned, which abandonment must be evidenced by animus, i.e. intention to abandon the old place of residence & permanently to reside in the new place.

Qu. : whether in the absence of other evidence an intention to abandon a domicil may be inferred from long & continuous residence in some other place.

(5) A new domicil cannot be acquired by residence during infancy.

A domiciled Scotsman went to India where he was engaged in his own business for many years, returning only once to Scotland where he spent one year. He had always expressed his intention of returning finally to settle in Scotland & had written to his mother in Scotland declaring such to be his intention, but he died in India before he could carry out his intention. Two of his children, born in India, died there during infancy :—Held : (6) the domicil of the infant children depended upon the domicil of the father & the father had never lost his original Scottish domicil; (7) Anglo-Indian domicil could only arise in the case of covenanted servants of the East India Co.—JOPP v. WOOD (1865), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 616; 5 New Rep. 422; 34 L. J. Ch. 212; 12 L. T. 41; 11 Jur. N. S. 212; 13 W. R. 481; 46 E. R. 1057, L. J.J.

19. Every one has a domicil.—Every individual at his birth becomes the subject of some particular country by the tie of natural allegiance, which fixes his political status, & becomes subject to the law of the domicil, which determines his civil status. To suppose that for a change of domicil there must be a change of natural allegiance is to confound the political & the civil status & to destroy the distinction between patria & domicilium (LORD WESTBURY). A man may change his domicil as often as he pleases but not his allegiance. Exuere patriam is beyond his power (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).

It is a settled principle that no man shall be without a domicil & to secure this end the law attributes to every individual as soon as he is born the domicil of his father if the child be legitimate & the domicil of his mother if the child be illegitimate. This is called the domicil of origin & is involuntary. It is the creation of law, not of the party. It may be extinguished by act of law, e.g. by sentence of death or exile for life, which puts an end to the status civilis of the criminal, but it cannot be destroyed by the will & act of the party (LORD WESTBURY).

(3) Domicil of choice is the creation of the party. When a domicil of choice is acquired the domicil of origin is in abeyance, but is not absolutely extinguished or obliterated. When a domicil of choice is abandoned, the domicil of origin revives, a special intention to revert to it being unnecessary.

Story says that the moment a foreign domicil is abandoned, the native domicil is re-acquired. The word re-acquired is an inaccurate expression. The meaning is that the abandonment of an acquired domicil ipso facto restores the domicil of origin (LORD CHELMSFORD).

If after having acquired a domicil of choice a man abandons it & travels in search of another domicile of choice, the domicile of origin comes instantly into action, & continues until a second domicile of choice has been acquired.

Sect. 1.—In

A natural-born Englishman may domicile himself in Holland, but if he breaks up his establishment there & quits Holland, declaring that he will never return, it is absurd to suppose that his Dutch domicile clings to him until he has set up his tabernacle elsewhere (LORD WESTBURY).

(4) The status of the child, with respect to its capacity to be legitimated by the subsequent marriage of its parents, depends wholly on the status of the putative father, not on that of the mother (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).

According to English law, where at the time of a bastard's birth the father has his domicile in England, no subsequent change of domicile can render practicable the bastard's legitimation.—

20. Party can have only one domicile—For purposes of succession.]—The succession to the personal estate of an intestate is regulated by the law of that place, which was his domicile at the time of his death. For that purpose there can be but one domicile, & the lex loci rei sitæ does not prevail. The mere place of birth or death does not constitute the domicile. The domicile of origin, which arises from birth & connections, remains, until clearly abandoned & another taken. In the case of Lord Somerville, of two acknowledged domicils, the family seat in Scotland, & a leasehold house in London, upon the circumstances the former, which was the original domicile, prevailed.—SOMERVILLE v. SOMERVILLE (LORD) (1801), 5 Ves. 750; 31 E. R. 839.

21. ———.]—(1) A man cannot have two domicils, at least with reference to the succession to his personal estate. Legitimate children acquire by birth the domicile of their father. An infant cannot change his domicile by his own act. A new domicile cannot be acquired except by intention & act, but, being in itinere to the intended domicile, is a sufficient act for this purpose; but the strongest intention of abandoning a domicile & actual abandonment of residence will not deprive a man of that domicile, unless he has acquired another.

(2) An engagement to serve & actual service in the Indian Army, under a commission from the East India Co. when the duties of such an appointment necessarily required residence in India for an indefinite period, conferred upon the officer an Anglo-Indian domicile; for the law, in such a case, presumed an intention consistent with his duty & held his residence to be animo et facto in India, even if he had property in the country which was his domicile of origin. An Anglo-Indian was not, for all purposes, an English domicile.

(3) A domiciled Scotsman, having ancestral property but no house in his native country, by accepting a commission & serving in the Indian Army, abandoned his domicile of origin & acquired an Anglo-Indian domicile. He afterwards attained the rank of general in the Indian Army & was made colonel of a regiment, & then left India with the intention of not returning thither, but came to Great Britain, where he lived part of the year in a house which he had built on his estate in Scotland, & part in a hired house in London, under circumstances which, if he had been a single man, would have given him again a Scottish domicile; but his wife & establishment of servants resided constantly at the house in London:—Held: this fact counterbalanced the effect of the other circumstances & proved that his intention was permanently to reside in England, & he must be considered to have abandoned his acquired domicile in India & acquired, by choice, a new one in England.—FORBES v. FORBES (1854), Kay, 341; 2 Eq. Rep. 178; 23 L. J. Ch. 724; 18 Jur. 642; 2 W. R. 253; 69 E. R. 145.

22. ———.]—(1) A will made in execution of a power is not an exception to the general rule, which requires wills to be duly executed in conformity with the law of domicile.

A man can have only one domicile for the purpose of succession. The domicile of origin is to prevail until he has not only acquired another, but has manifested & carried into effect an intention of abandoning his former domicile & taking another as his sole domicile.

(2) M. C. died near C. in France, on Jan. 3, 1858, having on Nov. 4, 1857, made & duly executed her will.

Testatrix, from 1844 till her death, had no home in England, & always passed the winter abroad, returning to England for the summer, but sometimes remained abroad throughout the year. From 1844 to 1853 she had no residence abroad which could be considered as fixed or permanent. In 1855 she encouraged her son to purchase a property at C. & assisted him to do so by a loan of £2,000. The property was not purchased by her, but by her son, & was conveyed to him. She lent him £2,000 to help him to pay for it, which was to be repaid by him to her exors., & he gave her a promissory note for it. She had expressed to L., her son-in-law, her desire to be buried in England, & in 1855 she much wished to pass the winter in England but could not on account of her health. In 1856, at C., in a casual conversation respecting the modes of disposing of dead bodies which had been adopted by different nations, one of the witnesses expressed an opinion in favour of burning, upon which she said, "Don't have me burnt; I should prefer lying on the hill" at C. where the cemetery was situate. The following winter she arranged with her son for the occupation of the whole of the chateau, & several friends spent the winter with her there. Having complained that the accommodation was not sufficient, she arranged for the construction of a new house on her son's property. Subsequently she wrote to her solr. in London, in answer to his inquiry whether she meant to reside permanently abroad. "My visits to England will probably be annual, but I suppose I must be considered as living in France, spending seven or eight months yearly in that country." She subsequently came to England & made a will there for the purpose of preventing the distribution of her property according to French law, after she had been told that her will must be made according to the law of her domicile. In the will she described herself of Croydon, late of Camden Town, never mentioning France:—Held: it was impossible to say that testatrix ever animo et facto abandoned her English domicile & acquired another in France.

(3) When issue is joined on the question of domicile the burden of proof is on the party setting up the abandonment of the domicile of origin.—CROOKENDEN v. FULLER (1859), Sea. & Sm. 3; 1 Sw. & Tr. 441; 29 L. J. P. & M. 1; 1 L. T. 70; 5 Jur. N. S. 1222; 8 W. R. 49; 164 E. R. 804.

23. Distinguished from residence.—A person may be said to have more than one residence. If he have houses in different places, at each of which he keeps an establishment, each may be called his residence, though he may not go there for years; but the meaning of the word residence is different from domicile, for an infant has the domicile of his parents until he attains his full age & does some act to acquire a new one, & thus his domicile may be in a country in which he has never personally been, whereas residence implies personal presence at some time or other.

A proviso in a will, requiring the devisee for life of a mansion-house & estates to reside there for six months in every year & imposing a penalty for breach of such condition, & if he should neglect to observe it for five years, devising the estate to others, rendered it necessary for the devisee to be personally present in the house 168 days in each year in order to escape the penalty or forfeiture:—Held: it would be sufficient if, keeping up an establishment at the house, he were merely to visit it each day, & it was not necessary for him to spend a night there.—WALCOT v. BOTFIELD (1854), Kay, 534; 2 Eq. Rep. 758; 23 L. T. O. S. 127; 18 Jur. 570; 2 W. R. 393; 69 E. R. 226.

24. —.]—The difference in the construction arises from a confusion between domicile & residence. Domicile once acquired can only be lost by clear evidence. In 1773 he went to sea, & till 1805 traded in ships chartered by the East India Co. but was not properly in their service. He spent the intervals of trading chiefly in London, living in lodgings, but occasionally visiting Scotland. Having left the service in 1805, he still resided in London, partly for pleasure & trying to get other employment. In 1812 he bought a farm in Scotland & hired a residence there near the Scottish family entailed estate & he became a justice of the peace & a country gentleman there, his sister acting as manager of his house. He kept this house till 1818 all the while spending about half the year in London in lodgings & cohabiting with women in a clandestine manner. In 1812 he met with Miss C. in London & cohabited with her in lodgings there till 1815, when he bought a house for her in which they lived. In 1820, having at that time given up the Scottish farm & house & having no residence except that in which he & C. cohabited in London, they went to Scotland for a few days & were married, returning & living in London afterwards. R. did not succeed to the Scottish estate till 1821, & his wife after visiting it part of each year & becoming averse to live there, he let it in 1834 & lived in London ever afterwards till his death in 1844:—Held: at the marriage in 1820 R. had never lost his Scottish domicile of origin, & children born before the marriage were legitimated by the law of Scotland.

She resided there, contributing towards the expenses of housekeeping, until 1863, in which year she died. Her property consisted of money invested in English securities, but she also possessed a valuable library, which she caused to be transported to B. She occasionally came over to England with her married sister to visit her friends & while in England in May, 1854, she made her will, describing herself as now on a visit to my sister C., bequeathing her property to trustees to pay the annual income to her sister for life for her separate use, without power of anticipation & with a power of appointment to her sister by deed or will. Female deft., as sole executrix, proved the will in the Probate Ct. Testatrix told her sister that if she survived her she should continue to live in Germany & that nothing would induce her to return to England, except on an occasional visit. She also named the churchyard where she wished to be buried, where she was afterwards buried:—Held: (1) her acts & declarations did not show a sufficient intention to change her domicile, & assuming she intended to give up her English domicile, until she acquired a new domicile, her English domicile continued, & the Crown was entitled to legacy duty; (2) Succession Duty Act, 1853 (c. 51), applies to all persons wherever domiciled.

In 1846 testator came to England, entered himself at C. College, Cambridge, & in 1850 took a degree. He was soon afterwards ordained. He returned to America & between 1850 & 1854 was professor of mathematics at colleges in Virginia, Pennsylvania & Ohio. In 1855 he returned to England, resided for some time in college at Cambridge & took occasional clerical duty in Cumberland & other places, including Rouen. His most permanent engagement was at a small parish near Cambridge, where he served the church, residing during the week at his college. Between 1860 & 1865 he visited America, & in a letter written from New Brunswick in July, 1864, he expressed his intention of settling himself among his friends in the United States. This intention was not carried out in consequence of the war & his subsequent illness. He died in 1869 in England. His property was invested in American securities & the exors. of his will were citizens of the United States of America:—Held: if testator ever acquired a New Brunswick domicile he had abandoned it, & if he did not subsequently acquire an English domicile he was domiciled in Scotland, his domicile of origin having reverted.—THOMPSON v. In 1875 the husband & wife returned to the Isle of Man, where the husband carried on business till 1878, when he became insolvent & executed a deed of assignment of all his property, including his wife's interest in the legacy, for the benefit of his creditors. In 1880 the parties returned to England, where they resided till 1882, when the husband went to Mexico to seek employment. The doctrine of a wife's equity to a settlement is unknown to Manx law:—Held: the Manx domicile of the husband, which had been lost by the twenty years' residence in England, reverted on his return to the Isle of Man & nothing happened afterwards to re-establish the English domicile, & as the domicile was therefore Manx the wife's equity to a settlement could not be asserted.—Re MARSLAND (1886), 55 L. SECT. 3.—CHANGE OF DOMICIL.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

A. Domicil of Origin.

50. Intention & act necessary.]—(1) The purchase of a house to reside in is a strong point in the question of domicile. The circumstances connected with the purchase show an intention of permanent abode there.

(2) Occasional or even annual visits to a place of former domicile are not sufficient per se to retain that domicile.

(3) Intention alone is not sufficient to change a domicile.

(4) Stronger facts are required to change a domicile of origin than an acquired domicile.

(5) An intention to abandon an acquired domicile, which is not a mere temporary residence, upon a certain contingency happening, does not destroy that domicile.

(6) A. was born in Ireland, where he inherited a considerable landed estate, which belonged to him till his death. At nineteen he was sent to France to be educated & there formed an attachment to L., who, during the French Revolution, saved his life & procured his escape to England. For about forty years afterwards he resided in England, in a house which he occupied, until he advertised in the French papers for L., of whom he had lost sight. On discovering her, he sold off all his furniture & broke up his English establishment & went to France & lived for thirteen years with L., in a house which they bought jointly, till his death which took place there. During all this time he never returned to Ireland & only visited England periodically for purposes of business; but he used to say, if L. died, he would return & live in England. Almost all his property was money in the English funds:—Held: his domicile was France.—ANDERSON v. LANEUVILLE (1854), 9 Moo. P. C. C. 325; 2 Ecc. & Ad. 41; 24 L. T. O. S. 281; 14 E. R. 320, P. 51. ———.]—(1) The presumption of law is against the intention to abandon the domicile of origin.

(2) Length of residence in a foreign country per se, according to time & circumstances, raises a presumption of intention to abandon the domicile of origin, & to acquire a new domicile, but such presumption may be rebutted by facts, showing that there was no such intention. A change of domicile is not to be inferred from the fact of a lengthened residence in a foreign country. To constitute a change of domicile it must be animo et facto.

the former domicile & acquire another. Long-continued residence is strong evidence of intent to change the domicile, but alone & unaccompanied by the intent will not effect the change. The question is, in all cases, a question of fact to be determined by the par-

H., a domiciled Englishman in the military service of the East India Co., came to England from India in the year 1829, upon furlough. By the rules of the service, H. was liable at any time to be recalled to India on active service. In the year 1838, he acquired the brevet rank of Major-General in Her Majesty's army. While on furlough & in the year 1832, he went to France, where he resided with his wife & daughter & died there in 1855. He occupied lodgings during that time in Paris. He also purchased a burial-place for his wife, who died & was buried there & purposed to be buried there himself. His residence in Paris was not continuous, as he frequently came to England & Scotland upon visits, but he had no permanent abode in either of those countries, nor did he give up his lodgings in Paris during these visits. All his property, except the furniture of the lodgings in Paris, was in England:—Held: (3) it was not competent to H. to acquire a domicile in a foreign state, as such domicile was incompatible with the obligations & duty of an officer in the military service of the Queen & the East India Co.; (4) the presumption of law arising from his profession & status was against any intention by H. to abandon his original domicile & acquire a new domicile in a foreign state, as it would be inconsistent to presume an intention contrary to his duty as an officer in the military service of Her Majesty & the East India Co.; (5) England being the domicile of origin of H., the onus probandi was upon the party who alleged H. had abandoned it & had acquired another domicile, to establish that proposition; (6) the presumption raised by H.'s residence in France, of his intention to acquire a French domicile, was rebutted by the facts proved in evidence.—HODGSON v. DE BEAUCHESNE (1858), 12 Moo. P. C. C. 285; 33 L. T. O. S. 36; 7 W. R. 397; 14 E. R. 920, P. C.

52. ———.]—In order to lose a domicile of origin & to acquire a new domicile, a man must intend quatenus in illo exuere patriam. It is not enough for him to take a house in the new country, even with the probability & the belief that he may remain there all the days of his life. Change of residence alone, however long continued, does not effect a change of domicile as regulating the testamentary acts of the individual. There must be an intention to change the domicile.

C., born in Scotland, went to India & acquired an Anglo-Indian domicile. On his return to Europe he settled in Scotland, at his native place, occupying the family estate. After some years he left Scotland, where, however, he still kept up his house & went to France, chiefly for the benefit of his health & for special reasons & rented an unfurnished house there till he died, in France:—Held: Scottish domicile had been re-acquired & had not been changed by the residence in France.

51 ii. ———.]—The ct. does not lightly presume in favour of a change of domicile of origin; but, where the evidence satisfies a careful mind that there has been not merely a change of residence into the new country but also an intention of establishing a permanent home there, the ct. will find that a domicile of choice has been acquired.—CLEAR v. CLEAR (1913), 4 C. P. D. 835.—S. AF.

52 i. ———.]—Must not be taken

A mere change of residence, however long continued, does not effect a change of domicile in a testamentary sense, unless there is also an intention to change the domicile, or throw off his native country; e.g. if an Englishman go to France he must not only reside in France, but intend to become a Frenchman instead of an Englishman, before his domicile will be held changed.—*MOORHOUSE v. 54. ———.]—How proved.—(1) For many purposes a domicile of origin requires more to change it than a domicile of acquisition, & in order to prove that the domicile of an adult of sound mind has been changed an intention on his part must be shown. It might be convenient to insist as evidence of the requisite intention on the proof of a desire to change the civil status of the party, as that would leave the question to be governed by the domicile of origin, but such although the stricter rule is not that of the law of England. All which that law requires is proof of an intention to settle in a new country as a permanent home. If that is proved certain legal consequences ensue, whether intended or not, & even although perhaps the exact contrary of those consequences may have been intended. The evidence necessary to support the intention must be either express, or such as to show that if the question had been formally submitted to the party whose domicile is in dispute he would have declared his wish in favour of a change, i.e. such an intention must be proved to have actually existed in the mind of the party, or it must appear that it was reasonably certain it would have existed, if the question had arisen in a form requiring a deliberate & solemn determination.

The residuary legatee under the English will filed a cross bill, to establish an English domicile & for the administration of the estate accordingly:—Held: the questions raised by the widow were well raised, & could be disposed of by this ct.

57. ———.]—(1) That place is properly the domicile of a person in which he has voluntarily fixed the habitation of himself & his family, not for a mere special & temporary purpose, but with a present intention of making it his permanent home, unless & until something which is unexpected or uncertain shall occur to induce him to adopt some other permanent home.

(2) To constitute an acquired domicile two things must concur, residence & the intention of making it the home of the party.

(3) Slighter evidence is required to warrant the conclusion that a man intends to abandon an acquired domicile, & to resume his domicile of origin, than is necessary to justify the conclusion that he means to abandon his domicile of origin & to acquire a new one.

(4) It requires stronger & more conclusive evidence to justify the ct. in deciding that a man has acquired a new domicile in a foreign country than in one where he is not a foreigner.

A person was born in Scotland, resided many years in India, returned to Scotland & lived in his paternal house for six years; then resided in France for six years, & died at Boulogne, on his return from a journey to Scotland, where he had been for some weeks. He was said to have preferred France & to have been annoyed by his neighbours in Scotland. He had apartments at Paris & furnished them handsomely. 66. Residence in another country for two years for temporary purpose.]—A Scotsman who had acquired a domicile of choice in England, went to reside for two years in France & then returned to England, where he died. By an unsigned testamentary instrument in the Scottish form, & containing several technical words of Scottish law, which had been admitted to probate in England, he purported to appoint the residue of his personal estate to his natural daughter, & failing her & her issue, the life-rent of the residue to belong to & be enjoyed by her husband, if she should have left a husband surviving her, & failing his daughter & her issue & on the decease of her husband, either before or after his daughter, he appointed his brother for his life-rent use, & his lawful children, or their issue in fee or remainder, his residuary legatees. The daughter never married:—Held: the domicile of testator being English & there being no indication that testator intended the will to be construed according to Scottish law, the will was to be construed as an English will, & upon the true construction the personal representative of the daughter was absolutely entitled to the residue.—BRADFORD v. YOUNG (1885), 29 Ch. D. 617; 53 L. T. 407; 33 W. R. 860, C. A.

Therefore, where a testator left England, & took up his residence at Hamburg, & the facts showed that he intended to live there permanently, & he did live & die there:—Held: his domicile was there, notwithstanding that in a will made during a visit to England, testator said that although he intended to return to Hamburg, he did not mean by such declaration of intention to renounce his domicile of origin as an Englishman.—Re STEER (1858), 3 H. & N. 594; 28 L. 67 i. General rule—Cannot override acts.]—M. was born in L. in 1827 of English parents. In 1852 he went to U.S.A. as agent for his father's business in L., but visited England every year. In 1858 he married an American. He purchased a house & land in U.S.A., & he also bought a fishing in C., where he went every year. He refused to become a naturalised citizen of U.S., & frequently expressed the intention of returning to England as soon as he had made his fortune. His wife died in L. in 1884. In 1888 he retired from business, & sold most of his property in U.S.A.; & in 1891, married another American in U.S.A. In 1892 he bought a property in England:—Held: M.'s domicile was American.—DAVIS v. ADAIR, [1895] 1 I. R. 379.—IR.

69 i. To renounce domicile.]—K. carried on business in St. J. as a brewer, up to 1893, when he sold the brewery to his sons, & conveyed his home & furniture to his adult children, in trust for them all. He then went to N.Y., where he carried on a business, having offices for such business & living at a hotel. He avowed his bonâ fide intention of making it his home permanently, or at least for an indefinite time, & his determination not to return to St. J. to reside. He spent about four months in each of four years at St. J., visiting his children & taking recreation:—Held: he had acquired a new domicile, & that in St. J. had been abandoned.—*JONES v. 69. To renounce domicile—Death abroad.]—An Englishwoman resided uninterruptedly in France for a period of fifteen years, without any business or occupation in that country; renting apartments upon lease, and making declarations never to return to England; providing, moreover, a vault in the cemetery of Père la Chaise in Paris, where she expressed her wish to be buried. In 1842, she made a will in Paris in the English form, executed according to the Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), but not in accordance with the requirements of the French law. By this will she bequeathed personal property, the bulk of which was in the English funds, to parties resident in England. The deceased at the time of making the will & at her death was not naturalised in France, nor had she obtained any authorisation as required by the 13th Art. of the Code Napoleon.

Held: (1) by the jus gentium deceased was de facto domiciled in France, & the authorisation of the French Government was not necessary in order to give the right of testacy.

Between 1838 & 1850, he made very frequent visits to S., rented premises in Glasgow, where he carried on business through an agent, & purchased an estate in Argyshire, on which he built a mansion-house. This investment he spoke of as made to give employment to a nephew whom he made his heir. He had expressed an intention of "dying in harness" & none of returning permanently to S., & died at T. in 1850:—Held: his domicile was in Trinidad.—LORD ADVOCATE v. LAMANT (1857), 19 Dunl. 70. ———.]—A will must be executed according to the law of the country where testator was domiciled at the time of his death.

The grant of probate not appealed against, conclusively established that it was so executed.

A. was born in Scotland; when a young man he went to the East Indies, where he remained above 20 years in the Co.'s service: he then returned to Scotland & lived in Edinburgh, where he put his name on the books of the municipality, married, took a house, entered into business as a partner in a banking-house, & became a member of various societies there established. At the end of a few years he left Edinburgh in anger, the banking business had come to an end, & he took off his name from the books of the municipality & of the various societies, and declared his intention never to return to "Auld Reekie": he lived in London, first in lodgings, & then in houses hired for different periods, lectured on Oriental literature, & endeavoured thereby to increase the sale of some books which he had written on the Hindustani language. At the end of some years he went to Paris to avoid some annoyances in London, but never made any such declarations with respect to London that he had made with respect to Edinburgh, & he left his works in London, & likewise some ornamental furniture which he desired a friend to keep for him till his return. He died in Paris, having just before made a will in English form, as "of Edinburgh," "now residing in . . . Paris":—Held: he had lost his Scottish, & obtained an English domicil.—WHICKER v. HUME (1858), 7 H. L. Cas. 124; 28 L. J. Ch. 396; 31 L. T. O. S. 319; 22 J. P. 591; 4 Jur. N. S. 933; 6 W. R. 813; 11 E. R. 50, H. L.

71. ——— Death in England—After return in special circumstances—Statements that except for such special circumstances party would never have returned.]—Testator was born in England, went to the United States in 1858, & between that time & 1861 he paid four visits to England. On the last visit in 1861, he was accompanied by an American lady whom he had just married in the United States of America, & whom he introduced as his wife. He carried on business in the United States, but had no private residence there, living himself in hotels, whilst his wife lived with her mother. In 1870 his wife obtained in New York a decree of dissolution of marriage. Testator then returned to this country, & took apartments in London, & in 1875 he married an English lady, & took a private house. On more than one occasion he informed his second wife's father that if he had not been divorced from his first wife, he would never have returned to England. In 1881, testator died, having left his property to his second wife for life. She died in 1889, & a question arose as to the persons entitled to a portion of the testator's residuary personality which was not disposed of by his will. The first wife claimed that her right to the property undisposed of was not affected by the dissolution of her marriage by the New York decree, as testator's domicil was at the date of the decree not American, but English.

Held: at the date of the decree of dissolution of marriage testator's domicil was in the United States, & the decree must be treated as binding here. The first wife had no title, & the legal representatives of the second wife were entitled to the widow's share of testator's undisposed of property.—Re ESCHMANN (DECEASED) (1893), 9 T. L. R. 426.

72. To retain domicil—In England—Memorandum accompanying will.]—A. was born & educated in England, & for a time held a commission in her Majesty's army. In 1835 he sold out, married an English woman, & went to reside abroad. He travelled about to different places, but from the year 1846 until his death, in March, he resided either at Boulogne, or at St. Germain en Laye, in France. He periodically visited his brother in England, & sent his eldest son to be educated in this country. In 1846 he made his will in the English form, but in 1848 he executed a copy of it according to the law of France, & at the same time wrote a memorandum, in which he stated that he did so by reason of some doubts which had lately arisen as to the validity of wills made in the English form by persons residing & dying abroad, & that he had no intention to reside permanently away from England. All the deceased's property was in England, except some furniture in his house at St. Germain:—Held: deceased had not lost his domicil of origin, & his will made in the English form was entitled to probate.—In the Goods of WEST (1860), 6 Jur. N. S. 831.

73. ——— Declaration on coming of age.]—In a petition by the wife for divorce, on the ground of the husband's adultery & desertion, it appeared that both husband & wife were born in France, of parents born in England but resident in France. The marriage took place in England, but the husband & wife subsequently resided in France. The resp., on coming of age, made a declaration of his intention to retain his English nationality, & it also appeared that both he & his father contemplated returning to England when they had made sufficient money to maintain them. The resp., after deserting his wife, led an unsettled life in New Zealand & the Australian Colonies:—Held: both parties had an English domicil at the commencement of the proceedings, & the ct., therefore, had power to entertain the petition & to dissolve the marriage.—GOULDER v. GOULDER, [1892] P. 240; 61 L. J. P. 117; 8 T. L. R. 572.

voyage received the first intelligence of this event. She at once stood for the nearest port in U.S., & was captured by an English vessel. He put in an affidavit that upon his receiving information of war, he had totally abandoned his intention of removing to France, & designed to return to his domicil in U.S. In a cause for condemnation:—Held: he had not changed his U.S. domicil.—THE TROIS FRÈRES (1803), Stewart, 1.—CAN.

75. Oral declarations.]—In 1858 M. left Canada, which was his domicile of origin, sold his house & burial-ground there, & came to Paris to educate his children. He lived in Paris ten years, but went over several times to Montreal, & amongst other things made his will there, describing himself as of Montreal. In 1868 he came to England & took a lease of a house in London. His daughter married & settled in London, & he purchased for his son a share in a business in London. M. died in 1871:—Held: M. had acquired & shown an intention to retain an English domicile.—STEVENSON v. MASSON (1873), L. R. 17 Eq. 78; 43 L. J. Ch. 134; 29 L. T. 666; 22 W. R. 150.

76. — In Ireland—Entry in diary.]—The distribution of the estate of an intestate depended upon her domicile at the date of her death. A. was born in Ireland & resided in England or travelled abroad until she was forty-seven, then in 1865 went abroad & never returned. She bought some land near Cannes in 1869 with a view to build a house, but never did build upon it. There were indications of an intention to return; for instance, in 1885 the intestate took a house at St. Leonard's for three years, but never occupied it:—Held: A. had not abandoned her domicile of origin.—Re WILLS-SANDFORD, WILLS-SANDFORD v. WILLS-SANDFORD (1897), 41 Sol. Jo. 366.

78. — Oral declarations—Intention to return "on making fortune."]—Testator was a Frenchman but had lived twenty-seven years in England, during the greater part of which time he was a partner in an English house of business, paying occasional visits to France. He married successively in English churches, two wives, who were Englishwomen & Protestants, though himself a Roman Catholic, & his children were brought up in England as Protestants. He made his will in the English form & left his property in a manner inconsistent with French law. Upon an action to establish a French domicile, numerous witnesses deposed that he had made various parol declarations that he intended to return to France when he made his fortune. It was also proved that he always refused to be naturalised in England & would not take a lease of more than 3 years of his house.

Held: the acts of testator manifested an intention to acquire an English domicile; & his declarations of intention to return to France when he had made his fortune were not sufficient to rebut the conclusion to be derived from the facts of his life, especially of his English marriages.—DOUCET v. GEOGHEGAN (1878), 9 Ch. D. 441; 26 W. R. 825, C. A.

79. To acquire new domicile.]—Petitioner met her husband in Brussels, & relying on his promise that he would make his permanent home in England, she consented to marry him, & they were married in 1909 at Barcelona, both at the British Consulate & the Chilean Consulate. In March, 1910, they came to England, & the whole of their married life was spent here. There were separations owing to resp.'s conduct, & he took the children to Chile, but returned in 1915, the children following with a nurse. He then told her that he never settled down in Chile, & that he never intended to go to Chile again, & it was his absolute intention always to live in England. He also repeatedly told her, that he wished his son to be brought up as an Englishman & educated at an English public school:—Held: resp. had acquired an English domicile of choice.—WADDINGTON v. WADDINGTON (1920), 36 T. L. R. 359.

80. Whether conclusive.]—The personal property of an intestate, wherever situated, must be distributed by the law of the country, where his domicile was; which is prima facie the place of his residence; but that may be rebutted, & supported by circumstances.

The question of domicile prima facie is much more a question of fact than of law. The actual place, where he is, is prima facie to a great many given purposes his domicile. You encounter that, if you show it is either constrained, or from the necessity of his affairs, or transitory; that he is a sojourner; & you take from it all character of permanency. If on the contrary you show, that the place of his residence is the seat of his fortune; if the place of his birth, upon which I lay the least stress; but if the place of his education, where he acquired all his early habits, friends, & connexions, & all the links, that attach him to society, are found there; if you add to that, that he had no other fixed residence upon an establishment of his own, you answer the question; which would be, where does he reside? In London. Is that his domicile? It is; unless you show that is not the place where he would be, if there was no particular circumstance to determine his position in some other place at that period (LORD LOUGHBOROUGH, C.).—BEMPE v. JOHNSTONE (1796), 3 Ves. 198; 30 E. R. 967, L. C.

his wife going with him, to endeavour to get his father to assist him with money. He left his furniture stored & insured, & his yearlings undisposed of, expressing his intention of returning to N.Z. His wife left him in 1895, & returned to N.Z. in 1896. A. did not return to N.Z., but lived with his father in E. He had not entered into business there:—Held: there was no evidence of an intention on A.'s part to abandon his N.Z. domicile.—MASON v. MASON (1899), 18 N. Z. L. R. 700.—N.Z.

intention to abandon his original domicile, and to adopt the status, etc.

Testator, whose domicile of origin was in England, had his chief residence or home in Scotland for thirty years prior to his death. During this time he retained his interests in England as partner in a bank, & proprietor of landed estates, & continued his tenancy of houses near Manchester and in London. He left large personal estate & a will in English form, made shortly before his death, in which he was designated as of Manchester. He had satisfied himself by enquiry of his lawyer that he was still an Englishman & also made wills in English & Scottish form. Apart from making his home in Scotland there was nothing in his conduct to suggest any intention of abandoning his English domicile:—Held: that he had not lost his English domicile.—HUNTLY (MARCHIONESS) v. The onus is on those who wish to establish a foreign domicile.

A residence adopted for a special and temporary purpose, and for a time which, though not definitely fixed, is not likely to be indefinitely prolonged, does not of itself create a domicile, though possibly a domicile may emanate from such a residence if protracted for a considerable time (WILDE, B.).—A.-G. v. 89. ——— Residence originally temporary.]—E., a Scotsman by birth, lived for the last twenty-four years of his life in Jersey, taking occasional short excursions to Scotland. He caused his children who had died & been buried in France to be disinterred & buried in Jersey, & he contemplated burial in the same vault himself. Shortly before his death, when preparing a codicil to his will, his solr. advised him that the codicil would not be valid if he were domiciled in England, but would be if he were domiciled in Jersey, at the same time explaining that a man's domicile was the place which he had made his home. E. said nothing, but executed the codicil:—Held: these facts (particularly the length of residence) established E.'s domicile at his death to be in Jersey.

Domicile is distinct from naturalisation & allegiance, & in order to effect a change it is not necessary that a man should do all in his power to divest himself of his original nationality, it being sufficient that there be a change of residence of a permanent character voluntarily assumed. Residence originally temporary, & intended for a limited period, may afterwards become general & unlimited, & in such a case as soon as the change of purpose, or animus manendi, can be inferred, the fact of domicile is established.—HALDANE v. 97. Naval service—Previous foreign service.]—A. left Scotland in 1741, at the age of twelve, with a view to enter into the navy. From that time to his death he was in Scotland only four times : 1st, as captain of a frigate ; 2ndly, to introduce his wife to his friends, on which occasion he stayed about a year ; 3rdly, upon a visit ; 4thly, when, being appointed to a command upon the Halifax station, he went in the mail coach to Scotland, & died there, in 1789. He married in Holland, & had a sort of establishment there. He commanded the Russian navy for about a year, & was afterwards in the Dutch service. He had no fixed residence, in England, till 1776, when he took a house at Gosport, where he lived as his home, when on shore. That was the only residence he had in the British dominions. Whenever he went on service, he left his wife & family there ; & he always returned to that place. His third wife was a native of Gosport. In his will he spoke of his dwelling-house at Gosport :—Held : his original domicile having been abandoned, when he afterwards entered into the service of this country he became domiciled here, as a Russian or Dutchman would on entering into our service.—OMMANEY

100. Military service—In India—Distinguished from service in East India Company.]—(1) The law of the domicile of a testator or intestate decides whether his personal property is liable to legacy duty.

A British-born subject, an officer on service in her Majesty's army in India, died there intestate, leaving all his property situate in that country with the exception of a small sum of money due to him from the War Office in England. His widow took out letters of administration in India, & after paying the debts, etc., invested the rest of the estate in India, in her own name, for her own benefit & that of the next of kin. She afterwards took out letters of administration in England, for the purpose of obtaining the debt due from the War Office :—Held : as deceased was on duty in India in her Majesty's service, he did not acquire a domicile in that country, & the whole of his property, though chiefly situate abroad, was liable to legacy duty.

101. — Officer on half pay.]—Deceased died on or about the 16th June, 1848. At the time of his death he was residing in the island of Mauritius, & was a captain in her Majesty's service unattached, & as such in the receipt of half-pay. He left a testamentary paper all in his own handwriting & duly signed, which had, according to the practice & custom prevailing in the Mauritius, been deposited & registered in the office of a notary public at Port St. Louis, & the estate of deceased had been administered there according to his testamentary directions. This will, however, was attested but by one witness. There was an arrear of half-pay due to the deceased, which constituted the only property he possessed at his death in this country. To enable the exors. to receive this, probate of the will was sought. There being but one attesting witness, it would not be valid by the English law ; it was therefore contended that deceased was at his death domiciled in the island of Mauritius, by the law of which, as regulating testamentary documents, one witness would have been sufficient :—Held : deceased was not domiciled

104. — Foreign domicil of choice.]—(1) A wife's domicil is that of her husband, & her remedy for matrimonial wrongs must, as a general rule, be sought in the cts. of that domicil. It is not inconsistent with this principle that she may be allowed in some cases to obtain relief in the country in which she is resident though not domiciled.

A., a native of Barbadoes, was an officer in the English army. His son, B., was born in England. A. retired from the army, & went with his wife & children to Australia, where he resided till his death. B. lived with A. till the death of the latter, & remained in Australia for ten years longer, where he married C. He came with C. & his children to England, where he resided without establishing himself in a permanent home, & afterwards left England. After his departure, C. commenced a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, & B. appeared under protest:—Held: (2) A. having acquired an Australian domicil, & B. having as a minor acquired his father's domicil of choice & afterwards continued it, the domicil of the latter was Australia; (3) after B. had left England the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain C.'s petition for restitution of conjugal rights.

In 1879 he was married at Hounslow, & in 1884 he took his discharge from the Army, & became canteen steward to the 15th Hussars, then stationed at Hounslow. In 1895 he died while he was with the regiment in Dublin:—Held: though the evidence showed an intention to change his domicil, deceased man's Scotch domicil had not been in fact changed, & that his estate must be distributed according to the law of Scotland.—Re SMITH (DECEASED) (1896), 12 T. does not put an end to his English domicile or confer upon him any right to revert to his domicile of origin, & consequently, on his death, his personal property in this country is liable to legacy duty.

The privilege of exemption from taxation & from the operation of the civil & criminal law, accorded to an ambassador, is a personal privilege founded on the sacredness of his person & the rule of international law, by which, though actually resident here, he is looked upon as being extra territoriam & residing within his own country; but no analogy arises, from such exemption, during his life, to exempt his personal property from legacy duty after his death, & supposing the exemption to apply after his death, which is not the case, it would still only extend to a certain class of property which is not the subject of this information, viz., to such movables as could not be interfered with without interfering with his personal comfort & dignity.—*A.-G. v. 111. Consular service—Residence abroad—Domicil acquired before appointment.—If a man at the time he attains his majority is of unsound mind & remains in that state continuously up to the time of his death, the incapacity of minority, never having been followed by adult capacity, will continue to confer upon the father the right of choice in the matter of domicile for his son, & a change of domicile by the father will usually produce a similar change of domicile as regards the lunatic son. The mere residence as a consular officer in a foreign country gives rise to no inference of a domicile in that country. But, if one already domiciled & resident in such country accept an office in the consular service of another country, he does not thereby destroy his domicile.—SHARPE v. CRISPIN (1869), L. 112. Residence in foreign country—Treaty rights between England & foreign country—Turkey.—The law of domicile, as regulating cases of testacy & intestacy, considered in reference to the case of a British subject, a merchant, long resident & dying in Smyrna, having regard to the Treaty between England & the Ottoman Empire.

Assuming, that deceased died domiciled at Smyrna, the first point is, what is the law of Turkey as to British subjects dying domiciled there? This depends on the construction to be put on the treaties between Great Britain & the Porte. The leading object of these was to protect British subjects trading to Smyrna, & with this view to modify the law of Turkey so as to ensure them justice so far as could be attained. It is, I think, perfectly clear from the treaty, independently of all historical facts, that a residence in Smyrna by a British merchant was contemplated; & if the contracting parties have provided for the case of residence, it seems necessarily to follow, that they must have intended to provide for the case of domicile, if domicile in Turkey could be acquired by the same means as in other countries. Judge Story says, That place is properly the domicile of a person in which his habitation is fixed, without any present intention of removing therefrom. If this be applicable to a domicile in Turkey, such a case must have occurred in the course of trade, & therefore, I conceive it must, in legal contemplation, have been included when the parts of the treaty applicable to British subjects trading to Turkey came to be considered.

In construing these treaties, we ought to look at all the historical circumstances attending them, in order to ascertain what was the true intention of the contracting parties, & to give the widest scope to the language of the treaties, in order to embrace within it all the objects intended to be included.

The effect of the treaties is, that the law of Great Britain will operate on property left by a British merchant in the situation of the deceased, & I am not aware of any distinction even in the case of an individual having ceased to carry on trade (per CUR.).—*MALTASS v. 113. ——— China.—There is no authority in English law supporting the proposition that a person can become domiciled as a member of a community which is not the community possessing the supreme or sovereign territorial power.

Notwithstanding the constitution of the Supreme Ct. of China & Japan, the personal estate of an English-born testator permanently residing at Shanghai, & whose will has been proved in the ct. at that place is liable to pay legacy duty.

An Anglo-Chinese domicile (so called by analogy to that called Anglo-Indian) cannot be acquired by a native of England by permanent residence in the Empire of China.—Re TOOTAL'S TRUSTS (1883), 23 Ch. D. 532; 52 L. J. Ch. 664; 48 L. T. 816; 31 W. R. 653.

114. ——— Under British protection—Egypt.—

(1) Testator, a member of the Chaldean Catholic community, having a Turkish domicile of origin, fixed his permanent residence in Cairo, where he acquired the status of a protected British subject:—Held: he died domiciled in the dominions of the Porte, & that the Consular Court of Constantinople, being bound by ss. 5 & 6 of the Order in Council of 1873 to follow the same principles which would have been observed by an English Ct. of Probate, was right in holding that the law of Turkey governing the succession to a member of the Chaldean Catholic community domiciled in Turkey be followed in considering the power of testacy of deceased & in distributing his effects.

(2) There is no such thing as domicile arising from society & not from connection with a locality; consequently, as Cairo was not a British possession governed by English law, testator's permanent abode therein under British protection did not attract to him an English or Anglo-Egyptian domicile.—*ABD-UL-MESSIH v. In 1877 he retired from business, returned to England, & subsequently became a member of the Indian Council. He first took a house at Southampton for sixteen months, & lived there with his wife & family. In 1878 he took a five years' lease of a house at Surbiton, & lived there until 1883, when he took a lease of a house in London for seven, fourteen or twenty-one years, with an option of purchase at the end of two years, which option he did not exercise. He lived there until 1887, when he died. He made his will in Calcutta in English form, leaving his property, which consisted entirely of personalty in England, to his wife for life, with remainder to his four children equally. He had no property in Scotland.

Held: there was no indication of intention upon the part of testator upon his return from India to go back to Scotland, or to treat himself as a Scotsman. If he had intended to remain a Scotsman he would have made his will in Scottish form; because a man's personal property in any locality was governed by his domicile. The fact that he set up his place of residence in successive houses in England with his wife & family, showed an intention of permanently residing in England, & was sufficient to fix him with an English domicile.—Re BULLEN-SMITH, BERNERS v. BULLEN-SMITH (1888), 58 L. T. 578; 4 T. L. R. 398.

(e) For Reasons of Health.

120. General rule.]—(1) Although permanent residence abroad without intent to return may not operate as a change of domicile, if believed to be necessary for health's sake, the circumstance that such residence was occasioned by mere preference of climate, or by the opinion that the air or the habits of the country may be better suited to the health than those of the country which has been quitted, will not be sufficient to prevent such permanent residence from so operating.

This was a suit for the administration of the estate of M., who was born at Bath in 1778 of English parents, & after residing part of his life in England & part on the continent for the benefit of his health, died at Florence in 1850. While resident at Florence, he made a will in the Tuscan form in 1843, & a will in the English form in 1845, & probate of both these instruments had been granted by the Prerogative Ct. of Canterbury. The question now before the ct. was, whether the domicile of M. at the time of executing the two testamentary instruments & at his death, was England or Tuscany:—Held: testator had lost his English domicile & had acquired a Tuscan domicile.

He lived at Madeira two years, & there made his will, & then he went to Lisbon & died.

He had property in India; some Irish stock, some India stock, & some English stock; & he banked in London. He was proved to have expressed himself as intending ultimately to reside in Ireland.

Accordingly he went to Cape Colony & remained in South Africa, with the exception of a visit to England in 1902, being employed at the diamond mines, until his death in May in the year 1905. J. had on leaving England a small farm in Wales which he retained until his death, disposing of it by a will executed in 1904 in which he was described as late of a Welsh parish. There was evidence of statements by J. in conversation & in his letters speaking of going home & of his using similar expressions, pointing to an intention to end his days in Wales, but during his visit to England in 1902, he told his friends that it was his last visit, & his health being better in South Africa, he would permanently remain there.

Held : J. had no intention of abandoning the privileges & immunities which constituted his birth-right; the onus of showing that he had done so had not been discharged, & J. was a domiciled Englishman at the date of his death.—Re JAMES, JAMES v. JAMES (1908), 98 L. T. 438.

130. ——— Residence in lodgings—Estate purchased in country of origin.—Personal property may be subject to succession duty, although exempt from legacy duty by reason of testator having a foreign domicile.

Testator, born in France, of French parents, became a merchant's clerk at Gibraltar, & in 1830 went to reside at Manchester, to purchase goods for his firm; & he subsequently became a shipping agent there until his death in 1859. He occupied weekly lodgings, & also paid a weekly sum for his board. He paid two visits to his native place, in 1835 & 1846, & in the latter year bought an estate there; & a solemn act was passed before a notary at his native place for the preservation of his co-hereditary right of succession over some landed property there. In this act testator was described as "merchant, of Manchester, in England, native of Montory," & his relatives, nephew & nieces, parties to the deed, declared in it that he had not forfeited his hereditary rights to the estate, & that he desired to maintain his right. During the whole time his intention was to return to France & die there, & he always deemed & considered himself a Frenchman, & not an Englishman; but he never fixed upon any period when his return should take place, & he lived at Manchester with the intention of remaining there for an indefinite period :—Held : (1) the domicile of testator was French, & his personal property in England was not liable to legacy duty; (2) testator's personal property was liable to succession duty.—Re CAPDEVIELLE (1864), 2 H. & C. 985; 5 New Rep. 15; 33 L. The evidence of intention was conflicting, & went chiefly to the impression of the witness, but it appeared that he preferred the French climate, & talked of taking his wife's body to France.

Held : the domicile of origin never was lost, & C. died a domiciled Frenchman.—CAPDEVIELLE v. CAPDEVIELLE (1869), 21 L. T. 660; 18 W. R. 107.

were again married at a registrar's office in London. A. was believed to be still in South Africa, but there was no evidence as to whether he was still unmarried. By the Roman-Dutch law, which prevails in the Cape Colony & Natal, parties who have been guilty of adultery are incapable of contracting a valid marriage unless the injured party has married again, but a decree of divorce is an absolute dissolution of the marriage, & the Colonial Cts. have no power to dissolve a marriage between parties who are not domiciled within their jurisdiction:—Held: (1) it must be presumed that the Colonial Ct. had jurisdiction to dissolve the marriage between A. & B.; (2) B.'s disability to contract a valid marriage so long as A., remained unmarried ceased when she left the Cape Colony, & that therefore her marriage with S. in England was valid.

He entered into this partnership for life which shows that he had no intention of returning here (HANNEN, P.).—SCOTT v. A.-G. (1886), 11 P. D. 128; 55 L. J. P. 57; 56 L. T. 924; 50 J. P. 824.

134. — Illicit cohabitation, marriage & death in country of choice.—In the year 1734 T., a Swiss, twenty-two years of age, whose domicile of origin was Geneva, came to England, & carried on business & resided in England from that time until his death in 1779. Some time after his arrival he formed a connection with P., an Englishwoman, with whom he lived as man & wife. In 1744 he had a daughter by her, who was baptised as his child by the name of Sarah T. & who left issue. Between 1744 & 1747 he had two other illegitimate children by P. who were born respectively in 1745 & 1747 & left no issue. In 1749 he married another Englishwoman named W., and by her he had one child, who was the mother of the intestate in this administration action. W. died in 1752, & in 1755 T. married P. & had legitimate children by her, one of whom, S. M. T., had issue. By the law of Geneva illegitimate children are legitimated by the subsequent marriage of their putative father & their mother, notwithstanding an intermediate marriage of their father with another woman & the birth of a child by her. After the death of the intestate the descendants of Sarah T. (who was born before the marriage of T. & P.) & the descendants of S. M. T. (who was born after that marriage) set up conflicting claims in the action to be the next of kin of the intestate:—Held: a child born before the marriage of its father & mother cannot be legitimated by their subsequent marriage unless the father was domiciled in a country whose laws allowed such legitimation both at the time of the marriage which gave the child the status of legitimacy & at the time of the birth on which it took from its putative father the potentiality of being legitimated.

Acts, events, & declarations subsequent to the time at which a question of domicile arises are admissible in evidence upon that question when

Semble: the circumstance that a foreign fixed residence is adopted merely with the view to the acquisition of a fortune, & with an ulterior intention of returning home, is not sufficient to prevent the place of residence from becoming that of a domicile.—ALLARDICE v. He broke up his home, sold his furniture, & brought with him to England his wife & three young children, with the view of having the children educated here. At the same time he also brought his household plate & linen, & some few articles which had not been included in the sale. Upon arrival in England, the parties & their children took furnished apartments in one of the suburbs of London. While the husband was in the hospital, his wife misconducted herself in London, & the husband, upon ascertaining this, instituted proceedings for a divorce, upon the ground of his wife's adultery with the co-respondent against whom he claimed damages. The wife & co-respondent both entered an absolute appearance, & filed answers denying the adultery alleged in the petition. The case came to trial, but the jury disagreed, & were discharged without giving a verdict. Some time after this the wife brought an action in the Q.'s B. Div. for the recovery of certain sums of money & other property, which her husband had received from her, & which she alleged were held in trust by him for her separate use. The husband, in his defence, alleged that his domicile was Cingalese, & that by the law of Ceylon the property in question had become his own absolutely. In the result, it was held that the husband's domicile was in fact as he alleged it to be, & that upon this ground the wife's claim to some substantial portions of the property in question was bad in law. Thereupon, the wife obtained leave to amend her answer to the divorce petition, by raising the question of jurisdiction; & she now pleaded that this ct. had no power to entertain the suit, by reason of her husband's Cingalese domicile. At the trial there was some conflict between the husband & wife as to what the intention of each of them was with reference to their place of residence & future movements after the date of their arrival in England, & upon this two questions were left to the jury, who found that the petitioner came to England & took rooms in July, 1890, with the intention that his children should be educated in England, & that his wife should remain with them in England in those rooms, or in some other home to be provided by the petitioner, until the children's education should be finished, & that the wife & children should so remain, even although he were obliged to return to Ceylon, & that the petitioner's intention was to ultimately rejoin his wife & children in England either on leave or after his retirement from the Ceylon Civil Service:—Held: the matrimonial home of the parties was in England.—*HURLEY v. 142. Avoidance of creditors—Wife left in country of origin.]—P., born in England, & second son of an English peer, being in debt, & to avoid his creditors, went to Scotland in 1854 & lived with a companion in shooting quarters, leaving his wife in England, who had declined to accompany him. In 1858 he took a lease of a Scotch shooting ground for six years & lived there with a few occasional exceptions of flying visits to England; he had lived in Scotland as a hiding-place from his creditors from 1854 to 1860. He kept up continued communications with his English solicitor, with a view to some arrangement with his creditors; at the same time, in his letters he often alluded to his Scotch shooting-box as his home:—Held: (1) there was no sufficient evidence of P. having abandoned his English domicile & acquired a Scottish domicile.

(2) Seem: where a husband goes to a foreign country without his wife, & resides temporarily, but does not acquire such a domicile there as would in the event of his death regulate the succession to his personal estate the foreign ct. has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for divorce at his instance (LORD WESTBURY, C.).

Seem: where the husband does in such circumstances acquire such domicile in the foreign country, but leaving his wife in the native country which she never leaves, her domicile is not constructively his so as to enable the foreign ct. to entertain a suit by him to dissolve the marriage on the ground of her adultery (LORD WESTBURY, C.).—*PITT v. 145. Avoidance of imprisonment—Return on expiration of liability for imprisonment.]—Where a woman has made a will before marriage, the effect of a marriage in England upon the will depends on the English view of the domicile of the husband at the time of the marriage. An unmarried Frenchwoman executed a holograph will while resident in England. Subsequently she married a Frenchman in England according to English law. The husband was resident in England at the time of the marriage on account of a sentence of imprisonment passed on him in France. According to the law of France his liability to undergo this sentence ceased at the expiration of twenty years, & soon after that time had expired the husband returned to France. The wife continued to reside in England until her death.

No settlement was made on the marriage. At the date of the marriage the wife was carrying on a laundry business & the husband afterwards joined her in doing so, & certain leases of the laundry house were granted to him, but before his return to France he assigned the leases to his wife.

Held: under the circumstances the domicile of the husband at the time of the marriage was English, & the validity of the wife's will therefore depended on English law, & was revoked by the marriage.—Re MARTIN, LOUSTALAN v. LOUSTALAN, [1900] P. 211; 69 L. She never afterwards resided in this country & continued to travel on the Continent until her sister's death, which occurred in Paris, in 1883. She herself died in 1893 in Florence & was buried there. In November, 1891, the testatrix made her will. In June, 1892, she made a codicil thereto, & in April, 1893, she made a second codicil. All these documents were prepared for her in England by her English solr. They were all in English form, and obviously made with reference to English law. In her will which was executed in Paris she described herself in a similar manner. In her second codicil, she described herself as a British subject at present residing at Florence. The facts relied on in support of the French domicile were that the testatrix's residence was in Paris, that she had taken apartments on lease in Paris, that she had purchased a tomb or

Testator was born in Maryland, before the separation of the American colonies from Great Britain, of parents domiciled in America, & was sent to Scotland when under age, for his education. At the age of twenty-four, & after the treaty of 1783, he went to India, being described in the ship's books as an American, & remained in that country for thirty years, where he acquired a fortune, the greater part of which he left there, on returning to Europe. He then went to America to see his family, & to look after some property left him by his father; & having again visited different parts of England, Scotland, & the continent, finally returned to America, engaged in agricultural pursuits, commenced drawing his property to that country, & made a will, wherein he described himself as "late of Calcutta, & now of Richmond, in the country & state of New York," & appointed English exors. Shortly after, he died at New York:—Held: testator had made his election to become a subject of the United States, & was at his death domiciled in America; & consequently, the legacies paid in this country to English legatees, were not subject to the legacy duty.—Re BRUCE (1832), 2 Cr. & J. 436; 2 Tyr. 475; 1 L. In the year 1818 he retired from his profession & situation on a pension, & returned to his native country, Scotland, when he succeeded in purchasing his paternal property from the trustees of his father's creditors, & built a handsome mansion upon the estate, which he occupied up to the year 1825, when he took a tour to Switzerland, breaking up his establishment. During some time in the year following he went to Paris, & resided in lodgings on the Boulevards until the year 1829, when he again visited his mansion in Scotland, having spent a short time in London on his return. He then went to Edinburgh, where he instructed his solicitor to prepare his will, which he executed afterwards in London. Testator, in Nov. 1829, again took up his residence in Paris, having changed his place of abode from the Boulevards to the Place Vendome. In this part of Paris he lived until June, 1831, when, being in

He hired Italian domestic servants, male & female, whom he kept at R. until his death. He expended large sums in repairing & improving the castle & grounds of R., which repairs & improvements were going on at the time of his death. He did not make R. his constant residence, but from 1828 to 1831 sometimes occupied it, sometimes lived in furnished lodgings in the towns adjacent, & at other times visited Rome, Florence, & other parts of Italy, residing in furnished lodgings. In 1831 he came to England, & resided in different parts of it until September, 1832. In March, 1832, he sent to R. several cases of plate, books & wearing apparel. In September, 1832, he made his will in London. In the same month he left England & went to Florence, where he remained two months, & thence to R., he then lived, sometimes in the castle of R., sometimes in furnished lodgings in the adjacent towns, till October, 1833, when he went to Rome & there lived in furnished lodgings until his death in Feb. 1834:—Held: there was no evidence of testator's having actually acquired a domicile at R., or elsewhere abroad, although they indicated an intention to make R. his domicile; his English domicile therefore remained, & legacy duty was consequently payable on the bequests contained in his will.—A.-G. v. DUNN (1840), 6 M. & W. 511; 151 E. The bulk of his property was in N.Z. He made his will in N.Z. & executed a codicil shortly before leaving E. on his visit to N.Z., & in the codicil described himself as of N.Z., now residing in E. His exor. & trustee resided in N.Z., & his will was proved there.

During his last voyage to E. he sent a document to one son purporting to give him the use of a burial-lot in W. Cemetery in N.Z., but expressly reserving a place in it for himself should he die in N.Z. While in E. he stated that he intended to remain in E., & wished to be buried in C. In 1876 P. purchased the house in which he was residing, & in 1878 he retired from the postal service & continued to reside in his house until his death in 1895. Shortly before coming to S. he inherited from his father, & retained during his life, property in E. He kept the greater part in his own hands, allowing his sisters to occupy the house on the property. In 1896 A. died. 206. Change of domicile of widowed mother.]—T. P., a native of England, domiciled in Guernsey, died intestate, leaving a widow, & infant children by her & also by a former wife. The widow, after his death, was appointed guardian of the children by the Royal Ct. of Guernsey, & in conjunction with another person, who was appointed guardian of the children by the former marriage, sold the property of the intestate & invested the produce in the English funds, after which she came to England with her children, & was domiciled there. On the death of some of the children under age, a question arose, whether their shares of the property had become distributable according to the law of England, or of Guernsey:—Held: the law of England should govern the succession, the domicile of the children being to follow the domicile of the surviving mother, where no fraudulent intention can be imputed. But fraud may be presumed, where no reasonable cause appears for the removal.—POTINGER v. WIGHTMAN (1817), 3 Mer. 67; 36 E. R. 26.

B., a widow with several infant children, all of whom had a Scotch domicile, married again in Scotland in Nov. 1834. In Jan. 1835, N., her second husband, went to reside permanently in England, & shortly afterwards Mrs. N. & all her children, except C. B., joined him in England & acquired an English domicile. C. B. remained in Scotland with an aunt, with whom she had lived since her father's death in 1821. C. B. attained twenty-one in May, 1840, & she died in Scotland in April, 1841.

From the time of the separation, the wife resided abroad, & the husband continued to be domiciled in Scotland, where he raised an action of divorce against her, on the head of adultery, alleged to have been committed abroad after the separation:—Held: (1) the wife's legal domicile was in Scotland, where the husband's was, & she was amenable to the jurisdiction of the Scottish Ct.; (2) an edictal citation, with actual intimation by serving a copy of the summons personally, was a good citation; (3) it was competent to the Scottish Cts. to entertain a suit to dissolve a marriage contracted in England.—WARRENDER v. A. & B. were married in England in 1822 ; they lived together till 1839, when they separated. In Feb. 1854, the husband went to Scotland, & resided there, with some very short intervals, till July, 1854. In June, 1854, his wife, who had followed him to Scotland, sued out, in the Scottish cts., a process for dissolution of marriage, on account of adultery committed by him in Scotland. In July a decree for divorce a vinculo was pronounced. In Sept. she married a Frenchman (according to the forms required by Scottish & by French law), & went with him to his domicile in France. While in England she had executed an English will, in pursuance of a power reserved to her, & in accordance with the terms of that power. After having resided nearly two years in France, she executed, in June, 1856, a holograph will (valid according to the laws of that country) revoking all previous wills :—

Held: (1) there had not been any change of domicile by the husband; (2) the domicile of B., the wife, was that of her husband; (3) the Scottish decree of divorce had no effect, she continued to be a married woman & a domiciled Englishwoman, & consequently her will of 1854 was properly admitted to probate, & the revoking paper of June, 1856, was a nullity.

About sixteen years before his death he contracted a bigamous marriage in Australia. When this came to the knowledge of his wife she instituted proceedings for divorce in the Scottish cts.; but she died before the case came on for hearing, leaving her husband surviving:--Held: (1) the husband's domicile was in Australia; (2) there was nothing in the circumstances of the case to take it out of the ordinary rule that a wife's domicile is that of her husband, & therefore the wife's domicile was in

In 1830 he married, & had three children, born in Calcutta. He continued to receive his half-pay & to obtain renewals of leave until 1839. In that year he made his will, & died at Calcutta without having at any time returned to England:—Held: at his death testator's domicil was Indian.—COCKRELL v. COCKRELL (1856), 25 L. J. FOREIGN LAW.

248. Domicil of choice in country not recognising domicil—Domicil of origin unaffected.—Where a British subject, whose domicil of origin is colonial, acquires according to English law a domicil of choice in a country whose laws do not recognise domicil, but distribute the movables of a foreigner dying within their jurisdiction according to the law of his nationality, & dies there, the English cts. will distribute his movables according to the law of his domicil of origin.—*Re JOHNSON, ROBERTS v. SECT. 6.—COMMERCIAL DOMICIL.

SUB-SECT. 1.—MEANING OF.

252. Test of enemy or neutral character.—The nationality of a person taken in war is determined primarily by the locality of his domicil.—LE THEODORE (1779), Marr. 256.

253. Party may have more than one commercial domicil—Businesses in different countries.—A man having a house of trade in the enemy's country as well as in a neutral country, is not to be considered in his whole concerns as an enemy's merchant, as well in those which respected solely his neutral house, as in those which belonged to his belligerent domicil. A man having connection at an enemy's port, either as a partner in a house of trade or as a sole trader, is not liable to be considered as an enemy merchant in respect to a transaction originating with another house, & having no connection with such enemy port. The consequence of the transaction must be limited to the transaction at such port, & his other trade must be exonerated.

A partner in a firm trading at N., had left N. & was trading at W. The great bulk of his trade from W. went to N. & several N. fishing boats continued to be owned by him:—Held: he had still an interest in the partnership at N. inasmuch as his name still continued first in the firm name.—THE PORTLAND (1800), 3 Ch. Rob. 41.

254. ——A man may have mercantile concerns in two countries; if he acts as a merchant of both, he must be liable to be considered as a subject of both, with regard to the transactions originating respectively in those countries. When great commercial concerns were carried on in coffee-houses, the fact that a man had no fixed counting-house in the enemy's country was not decisive. A counting-house or fixed establishment is not necessary to make a man a merchant of any place. If he is there himself, & acts as a merchant of that place it is sufficient; & the mere want of a fixed counting-house there will make no breach in the mercantile character, which may well exist without it.—THE JONGE KLASSINA (1804), Ch. Rob. 297.

SUB-SECT. 2.—ACQUISITION OF.

A. Residence and Trading.

255. Nominal residence—Burgher's certificate.—Nominal residence, although accompanied by a magistrate's certificate, cannot entitle a person to be considered as a citizen of a town. The residence which the ct. requires, must be taken up honestly, with a bonâ fide intention of making it the place of habitation.—THE ENDRAUGHT (1798), 1 Ch. Rob. 22.

Annotation:—Mentd. The Jonge Margaretha (1799), 1 Ch. Rob. 189.

256. — Disposal of house—Landed estate retained.—(1) G., a native of Great Britain, had settled in America, where he resided & carried on an extensive trade till 1798, when he came to Europe, to England & France, to look after his debts & to reclaim some property captured by the French, & also with an intention of carrying back with him his wife & family, who had been residing in England for the education of his children. He was requested, by the President of the United States, to take the command of an armed ship against the French; but, on declining that offer, he was persuaded to accept the office of consul-general for Scotland. In such capacity he had not acted further than to appoint deputies:—Held: if there were any deputies acting under his appointment it would be a strong circumstance to affect him with a British residence, as long as there were persons acting in an official station in the British Isles & deriving their authority from him.

(2) G. went to France, in 1800, for the purpose of recovering payment of some debts. He continued in France from Feb. till July, & having succeeded in the recovery of some part of his money, which he had no opportunity of remitting directly, he invested it in the purchase of several prize vessels, which he sent to England, some in ballast, & others loaded with provisions:—Held: such a transaction conducted bonâ fide with that view, & directed only to the removal of property, which the accidents of war might have lodged in the belligerent country, were entitled to be treated with some indulgence.

(3) Subsequently he went again to France, in the following year, to collect outstanding debts. Part of the money which he received was invested in a speculation of sending a cargo of butter to Lisbon, because that port afforded a favourable market:—Held: this was a voluntary mercantile speculation in the enemy's trade, & was not the case of a man withdrawing his property to England, but engaging in new speculations, & standing on same footing as any other merchant in the country of the enemy.

(4) G. having ceased to act as a general merchant in America, & having confined himself to the shipment of the produce of his own landed estate:—Seem: he ceased to be a merchant of America, because a person confining himself to the shipment of the produce of his own estate does not stand on the same footing as a general merchant, retaining a mercantile domicile by his house of trade.

G. had disposed of his house, & had nothing left in America but his landed estate:—Held: (5) that alone was not sufficient to constitute domicile, or fix the national character of the possessor not personally resident upon it; (6) whether G.'s character was that of a French or a British merchant, he did not stand in the character of a neutral American merchant, & he was not entitled to restitution.—THE DREE GEBROEDERS (1802), 4 Ch. Rob. 232.

257. Residence & trading in same country.]—

(1) The property of an English merchant resident in Holland, taken in a Danish ship taken on a voyage from a Spanish port to Guernsey, condemned.

(2) An Englishman residing & trading in Holland is just as much a Dutch merchant as a Swede or a Dane would be.—THE CITRO (1800), 3 Ch. Rob. 38.

258. ——— Length of residence—Animus manendi.]—(1) Time is the grand ingredient in constituting domicile. In most cases it is unavoidably conclusive. Suppose a man comes into a belligerent country at or before the beginning of a war; it is reasonable not to bind him too soon to an acquired character, & to allow him a fair time to disengage himself; but if he continues to reside during a good part of the war, contributing, by payment of taxes, & other means, to the strength of that country, he could not plead his special purpose with any effect against the rights of hostility. If he could, there would be no sufficient guard against the fraud & abuses of masked, pretended, original, & sole purposes of a long continued residence. Time is the great agent; it is to be taken in a compound ratio, of the time & the occupation, with a great preponderance on the article of time. Be the occupation what it may, it cannot happen, but with few exceptions, that mere length of time shall not constitute a domicile.

B., being born in England, went out very early, destined to settle in America in his childhood; the intention having been fully entertained & decided, at the time of the declaration of independence, & nothing but his extreme youth, or rather childhood, having prevented his migration. He went out in 1784:—Held: (2) he was equitably entitled to the American character, & was not a British subject trading with France, the belligerent; (3) although the firm of which he was a partner, carried on business there, & he had a wife & family residing in America, inasmuch as he came over to France on the firm's business, & it appeared that he intended to remain there to carry on the firm's business in France, he was French in character, even although he intended returning to America for a short time, if in fact he intended after such visit to America to return definitely & permanently to France.

(4) If a house of trade sends a partner to France with an intention even of not mixing in any other trade than the business of that house, such a circumstance, connected with a permanent residence in France, would impress a national character upon him.—THE HARMONY (1800), 2 Ch. Rob. 322. Annotations:—As to (1) Consd. Tingley v. Müller, [1917] 2 Ch. 114. Refd. Cockrell v. Cockrell (1856), 25 L. J. Ch. 730; *A.-G. v. 259. ——— Whether general merchant immaterial.]—(1) J. was born in America, but left that country & settled as a merchant, in 1771, in England. During the American war in 1778, he left England, & settled in France as one of a house of trade, reserving to himself in the articles of partnership the liberty of returning to America when he thought proper. In 1785, J. returned again to England, & continued in England as a merchant till September 1797; during the latter part of that period, from 1790, he acted as American consul. The American Govt. considered him as an American subject, & declared him so to be by an Act of the Govt. The voyage began in Mar. 1795, & the capture did not take place till Nov. 1797. In Sept. 1797, J. left England:—Held: J. was an American, & as the national character of J. as a British merchant was founded in residence only, acquired by residence, & rested on that circumstance alone, from the moment he turned his back on the country where he had resided on his way to his own country, he was in the act of resuming his original character, & was to be considered as an American.

(2) The vessel sailed as an American ship with an American pass, & all American documents:—Held: if the owner really resided in England such papers could not protect his vessel, for, if the owner was resident in England, & the voyage was such as an English merchant could not engage in, an American, resident in England, & carrying on trade, could not protect his ship merely by putting American documents on board, & his interest must stand or fall according to the determination which the ct. could make on the national character of such a person.

(3) If a person goes into another country & engages in trade, & resides there, he is by the law of nations to be considered as a merchant of that country. It is illegal in any person owing an allegiance, though temporary, to trade with the public enemy. The character that is gained by residence ceases by residence. It is an adventitious character which no longer adheres to him, from the moment that he puts himself in motion, bonâ fide to quit the country, sine animo revertendi.

(4) The character of consul does not protect that of merchant united in same person. Whether he is a general merchant, or not is totally immaterial, if it be his first adventure he must be taken as a merchant, & can be considered in no other character.—THE INDIAN CHIEF (1801), 3 Ch. 265. —Master of ship trading from American port—Acquisition of American citizenship.—A British-born subject may, by his employment & residence in a foreign country, acquire a new national character for commercial purposes.

The ship Ann sailing under American colours was seized in Aug. 1812, in the Thames. The master, who was sole owner, described himself as a British subject & claimed the ship. He was a native of Scotland, where his wife & family resided, but had himself been admitted as an American citizen about 16 years before, upon taking an oath that he had been sailing out of an American port for two years; from 1799 till 1805 he had been connected with a house of trade at Glasgow, which had an establishment at N. Y. & another at Charlestown, & had occasionally resided at each of the last-mentioned places; he had purchased the vessel at public auction in America & had made three voyages in her, the first two from Charlestown to Kingston in Jamaica, returning each time in ballast; & the last from Charlestown to the Thames:—Held: in regard to the ship he was to be considered as an American subject.—THE ANN (1813), 1 Dods. 221.

266. Residence in one country—Business visits to another country.—Question respecting the national character of a fishing adventure, carried on by a native Dutchman who had become by domicile a subject of Prussia, & had purchased the vessel, formerly a Dutch vessel, in Feb., at Emden. He had since been employed in fishing off the Dutch coast, having sold his cargoes to English ships, & having once or twice resorted to Dutch ports, not for the purpose of selling his cargoes, but merely to procure bait.

Held: his domicile was Prussian.—THE LIESBET VAN DEN TOLL (1804), 5 Ch. Rob. 283.

Annotation:—Refd. The Berlin, [1914] P. 265.

267. —Business in another country—Enemy subject.—The Crown can claim condemnation of goods seized in transit of an enemy subject having a house of business in a neutral country or in British territory, but who himself resides in an enemy country. Such enemy subject, resident at Hamburg, cannot set up his commercial domicile in a neutral country at Khartoum against the claim of the Crown for condemnation of goods belonging to the firm of which the said enemy subject was a partner, shipped from Khartoum & seized by the Crown at Liverpool. Although a person carrying on business in an enemy country has his commercial domicile there, the converse of the rule does not extend to the case of a merchant residing in a hostile country, & having his house of trade in a neutral country.—THE CLAN GRANT (PART CARGO EX) (1915), 31 T. 268. — — — — —After the outbreak of war with Germany certain goods belonging to a partnership firm at Buenos Aires, & shipped before the war on a British ship, were seized as a prize. All the partners of the firm were Germans resident at Antwerp, who had been expelled from Belgium as enemy subjects shortly after the outbreak of war:—

Held: although a subject of a belligerent State can acquire a commercial domicile in a neutral

State which will protect his goods captured at sea from condemnation residence in the neutral State is an essential condition of such domicile; &, as none of the enemy partners of the firm were resident in the Argentine Republic at the time of seizure, the goods must be regarded as enemy property & subject to condemnation.—THE HYPATIA, [1917] P. 36; 86 L. 269. British & German firm trading in China—Firm registered at German consulate—British partners resident in China—German partners resident elsewhere.]—A firm consisting of two British & two German subjects carrying on business at Shanghai was registered at the German Consulate as a German firm in accordance with the regulations whereby the European communities, to which China has granted extraterritorial privileges, are governed by the laws of their respective countries. The two British partners, who resided in Shanghai, were also registered as British subjects at the British Consulate. Neither of the German partners resided at Shanghai. Goods belonging to the firm having been seized as prize, they were claimed as being the property of the firm as neutrals, & alternatively as the individual property of the partners as neutral and British subjects:—Held: (1) the firm could not be treated as a neutral house of trade, & for all purposes of prize it must be regarded as a German firm carrying on business in a German colony; (2) none of the partners had acquired, or could acquire, a neutral commercial domicile, & the shares in the proceeds of the goods attributable to the German partners must be condemned; (3) as regards the shares of the British partners, the case must be adjourned for further evidence as to what measures, if any, were taken by them to sever their connection with the firm on the outbreak of war.—THE EUMAEUS (1915), 85 L. J. P. 130; 114 L. T. 190; 32 T. L. R. 125; 60 Sol. Jo. 122; 13 App. M. L. C. 228.

Part III.—Nature of Property.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

290. “Movable” & “immovable” explained.]—Testator who died in 1888, domiciled in England, bequeathed property, which included mtges. on freehold in Ontario, for charitable purposes. The mtges. contained covenants to pay the money thereby secured. At the date of testator's death the Charitable Uses Act, 1735, then in force, extended to Ontario, & would admittedly have invalidated the bequest of the mtges. had testator been domiciled there:—Held: mtges. on land are deemed to be immovables & not movables, & governed by the lex rei sitæ, & therefore the bequest of the mtges. was a gift of impure personalty & was invalid.

The terms “movable” & “immovable” are not technical terms in English law, though they are often used, & conveniently used, in considering questions between English law & foreign systems which differ from that law (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).

The division into movable & immovable property is no part of the law either of England or of Canada, & is only called into operation in England when the English Cts. have to determine rights between domiciled Englishmen and persons domiciled in countries which do not adopt the

SECT. 2.—HOW DETERMINED.

291. Immovable—Scottish heritable bond—By Scottish law.]—Though the personal estate of a Scotsman dying domiciled in England, must be distributed according to the law of England, yet that shall not affect or interfere with the succession to his real estate in Scotland. Therefore, where for securing a sum of money borrowed, a heritable bond is granted, by which the land in Scotland is rendered liable as the principal debtor there, & the heir pays the bond by sale of part of the estate, being at the same time one of the next of kin and administrator, he shall not come for relief upon the personal funds in England, as primarily applicable to the payment of such a debt.—*DRUMMOND v. 294. ————.]—A will must be construed according to the law of the country where it is made, & testator is domiciled.

The will of a subject of Great Britain made in India must be construed according to the laws of England.

Money vested in heritable bonds becomes real estate, & where upon the construction of the will no clear intention can be collected to pass real estate, the heir-at-law taking a benefit under the will is not put to his election, but may take the real estate as heir, & also personal estate under the will.

A will by which testator recites that he considers it his duty, while in health, to execute a settlement of all his estate & effects, appointing exors. in England & in India, & directing that the residue of his estate in India should be remitted to his exors. in Scotland, & that they should divide that residue, & the whole of his property in Europe, equally between his brothers & sisters:—Held: not to pass the heritable bonds.—TROTTER v. 297. ————.]—The rule that the law of the matrimonial domicile applies to a contract in consideration of marriage will yield to an express stipulation that some other law shall apply, or to other sufficient indications that the parties contracted with reference to some other law.

Scottish "heritable bonds" must be regarded by an English ct. as immovable property & therefore governed by Scots law.

When it is said that a contract, valid by the law of the country in which it is made, cannot be enforced in England because it is contrary to public policy or the policy of English law, it is meant that the contract conflicts with what are deemed in England to be essential public or moral interests—not merely that it would be invalid under English law.

On the marriage in Scotland of a domiciled Englishman with a domiciled Scotswoman the wife's property, which consisted mainly of Scottish heritable bonds, was settled by a marriage contract executed in Scotland in Scottish form. By this contract the trustees, most of whom were domiciled Englishmen, & who were also the trustees of a contemporaneous settlement of the husband's property in English form, were to hold the wife's property upon trust, in case the husband should survive the wife, to pay the income to him during his life, declaring that all payments to him "shall be strictly alimentary, & shall not be assignable nor liable to arrestment or any other legal diligence at the instance of his creditors." The husband survived the wife, having mtged. his life interest under the Scotch contract to mtgees. in England. He had always retained his English domicile.

By the law of Scotland such a restricted life interest, so far as it does not exceed in amount a reasonable provision, is valid as against creditors, other than alimentary creditors, & in such a case, if the husband fails to maintain the children of the marriage, they are entitled to attach the alimentary provision made for them.

Upon a summons by the trustees to determine the rights of the mtgees. as against the husband & the only child of the marriage.

Held: having regard to all the circumstances & particularly the nature of the limitations in the Scotch contract, it must be taken to have been the intention of the parties that that contract should be governed, not by the law of the English matrimonial domicile but by Scots law, & the alimentary provision to the husband, being valid by that law, must be treated as valid by the English cts., & consequently valid as against the husband's mtgees., there being nothing in the provision contrary to the policy of English law in the proper sense of that term.—Re FITZGERALD, SURMAN v. FITZGERALD, [1904] 1 Ch. 573; 73 L. J. Ch. 436; 90 L. T. 266; 52 W. R. 432; 20 T. L. R. 332; 48 Sol. Jo. 349, C. A.

The deed contained a schedule of the registered names & descriptions of the slaves, but they were wholly omitted in the memorandum of the deposit:—Held: (1) this was nevertheless a good equitable mtge. of the slaves mentioned in the deed; (2) the slaves, being real property in the island of Antigua, could not be considered as within the order & disposition of the bkpts. at the time of their bkpcy.—*Re RUCKER, Ex p. 299. — English leaseholds—By English law.]—Testator, a French subject, having his domicile of origin in France, & at the respective dates of his will & death, domiciled in France, made, in 1800 in France, a holograph will in the French form & language, whereby he appointed B. his universal legatee, upon condition that he satisfied certain legacies therein mentioned, & settled the testator's debts. Among the legacies comprised in the will was a specific bequest to C. of testator's beneficial interest in a leasehold house in England. The will was not attested by any witness, but was valid according to the law of France.

Testator died in 1895, & in 1897 letters of administration, with the will, or a translation thereof, annexed, were granted by the Probate Division to B.

Held: although a leasehold interest in land was a chattel interest, yet for the purposes of testamentary disposition a chattel interest in land must be treated as immovable property, & as governed by the law of the country in which it was situated; & the property in the present case was consequently not disposed of by the unattested will.—PEPIN v. BRUYÈRE, [1902] 1 Ch. 24; 71 L. J. Ch. 39; 85 L. T. 461; 50 W. R. 34; 46 Sol. Jo. 29, C. A.

300. — Rent-charge issuing out of English lands—By English law.]—Testator gave a rent-charge, to issue out of lands in England, to A. for life, & directed that after her death it should be continued, & equally divided between B., C. & D. during their lives & the life of the longest liver. B. died domiciled abroad, leaving an English will, by which she disposed of her personal estate. On the death of A., who was survived by C. & D., the Crown claimed from B.'s exors. legacy duty in respect of B.'s third share of the rent-charge:—Held: such duty was payable, for that the interest in the rent-charge which passed to B.'s exors. was, by the Wills Act, 1837, an estate pur autre vie, applicable by law in the same manner as personal estate, & therefore fell within the Legacy Duty Act, 1796, & it was not exempt from duty by reason of B.'s foreign domicile, inasmuch as, although it was by law applicable in the same manner as personal estate, it was not by any of the statutes made personal estate, but was realty not following the person.—*CHATFIELD v. By a mtge. by way of settlement, in pursuance of such bond, A. mtged., inter alia, the estates & pennis, & appurtenances, & all & every the cattle, stock, & plantation implements.

Held: cattle & stock upon the estate & pennis were not included in the bond, & though the mtge. deed, made in pursuance of such bond, was by way of marriage settlement, yet it could not enlarge the provisions of the bond.

Cattle & stock upon a plantation or penn in Jamaica are, by the law of the Island, personal estate, & not affixed to the freehold.—TURNER v. BARCLAY (1854), 9 Moo. P. C. C. 264; 14 E. R. 297, P. C.

305. — Proceeds in specie removed from locus rei sitæ.]—Whether the ct. will enforce against defts., having in their hands proceeds of the sale of land situated out of the jurisdiction, the equities to which such proceeds would have been subject if the land had been situated within the jurisdiction, depends upon the question whether the contract which is sought to be enforced was or was not, by the lex loci rei sitæ, capable of being fulfilled.

If a contract relating to land situated out of the jurisdiction be one which the lex loci rei sitæ renders incapable of fulfilment, the ct. will not enforce the contract against the proceeds of a sale of such land coming to the possession of parties within the jurisdiction, though they take such proceeds bound

The rights of the parties interested in the proceeds of the sale of land situated out of the jurisdiction do not cease to be governed by the lex loci rei sitæ by the circumstance of such proceeds being brought in specie within the jurisdiction.

A law permitting alienation of land, only upon the terms of the proceeds being applied in a particular manner, is a restraint upon alienation; & restraints upon the alienation of land are always governed by the lex loci rei sitæ.—WATERHOUSE v. STANSFIELD (1851), 9 Hare, 234; 21 L. J. Ch. 881; 68 E. R. 489; subsequent proceedings (1852), 10 Hare, 254.

306. ——— Proceeds not subject to Mortmain Acts.]—The Royal Geographical Society & the Royal Society being corpns., the one for the improvement & diffusion of geographical knowledge, & the other for improving natural knowledge, are charities as defined by 43 Eliz. (c. 4), & are within the Statute of Mortmain.

Testator bequeathed legacies to the societies, & other undoubted charities, & after directing that all the charitable legacies should be paid out of his pure personal estate, he gave the residue of his real & personal estate to his exors., the plffs. His property consisted of pure personalty, leaseholds, in this country, & a small real estate in Madeira, which was sold after his death. The pure personalty was insufficient to pay in full the charitable legacies.

Held: (1) the charities were not entitled to the pure personalty in priority to the debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, & costs of suit; these were first payable ratably out of the pure & mixed personalty; & the charities would then take the residue of pure personalty; (2) the proceeds of sale of the Madeira estate were not pure personalty; but, inasmuch as it was foreign realty, it was not subject to the Mortmain Act, & the charitable legacies were entitled to a claim upon it for so much of their legacies as should remain unpaid after the above application of the pure personalty. — *BEAUMONT v. The curator ad bona of the lunatic, duly appointed according to the law of the country in which the lunatic resided, who according to that law had the fullest powers & control over the lunatic's real & personal estate, petitioned for the transfer of the fund to him:—Held: the fund, as representative of real estate sold under special legislation, was subject to the laws of this country relative to real estate, & must remain in ct. as a fund which might devolve upon the heir-at-law of the lunatic, & the curator ad bona was only entitled to receipt of the dividends.—*GRIMWOOD v. 309. ——— ———.]—S., testator in this action, who died in Sept. 1880, domiciled in England, for many years previous to his death carried on the business of sheep-breeding in partnership with his brother R. in New Zealand. Part of the partnership property consisted of a freehold estate of 29,000 acres in New Zealand known as the Milbourne estate. By articles of partnership dated Feb. 14, 1879, made between S. & R., it was agreed that the Milbourne estate should be forthwith sold in the manner which the parties should mutually agree upon, & the articles contained provisions for the case of no agreement & for carrying on the partnership until sale. R. died in Jan. 1880. S. was entitled to four-sevenths of the partnership property. No sale of the estate was made in R.'s lifetime or in that of S. By his will S. gave his four-sevenths shares in the Milbourne estate to trustees upon trust to sell, with powers of management till sale, & subject to the payment of an annuity, & of the income of one-seventh to the widow of R. during her life, to divide the proceeds & the produce till sale among thirteen charities. An administration action was commenced in 1881. The New Zealand property had never been sold, but the income had from time to time been paid into ct. Under an order made in Apr. 1888, the funds then in ct. had been divided, & legacy duty had been paid upon the moneys arising from the New Zealand estate. The duty had been paid under an arrangement that it should be repaid if it was ultimately decided not to be payable. The Governors of the London Hospital, who had been appointed to represent the other charities, presented a petition asking for distribution of the fund which had accumulated in ct. since Apr. 1888, without payment of legacy duty, on the ground that being proceeds of real estate in New Zealand, it was not subject to English legacy duty:—Held: S.'s interest in the property whether regarded as a share in land agreed to be sold by the articles of partnership or as a share in partnership property, was personal & movable property, & therefore subject to legacy duty according to the law of testator's domicil. —*Re STOKES, STOKES v. will gave all his real & personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale, & conversion, upon certain trusts inter alia for his children for their respective lives, with remainders to their respective issue. These trusts were as the ct. held on the evidence to a great extent invalid under Italian law as regarded land in Italy, the result being that the tenants for life took their shares absolutely. Part of the land in Sardinia had been sold by the trustees:—Held: (1) whether the trustees or the children took the land, as heirs according to the Italian law, the trustees had power under that law, & it was their duty to sell the land, & the proceeds of sale must be held by them upon the trusts declared by the will; (2) the rents of the unsold land until sale would devolve according to Italian law, but that it was competent to & legal for the children to elect that those rents should be applied as if they had been income resulting from the proceeds of the sale.—Re PIERCY, WHITWHAM v. 312. — Interest of proceeds—Treated as personalty.—A portion of an entailed estate was sold by the heir in possession for the redemption of the land-tax, & the surplus-money was invested in terms of the statute. The heir of entail next entitled sold for valuable consideration his reversionary & contingent right to the interest of this fund, & assigned it to the purchaser by a deed prepared in the English form, & executed in England, where the parties were domiciled, but without the solemnities required by the law of Scotland.

Held: the interest of the money was movable, & was well assigned by the English deed, comitate gentium.—SCOTT v. ALLNUTT (1831), 2 Dow & Cl. 404; 6 E. R. 778, H. L.

313. Whether immovable—So as to attach incidents of lex loci rei sitæ.—The bkpt. on borrowing money from his sister, petitioner, deposited with her some certificates of shares in a German mining co., undertaking to complete the transfer when required. These she sealed up, & left in his iron chest for safety. Some time before his bkptcy. he told one of the directors of the co. that he had so deposited the shares & the director told the board the circumstance, on the morning of Dec. 7. On the evening of the same day, the act of bkptcy. was committed:—

Held: the shares were neither in the reputed ownership nor in the order & disposition of the bkpt.

314. General rule—Application of foreign law.—The incidents to real estate, the right of alienating or limiting it, & the course of succession to it, depend entirely on the law of the country where the estate is situated.

An estate in Sicily was granted to an English subject, which he disposed of by his will upon certain trusts:—Held: as he could not subject his successor to a course of succession different from that which accorded with the grant & the law of Sicily, so neither could he subject the successor, as such, to any duties or obligations different from the duties & obligations which by the grant & the law of Sicily were annexed to his holding.—NELSON (EARL) v. 315. — Colonial land.—Statute of Mortmain, 9 Geo. 2 (cap. 36) does not extend to the island of Grenada, in the West Indies; the object of the statute being wholly political; it having grown out of local circumstances, & being intended to have only a local operation.

PART IV. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.

314 i. General rule—Application of ex loci rei sitæ.—Land in Upper C. was held in common by J. & E. & three others. E. became a nun in I., by which, according to Lower C. law, she became civilly dead as regarded her property; she afterwards died there:—Held: E. had not lost her share of the land by becoming a nun.—STUART v. PRENTISS (1861), 20 U. C. R. 513.—CAN.

314 ii. — — — — —.—Immovable property is governed by lex loci rei sitæ.—BARINDS v. GREEN (1911), 16 B. C. R.

Donations inter vivos in Mortmain are not prohibited by the statute, but regulated; the statute requiring enrolment in the Ct. of Ch.; by which is meant the Ct. of Ch., in England, where there is an ancient office for the enrolment of deeds, & there being no enrolment offices annexed to the Cts. of Ch. in the colonies.

Regularly, all questions of title to land in the colonies are to be decided, in the first instance, by cts. of local judicature, from which an appeal lies to the King in Council.—A.-G. v. STEWART (1817), 2 Mer. 143; 35 E. R. 895.

Lands in the plantations are no more under the jurisdiction of this ct., than lands in Scotland. 319. ——— ———.]—Where land in a colony is vested in the Queen by a Colonial Act for the public purposes of the colony the Petitions of Right Act, 1860, does not give jurisdiction to the Ct. of Ch. to entertain proceedings against the Crown as a trustee of such land present within the jurisdiction of the Ct.

By a Canal Act of the Provincial Legislature of Canada, land taken for a canal was vested in the Queen. By a second Provincial Act the land so taken was vested in the officers of Her Majesty's Ordnance; & it was enacted that so much of the land taken as had not been used for the canal should be restored to the owners. By a third Provincial Act the lands were re-vested in the Queen for the purposes of the colony, & subject to future colonial legislation.

To a petition of right by suppliants claiming the restoration of certain lands taken for the canal from their predecessors in title, but not used, a demurrer was allowed on the ground that the cts. of this country had no jurisdiction.—Re HOLMES (1861), 2 John & H. 527; 31 L. appeal was still pending. A. then filed her bill in the Ct. of Ch. here, for the purpose of having the will established so far as it related to the real estates in England:—Held: the decree of the Irish Ct. of Ch. was no bar to such a suit, that Ct. having no jurisdiction to declare the validity or invalidity of the will generally, but only so far as it affected estates in Ireland.—*BOYSE v. 336. — Agreement to contribute to cost of works—Foreign land.—Claim stating that plffs. & defts. were each of them limited cos., with registered offices in London, that the action was brought for rent of a railway station in Buenos Ayres, into possession of which the defts. were put by the plffs., & for part of the cost of constructing lines of railway & approaches to the station. Defence, that the plff. & deft. cos. were domiciled in the Argentine Republic, & carried on business there; that the premises in question were constructed on land which was the property of the republic, & that plffs. and defts. were joint concessionaires under the republic of certain easements appurtenant thereto; that the construction of the premises was directed by the government of the republic, & was for the benefit & convenience of the citizens of Buenos Ayres, & that by the laws of the republic powers of adjusting all rights arising out of the construction, & applicable to the claim of the plffs. were vested in the government, & that the contract (if any) as to the cost of the construction was made at Buenos Ayres, & was subject to the law of the place of contract, & that the republic had assumed jurisdiction over the plffs.' claim:—Held: the defence was bad, as both parties to the action were within the jurisdiction of the English cts., & the facts alleged did not show that the Argentine Republic had exclusive jurisdiction over the claim.—BUENOS AYRES & ENSENADA PORT RY. Co. v. NORTHERN RY. Co. OF BUENOS AYRES (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 210; 46 L. J. Q. B. 224; 36 L. T. 148; 25 W. R. 367.

337. — Implied contract or obligation—Damages for waste—Foreign land.—The possessor of Austrian entailed estates died domiciled in & left property in England. By the law of Austria the possessor is under an obligation to hand over the property to the successor in as good a state as when he received it, & is liable for deterioration, whether voluntary or permissive, unless it occurs without any fault of his, & he is entitled to compensation for improvements made by him. The successor brought a creditor's action in England against the English executrix, in which it was admitted by the parties that there was some deterioration, & also that some improvements had been made. NORTH, J., made a decree for administration with liberty to plff. to take proceedings, in the cts. of the countries in which the estates were situate, to establish the amount of his claim:—Held: the objection that the plff.'s claim was for a tort analogous to waste, & therefore, according to English law, died with the person, & could not be enforced in an English ct., was not sustainable, for the deteriorations were not to be regarded as torts but as breaches of an obligation in the nature of an implied contract. But the accounts in an administration suit ought not to be directed till it was ascertained that a sum was due to the plff.—BATHYANY v. WALFORD (1887), 36 Ch. D. 269; 56 L. J. Ch. 881; 57 L. SECT. 2. —EQUITABLE JURISDICTION IN PERSONAM.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

338. General rule—Colonial land.—This ct. having jurisdiction in personam upon equity arising out of transactions concerning lands abroad, particularly if in the British dominions, a purchase of an estate in the West Indies by a creditor under his own execution was upon the circumstances held only a security for the debt, the expenses of the proceeding & incumbrances paid by him, with interest; & subject thereto a reconveyance was decreed.—CRANSTOWN (LORD) v. JOHNSTON (1796), 3 Ves. 170; 30 E. R. 952.

339. ——As a general rule an English ct. will not adjudicate on questions relating to the title to or the right to the possession of immovable property out of the jurisdiction of that ct.; & the exceptions to this rule depend on the existence between the parties to the suit in England of some personal obligation arising out of contract or implied contract, fiduciary relation, or fraud, or other conduct which in the view of an English Ct. of Equity would be unconscionable, & do not depend for their existence on the law of the locus of the immovable property. In 1831 D. entered into a marriage contract with T. in France, both of them being domiciled French subjects. Plff., the only son of this marriage, alleged that according to French law T. thereby became entitled to one-half of the after-acquired property of D. & to a life interest in the other half of the property. In 1836 D. went to India, & in 1839 went through a form of marriage with X., on whom & on others he by a settlement made in 1865, of which defts. were trustees, conferred interests in immovable property in Madras. D. died in 1885 & T. died in 1890. In 1893 an official in Madras, who was not a party to the English action mentioned below, took out letters of administration in India of the estate of T. which vested all her movable & immovable property in Madras in him. In 1907 plff. took out letters of administration of the estate of T. in England. Plff. & defts. being all in England, plff. in an English action sought to impeach the settlement of 1865 as being contrary to the law of France & in contravention of his rights thereunder:—Held: the action ought not to be entertained.—DESCHAMPS v. MILLER, [1908] 1 Ch. 856; 77 L. J. Ch. 416; 98 L. T. 564.

340. — Land in Scotland.—(1) The principles which govern the Ch. Ct. upon questions of jurisdiction are analogous to those of the civil law, & the ct., therefore, has power to entertain a suit if the domicile of deft. is within the territorial jurisdiction of the ct., or if the subject-matter of the suit is situate within the territorial purpose of determining the right to the person-

jurisdiction of the ct., or if the contract sought to be enforced was entered into within the territorial jurisdiction of the ct., but if neither of these circumstances exist, the ct. has no jurisdiction.

In a suit where the subject was immovable property situate in Scotland, & the contract sought to be enforced was entered into & to be performed in Scotland, & defts. were domiciled in Scotland:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit; (2) upon questions of jurisdiction, Scotland is a foreign country; (3) the statutory power of serving a debt. out of the jurisdiction, & proceeding in his absence, did not give the ct. extended jurisdiction so as to enable it to determine the subject-matter of the suit; (4) where debt. had been served with a subpoena out of the jurisdiction, he was entitled to demur for want of jurisdiction, instead of moving to discharge the order for personal service abroad.—*COOKNEY v. 341. Against third party—No privity of contract—Third party with notice—Specific performance.—(1) A suit, by a pltf. in England, against defts., also residing in England, to enforce a lien on real estate in Prussia, can only be sustained by special circumstances arising out of the dealings between the parties; but where no privity exists between pltf. & defts., & where the principal parties are foreigners, & not amenable to the jurisdiction of the ct., the bill will be dismissed.

(2) If a pltf. in this ct. makes out a case which entitles him to a declaration of lien upon the real estate of a debt. out of the jurisdiction, this ct. will make it, & in some cases will grant a receiver; but it will leave pltf. to make it available or not, as he can, by means of the foreign tribunals.

(3) The cts. of this country will assist foreign tribunals to unravel complications; & they will, so far as the law allows, & so far as their jurisdiction extends, carry into effect the judgments of foreign cts. when legally brought under their cognisance.—*NORRIS v. 342. ——— Good title acquired by foreign law.—Indian Registration Act XX. of 1866, makes void all instruments relating to real estate in India which ought to have been registered under the Indian Registration Act, XVI. of 1864, but were not so registered, & destroys all equities arising out of them. A. being resident at Madras, in 1865 executed a deed by which he conveyed land in India to pltf. & covenanted for further assurance. The deed was not registered under the Indian Registration Act, 1864, which provides that if such a deed be not registered it shall not be received in evidence in any ct. in India. In 1866 A. mtgd. the same land to defts., who had notice of pltf.' conveyance, & defts. registered the mtge. deed under the Indian Registration Act, 1866. Pltf. filed a bill to enforce the covenant for further assurance against defts.:—Held: pltf. had no equity against defts., & the bill was dismissed.—Semble: independently of the operation of the Indian Registration Act, 1866, as pltf.' deed was forbidden by the Indian Registration Act, 1864, to be received in evidence in India, it could not be sued on in England either as a deed of conveyance or as a deed of covenant for further assurance.—*HICKS v. 343. To order sale of land outside jurisdiction.—In a suit by applts., being mtgees. of a division of 180 miles of respts.' railway & of its revenues subject to working expenses, for a sale of the division & for a receiver & other relief:—

Held: this division of 180 miles was by the law of Canada applicable to the railway a section capable of sale in its entirety, but that the provincial ct. had no power to order a sale, part of the section being within & part without its jurisdiction.—GREY v. MANITOBA & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. OF CANADA, [1897] A. C. 254; 66 L. J. P. C. 66, P. C.

To restrain proceedings in foreign courts.—See Part XVI., Sect. 5, post.

344. Service of writ outside jurisdiction—Effect of—Jurisdiction not extended.—COOKNEY v. ANDERSON, No. 340, ante.

345. ——— ——— ———.—Since the ct. has the same jurisdiction with regard to any contract made, or equity between, persons in this country, respecting lands or assets in a foreign country, as it has where the lands or property are situate in England, to allow service of the writ out of the jurisdiction in a case within the terms of Order xi., r. 1 (g), is not to extend the jurisdiction, but to enable the old jurisdiction to be exercised in cases where formerly this jurisdiction could not have been exercised by reason of defective rules of procedure.

In an action against (1) a Dutch corpn., trustees of a debenture deed, (2) the receivers appointed under this deed, resident in England, & (3) an English co. having property & assets in Brazil, to enforce an alleged prior equitable charge, made in England, upon property & assets in Brazil, & now vested in the first debt.:—

SUB-SECT. 2.—TRUSTS RELATING TO FOREIGN IMMOVABLES.

346. To decide existence of trust.—Testator domiciled in a British Colony left real & personal property in the colony. In an action instituted in England by the heir-at-law & next of kin of testator against persons who had taken possession of the personal & real estate in the colony of testator, all parties to the action being resident in England.

Held: the English ct. had jurisdiction in the action to determine (1) as to the title to the real estate as well as the personalty situate in the colony, the two being so mixed together under the will that they could not be dealt with separately, (2) as to whether a trust of the real estate had been created by the will or not.—*Re CLINTON, CLINTON v. 347. To enforce trust.—After two verdicts & judgments in Ireland touching the matters of a bill now brought in England to enforce a trust of lands in Ireland.

348. — Colonial land. In an action to enforce against real estate in Trinidad the trusts of a creditor's deed (which had been established by a former suit in the Ct. of Ch.), defts. were persons in whom the legal estate was outstanding, one of them being a British subject resident in Trinidad. The other defts. resided in England. An opinion was given by a barrister practising in Trinidad that the beneficial interest in the real estate there was bound by the deed. The writ had been served on those defts. who were in England:—

Held: leave could be given to serve the writ on the deft. who was in Trinidad.—JENNEY v. MACKINTOSH (1886), 33 Ch. D. 595; 55 L. T. 733; 35 W. R. 181; subsequent proceedings (1889), 61 L. T. 108, C. A.

To enforce trust—Foreign land.—Pltf. sued in a ct. in B.I., to establish his right to a share in the income derived from land situate outside B.I., but received by deft. within the jurisdiction of B.I. ct.:—Held: the suit was within the jurisdiction of the Court, there being no dispute as to title.—KASHINATH GOVIND v. ANANT SITARAMBOA (1899), 1 L. R. 24 Bom. 407.—IND.

a. — Impossibility of surrender for trust purposes.—Testator died domiciled in S., leaving heritable & movable property there, & movable & immovable property in A. His will contemplated a sale of his A. immovables by his trustees. The

A cts., applying the A. law, which did not recognise trusts with reference to immovable property in A., declared testator's will null & void in so far as it dealt with his A. immovables, & his children each took an equal share of A. estate as his necessary heirs under A. law. One daughter claimed legitim in S., which did not affect the right of her children to the fee of her share, & was paid her legitim out of testator's movable estate, in addition to her share of the A. immovable property taken by her as one of the necessary heirs. The other children of testator claimed the provisions in their favour under his testamentary writings, but maintained that they were not bound to make available for the purpose of fixing the share of the testator's

349. —.]—Testator domiciled in Scotland, & possessed of a large personal & some heritable property in Scotland & of a comparatively small personal property in England, by will made in Scotch form appointed several persons to be exors. & trustees, some of whom resided in England & some in Scotland. The trustees obtained a confirmation of the will in Scotland, & the confirmation was sealed by the English Court of Probate under Confirmation of Exors. (Scotland) Act, 1858. An infant legatee resident in England brought by his next friend an action here to administer the estate, & the writ was served upon some of the trustees in England, & (under an order) upon the Scotch trustees in Scotland. The trustees appeared without protest & took no steps to discharge the order, but obtained an order of reference to inquire whether the further prosecution of the action would be for the benefit of infant pltf.; upon which an order (not appealed from) was made for the further prosecution of the action. The trustees removed all the English personalty into Scotland before the action came on for trial:—Held: the English ct. had jurisdiction to administer the trusts of the will as to the whole estate, both Scotch & English; & as no proceedings were pending in a Scotch ct. (if such were possible) by which the interests of infant pltf. could have been equally protected, the jurisdiction was not discretionary, but the decree was a matter of course.—*EWING v. 356. Payment of mortgage debt—Out of proceeds of sale—Mortgage not complying with lex loci rei sitæ—Mortgage completed in England.]—Bkpts. deposited with a creditor the title deeds of a real estate in Scotland, accompanied with a written agreement to secure the payment of the general balance; both parties being resident in England, where the transaction itself took place. By the law of Scotland, no lien or equitable mtge. on real property is created by such a deposit:—Held: nevertheless, the contract being made in England, by contracting parties domiciled in this country, which was also the domicile of the assignees under the bkey., the estate was charged, with the equitable mtge., & the assignees were bound to pay to the creditor the amount of the proceeds of the sale of the estate.—*Re COURTNEY, Ex p. 357. ———.]—S. & Co., who were merchants in London & Shanghai, applied to the applts., who were merchants in Prussia, to open a credit on their behalf for £5,000, & offered to deposit with them as a security the title-deeds of a house at Shanghai. The negotiations were commenced verbally, when all parties were in Prussia, but were concluded, after some correspondence, by a letter written by S. & Co. to the applts. from London, inclosing the title-deeds of the house in Shanghai. Applts. accordingly accepted bills drawn by S. & Co. & payable in London. S. & Co. shortly afterwards became liquidating debtors, a considerable sum being then due to the applts. on the bills. No conveyance or memorandum of the deposit was made at the British Consulate at Shanghai, but the house remained registered in the name of S. & Co. Applts. accordingly applied for an order that the trustee in liquidation should convey the house to them. Evidence was adduced that, according to the law of Prussia, the contract was binding personally on S. & Co., but that, as the necessary formalities for perfecting the security at Shanghai had not been gone through, applts. had no mtge. or lien on the house:—Held: the contract must be governed by English law, & applts. had a good security on the house by the deposit of the deeds (MELLISH, L.J.):—Held: whether the contract was governed by English or by Prussian law, the contract was personally binding on S. & Co., & could be enforced against their trustee in liquidation; and the Ct. made an order to sell the house & pay the proceeds to applts. 358. ——— Obligation of mortgagee to produce securities for inspection—Mortgage of colonial land.]—Bill by the owner of an estate in Demerara, against an incumbrancer thereon, to restrain him from enforcing payment in this country of notes which had been given for part of the debt, on the ground that the encumbrancer could not deliver up the gross copy of the acts of hypothecation, which it was alleged was necessary to a valid discharge. The common injunction was obtained. The answer admitted that the incumbrancer had no gross copy in his possession, & that a second gross copy would not be issued by the ct. without indemnity; but it did not state for what purpose or in whose favour the indemnity was required, or that gross copies had not been actually taken out

c. in respect of the charges which deft. had upon the estate, or that any inquiries or searches had been made in reference to these questions, or that any cancellation or discharge had been entered in ct. in respect of the previous payments on account of the debt. Pltfs. & deft. had both acted with regard to the estate, in their previous dealings concerning it, without requiring the production of the grosses. The ct. dissolved the injunction upon the incumbrancer giving security to indemnify the pltfs. from any consequences arising from the absence of the grosses.

The cts. of this country will apply the general law of this country, being abstractedly just, and not exclusively founded upon any peculiar or technical rule, to questions relating to lands in a colony, where a different system of jurisprudence prevails, unless it is suggested or shown that the laws of the colony are different on the point in question; & therefore the mtgee. of an estate in Demerara was held not to be bound to produce his securities for inspection before payment.—*BENTINCK v. 359. Against subsequent assignee with notice—“Obligations” payable to bearer—Action pending in local court.—A company with an office in London, & having house property at Florence, raised, under powers in their articles, a sum of money by the issue of obligations payable to bearer, whereby they purported to bind themselves, their successors & assigns, & all their estate, property & effects, reserving the right to redeem a certain part of the obligations (to be determined by drawings) in each of eight successive years. Subsequently, by a mtge. in the Italian form, registered at Florence, the co. mtged. the property to a bank with a London office, who had notice of the obligations. The bank having taken proceedings in the tribunal at Florence to enforce their mtge., an action was brought on behalf of the holders of the obligations against the company & the bank, claiming to be mtgees. of the Florence property in priority to the bank. On motion to restrain the sale of the property:—Held: if the obligations created a charge on the co.’s property, they could not be enforced as against the bank claiming under a registered mtge. at Florence, & the matter being already before the tribunal of the country where the property was situated, this ct. would not interfere.—*NORTON v. (2) The equitable rule against clogging the equity of redemption of a mtge. applies to an English contract for an issue of debentures to

362. ——— Right to execution of legal mortgage.—By a deed of Oct. 9, 1907, a testator, in consideration of £1,000, then expressed to be owing by him to his two sisters, charged all his share & interest in an estate in the island of Dominica, West Indies, to secure the repayment of this sum, & of such further sums as should thereafter be advanced by his sisters, & he agreed to execute a legal mtge. of the property to them to secure all such principal money & interest whenever required to do so. On July 18, 1912, a further charge for £1,000 on the same property was indorsed upon the first deed. By his will testator gave all his estate wherever situated to trustees upon certain trusts, & died insolvent in 1913 without having executed any legal mtge. of the property. By the law applicable to immovables in Dominica the equitable charge was not sufficient to create a valid incumbrance upon this property.

Upon a summons issued by the two sisters in a creditors’ action for the administration of testator’s estate:—

Held: the sisters were entitled to have a legal mtge. of the foreign land executed in their favour to secure the moneys intended to be secured by the two documents. The contract was to be construed by the law of England, & the death of one of the parties could not operate to change the law by which it was to be construed & prejudice the right of the other party to have specific performance.—*Re SMITH, LAWRENCE v. 366. Injunction—To restrain disturbance of possession—Laches by vendor—Effect of decision of local court that vendor not bound.]—A. was the administrator of an estate, to one third of which each of his brothers B. & C. was entitled. In 1833 A. wrote to B. & C., offering, in order to prevent the necessity of accounts & the probability of dispute, to pay each £1,000 for his share. B. accepted the offer & C. wrote to say that whatever B. determined would meet his approbation. A. & B. acted on the contract as complete, & C. never repudiated it or asked for any accounts or explanations. B. died in 1849, & in 1850 C. & B.'s representatives commenced a suit in Chili against A. to recover their shares. Two Chilean courts in succession decided that there was a contract binding B. but not C. A., who had actively defended the suits in Chili, now came to England, & filed a bill, to restrain C. from disturbing him in the possession:—Held: (1) C.'s delay for seventeen years, & until after B.'s death, barred his right to an account according to English law & injunction granted.

(2) The contract being between three domiciled Englishmen, was governed by English law, although the principal subject-matter was landed property in Chili, & therefore the Chilean decisions were not binding upon this ct.

A contract between domiciled Englishmen relating to real estate in a foreign country, is to be determined by the lex loci, but a contract between an Englishman domiciled & resident in England & an Englishman resident in a foreign country, but not having acquired a foreign domicile, must be governed & construed by the rules of the English Law.—COOD v. 367. — To enforce implied covenant for quiet enjoyment.]—In July 1896 plffs. entered into an agreement with the defts. under which the & exclusive right to work certain lands situate in the Island of Milos & belonging to the defts. was granted to the plffs. for a period of five years; the agreement also contained a provision for a renewal of the period for three further periods of five years each.

The right conferred by this agreement was expressed to be granted for the purpose of enabling the plffs. to get & work manganese; & they were to pay by quarterly payments certain royalties therefor, & a minimum royalty was fixed.

Clause 6 provided in the event of any royalties being in arrear for three months or a breach of any of the provisions of the agreement the defts. might determine the licence & re-enter the premises.

On May 17, 1898, a further agreement was made modifying the first agreement & providing for the payment of the royalties half-yearly on Apr. 8 & Oct. 8, in each year.

A dispute having arisen between the original grantors of the lands & defts., & the former having requested plffs. to pay the royalties to them instead of to defts., plffs. on Oct. 7, declined to pay to defts. the royalties due on Oct. 8, & offered to refer the question to arbn.

Oct. 12, defts. took forcible possession of the lands & remained in possession of the same.

Oct. 18, plffs. tendered to defts. the money due, but the tender was refused.

Nov. 2, plffs. instituted this action & now moved for an injunction to restrain defts. from taking or keeping possession of the lands in question & of the machinery & stock of manganese in or about the premises.

The registered offices of plffs. & defts. respectively were situate in London:—

Held: if there was jurisdiction to grant the injunction sought for, such jurisdiction ought to be exercised with great caution; as defts. were in actual possession of the lands they ought not to be disturbed & the motion must be refused.—BLACK POINT SYNDICATE, LTD. v. 379. ——— Of rents & profits arising from foreign land—English company assignees of land subject to express obligation.]—I. Co., a co. incorporated according to the laws of the United States, issued, in 1888, debentures charged upon property in Mexico, of about seventeen million acres in extent. The debentures were secured by a covering deed made between the I. Co. of the first part, the P. Co. called the trustee, of the second part, & three persons, appointed as a committee on the part of the debenture-holders, and called the committee, of the third part. This deed purported to charge the property in Mexico, gave powers of sale & other powers to the trustee co. & the committee,

& provided that the committee might at any time, at discretion, call upon the trustee to register in Mexico the hypothecation of the lands to be given by the I. Co. to the trustee. This registration had never been made by the trustee or demanded by the committee. It was admitted that by the law of Mexico the charge on the land had no validity unless registered. The I. Co. were holders of some of these debentures. In May 1889 the M. L. C. Co. was incorporated in England to take over the assets & liabilities of the I. Co. The property of the I. Co. was transferred to the M. L. C. Co., subject to the rights of the debenture-holders. The transfer to the M. L. C. Co. was duly registered in Mexico, & gave that co. a complete legal title according to Mexican law. The land comprised in the debenture trust deed was wholly undeveloped, & produced no income. The M. L. C. Co., being unable to pay the interest on the debentures, proposed a scheme for the conversion of the debentures into preference shares. This scheme was approved by a majority of the debenture-holders, at a meeting held in Oct. 1889, but had not been accepted by the M. I. Co. Early in 1890 the M. I. Co. commenced an action in the Q. B. Div. against the I. Co. for the half-year's interest unpaid on Jan. 1, 1890, & in Feb. 1891 the Ct. of Appeal gave judgment for the pl'tfs. in that action. On Nov. 4, 1891, the M. I. Co. commenced this action in the Ch. Div. to enforce the security of their debenture, & they now moved for a receiver of the rents & profits of the land in Mexico, & the proceeds of sale thereof, & of certain shares & moneys received by the M. L. C. Co. from other cos. for sale of lands alleged to be comprised in the security.

Held: as the deft. co., being subject to the jurisdiction of this ct., had taken a conveyance of the land with notice of & expressly subject to the pl'tfs.' charge, the ct. had jurisdiction to prevent their making an unconscionable use of the Mexican law or gaining any advantage by having registered their transfer before the charge of which they had notice: Seemle: it had jurisdiction to appoint the receiver asked for.—MERCANTILE INVESTMENT & GENERAL TRUST CO. v. 380. — Effect of—Interference with receiver.]

Held: (1) the existence of the charge created by the debenture though valid according to English law, did not entitle the debenture-holders to prevent P. & Co., who were unsecured creditors, from asserting & enforcing any rights given them by French law against this French debt, there being no equity in favour of the debenture-holders as against P. & Co.; the debt due from the French firm must be treated as being situate in France & subject to French law, & P. & Co. could not be prevented, at the suit of the debenture-holders, from taking any proceedings the law of France allowed for recovering their debt out of this French asset, & the attachment which alone was recognised by the law of France ought to prevail over the title of the debenture-holders; (2) the appointment of the receivers made no difference; for though the Ct. can appoint receivers over property out of the jurisdiction, the receiver is not put in possession of foreign property by the mere order of the Ct.; something else has to be done & until what is necessary has been done in accordance with foreign law, any person, not a party to the suit, who takes proceedings in a foreign country is not guilty of contempt on the ground of interfering with the receivers' possession or otherwise, & for this purpose no distinction can be drawn between a foreigner & a British subject.—*Re MAUDSLAY, SONS & FIELD, MAUDSLAY v. SECT. 3.—ALIENATION AND ASSIGNMENT OF IMMOVABLES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

381. Validity of title—Governed by lex situs.]—

The lex loci rei sitæ governs exclusively the tenure, title & descent of immovable property.—FENTON v. LIVINGSTONE (1859), 33 L. T. O. S. 335; 23 J. P. 579; 5 Jur. N. S. 1183; 7 W. R. 671; 3 Macq. 497, H. L.

382. — — —.]—(1) It is established as a general principle, that a legal title, duly acquired in any one country, is a good title all the world over. Duly to acquire a legal title to real estate, such legal title must be according to the lex loci rei sitæ. The due acquisition of a legal title to movables may give rise to the question whether the lex loci contractus, or the law of the country wherein the contracting parties may be domiciled, or even the lex loci rei sitæ, shall prevail. Where all these circumstances are combined in the acquisition of a legal title to a movable, such title is, beyond doubt, good all the world over.

(2) A judgment of a foreign ct. is conclusive, inter partes, where there is nothing on the face of the judgment which a ct. here can inquire into. The cts. of this country may, however, disregard a foreign judgment, inter partes, if it appears on the record:—(a) to be manifestly contrary to natural justice; or (b) to be based on domestic legislation not recognised by foreign countries; or (c) to be founded on a misapprehension of what is the law of this country; or (d) to be founded upon a distinct refusal to recognise the laws of the country under which the title to the subject-matter of litigation arose.

Seemle: a foreign judgment even in rem may be examined & disregarded, if it appears on the face of it to have been founded on a perverse disregard of English law in a case properly subject to that law by the comity of nations.

(3) The same rules apply to judgments of Colonial cts.

(4) A ship, the property of British subjects, was duly mortgaged, in Great Britain, to other British subjects, & being in the mtgors.' possession, proceeded to New Orleans. Whilst there it was attached by creditors of the mtgors. resident in New Orleans, &, after due intervention & hearing of the British mtgees., before & by the cts. of Louisiana, sold under process of the ct., to satisfy the attaching creditors, to a British subject, who had notice of the mtgees.' intervention. 384. Bankruptcy—Real property in England.]—To an action on a judgment of the Supreme Ct. of the Cape of Good Hope, deft. pleaded in bar that, before the recovery of the judgment, by an ordinance of that colony relating to the administration & distribution of insolvents' estates, it was enacted, that the Supreme Ct. might, upon petition of the insolvent, accept the surrender of his estate, & place it under sequestration in the hands of the Master of the Ct.; & that further execution of any judgment against the insolvent or his estate should, after the order for sequestration had been lodged, be stayed during the pendency of such sequestration; & that all actions pending against him for any debt or demand provable against the estate, & all proceedings therein upon any order being made for the sequestration of such estate, should, be stayed. The plea then stated the petition of deft., the surrender of his estate, that it had been placed under sequestration, that plffs. proved the amount of the judgment against deft.'s estate, that the estate was distributed, & that plffs. received 1s. 6d. in the pound on the amount of the judgment debt:—Held: the plea was bad.

It seems to be clear that the law of the Cape of Good Hope cannot be taken to affect the debtor's real estate out of that country, which, being extra-territorial, is also out of the jurisdiction of the Ct. where the judgment was obtained (PARKE, J.).—*FRITH v. 389. Assignment complying with lex situs—Not complying with lex loci contractus—Conveyance of sporting rights over land in Scotland—Not under seal.]—By Scots law an instrument under seal is not necessary for the conveyance of a sporting right, & therefore the stipulations of an unsealed lease made between Englishmen in England of a sporting right over land in Scotland may be enforced by action in the English Courts, as the provision of the law of England that an instrument under seal is necessary for the conveyance of a right to an incorporeal hereditament, is not part of the lex fori. Even if such lease were invalid for want of a seal, the lessee, after having had an enjoyment of the right, could not set up the invalidity as a defence to an action for breach of a stipulation in the lease to leave a good breeding stock of game on the ground at the termination of the lease.—*ADAMS v. an American pass, & all American documents:—Held: if the owner really resided in England such papers could not protect his vessel, for, if the owner was resident in England, & the voyage was such as an English merchant could not engage in, an American, resident in England, & carrying on trade, could not protect his ship merely by putting American documents on board, & his interest must stand or fall according to the determination which the ct. could make on the national character of such a person.

(3) If a person goes into another country & engages in trade, & resides there, he is by the law of nations to be considered as a merchant of that country. It is illegal in any person owing an allegiance, though temporary, to trade with the public enemy. The character that is gained by residence ceases by residence. It is an adventitious character which no longer adheres to him, from the moment that he puts himself in motion, bonâ fide to quit the country, sine animo revertendi.

(4) The character of consul does not protect that of merchant united in same person. Whether he is a general merchant, or not is totally immaterial, if it be his first adventure he must be taken as a merchant, & can be considered in no other character.—THE INDIAN CHIEF (1801), 3 Ch. The ship Ann sailing under American colours was seized in Aug. 1812, in the Thames. The master, who was sole owner, described himself as a British subject & claimed the ship. He was a native of Scotland, where his wife & family resided, but had himself been admitted as an American citizen about 16 years before, upon taking an oath that he had been sailing out of an American port for two years; from 1799 till 1805 he had been connected with a house of trade at Glasgow, which had an establishment at N.Y. & another at Charlestown, & had occasionally resided at each of the last-mentioned places; he had purchased the vessel at public auction in America & had made three voyages in her, the first two from Charlestown to Kingston in Jamaica, returning each time in ballast; & the last from Charlestown to the Thames:—Held: in regard to the ship he was to be considered as an American subject.—THE ANN (1813), 1 Dods. 221.

266. Residence in one country—Business visits to another country.]—Question respecting the national character of a fishing adventure, carried on by a native Dutchman who had become by domicile a subject of Prussia, & had purchased the vessel, formerly a Dutch vessel, in Feb., at Emden. He had since been employed in fishing off the Dutch coast, having sold his cargoes to English ships, & having once or twice resorted to Dutch ports, not for the purpose of selling his cargoes, but merely to procure bait.

Annotation:—Refd. The Berlin, [1914] P. 265.

267. —Business in another country—Enemy subject.]—The Crown can claim condemnation of goods seized in transit of an enemy subject having a house of business in a neutral country or in British territory, but who himself resides in an enemy country. Such enemy subject, resident at Hamburg, cannot set up his commercial domicile in a neutral country at Khartoum against the claim of the Crown for condemnation of goods belonging to the firm of which the said enemy subject was a partner, shipped from Khartoum & seized by the Crown at Liverpool. Although a person carrying on business in an enemy country has his commercial domicile there, the converse of the rule does not extend to the case of a merchant residing in a hostile country, & having his house of trade in a neutral country.—THE CLAN GRANT (PART CARGO EX) (1915), 31 T. 268. —After the outbreak of war with Germany certain goods belonging to a partnership firm at Buenos Aires, & shipped before the war on a British ship, were seized as a prize. All the partners of the firm were Germans resident at Antwerp, who had been expelled from Belgium as enemy subjects shortly after the outbreak of war:—

Held: although a subject of a belligerent State can acquire a commercial domicile in a neutral

State which will protect his goods captured at sea from condemnation residence in the neutral State is an essential condition of such domicile; &, as none of the enemy partners of the firm were resident in the Argentine Republic at the time of seizure, the goods must be regarded as enemy property & subject to condemnation.—THE HYPATIA, [1917] P. 36; 86 L. 269. British & German firm trading in China—Firm registered at German consulate—British partners resident in China—German partners resident elsewhere.]—A firm consisting of two British & two German subjects carrying on business at Shanghai was registered at the German Consulate as a German firm in accordance with the regulations whereby the European communities, to which China has granted extraterritorial privileges, are governed by the laws of their respective countries. The two British partners, who resided in Shanghai, were also registered as British subjects at the British Consulate. Neither of the German partners resided at Shanghai. Goods belonging to the firm having been seized as prize, they were claimed as being the property of the firm as neutrals, & alternatively as the individual property of the partners as neutral and British subjects:—Held: (1) the firm could not be treated as a neutral house of trade, & for all purposes of prize it must be regarded as a German firm carrying on business in a German colony; (2) none of the partners had acquired, or could acquire, a neutral commercial domicile, & the shares in the proceeds of the goods attributable to the German partners must be condemned; (3) as regards the shares of the British partners, the case must be adjourned for further evidence as to what measures, if any, were taken by them to sever their connection with the firm on the outbreak of war.—THE EUMAEUS (1915), 85 L. Part III.—Nature of Property.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

290. “Movable” & “Immovable” explained.]—Testator who died in 1888, domiciled in England, bequeathed property, which included mtges. on freehold in Ontario, for charitable purposes. The mtges. contained covenants to pay the money thereby secured. At the date of testator's death the Charitable Uses Act, 1735, then in force, extended to Ontario, & would admittedly have invalidated the bequest of the mtges. had testator been domiciled there :—Held : mtges. on land are deemed to be immovables & not movables, & governed by the lex rei sitæ, & therefore the bequest of the mtges. was a gift of impure personalty & was invalid.

The terms “movable” & “immovable” are not technical terms in English law, though they are often used, & conveniently used, in considering questions between English law & foreign systems which differ from that law (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).

The division into movable & immovable property is no part of the law either of England or of Canada, & is only called into operation in England when the English Cts. have to determine rights between domiciled Englishmen and persons domiciled in countries which do not adopt the

SECT. 2.—HOW DETERMINED.

291. Immovable—Scottish heritable bond—By Scottish law.]—Though the personal estate of a Scotsman dying domiciled in England, must be distributed according to the law of England, yet that shall not affect or interfere with the succession to his real estate in Scotland. Therefore, where for securing a sum of money borrowed, a heritable bond is granted, by which the land in Scotland is rendered liable as the principal debtor there, & the heir pays the bond by sale of part of the estate, being at the same time one of the next of kin and administrator, he shall not come for relief upon the personal funds in England, as primarily applicable to the payment of such a debt.—*DRUMMOND v. 297. —.—.—.—.]—The rule that the law of the matrimonial domicile applies to a contract in consideration of marriage will yield to an express stipulation that some other law shall apply, or to other sufficient indications that the parties contracted with reference to some other law.

Scottish "heritable bonds" must be regarded by an English ct. as immovable property & therefore governed by Scots law.

When it is said that a contract, valid by the law of the country in which it is made, cannot be enforced in Eng., and because it is contrary to public policy or the policy of English law, it is meant that the contract conflicts with what are deemed in England to be essential public or moral interests—not merely that it would be invalid under English law.

On the marriage in Scotland of a domiciled Englishman with a domiciled Scotswoman the wife's property, which consisted mainly of Scottish heritable bonds, was settled by a marriage contract executed in Scotland in Scottish form. By this contract the trustees, most of whom were domiciled Englishmen, & who were also the trustees of a contemporaneous settlement of the husband's property in English form, were to hold the wife's property upon trust, in case the husband should survive the wife, to pay the income to him during his life, declaring that all payments to him "shall be strictly alimentary, & shall not be assignable nor liable to arrestment or any other legal diligence at the instance of his creditors." The husband survived the wife, having mtged. his life interest under the Scotch contract to mtgees. in England. He had always retained his English domicile.

By the law of Scotland such a restricted life interest, so far as it does not exceed in amount a reasonable provision, is valid as against creditors, other than alimentary creditors, & in such a case, if the husband fails to maintain the children of the marriage, they are entitled to attach the alimentary provision made for them.

Upon a summons by the trustees to determine the rights of the mtgees. as against the husband & the only child of the marriage.

Held: having regard to all the circumstances & particularly the nature of the limitations in the Scotch contract, it must be taken to have been the intention of the parties that that contract should be governed, not by the law of the English matrimonial domicile but by Scots law, & the alimentary provision to the husband, being valid by that law, must be treated as valid by the English cts., & consequently valid as against the husband's mtgees., there being nothing in the provision contrary to the policy of English law in the proper sense of that term.—Re FITZGERALD, SURMAN v. FITZGERALD, [1904] 1 Ch. 573; 73 L. J. Ch. 436; 90 L. T. 266; 52 W. R. 432; 20 T. L. R. 332; 48 Sol. Jo. 349, C. A.

299. — English leaseholds—By English law.]—Testator, a French subject, having his domicile of origin in France, & at the respective dates of his will & death, domiciled in France, made, in 1890 in France, a holograph will in the French form & language, whereby he appointed B. his universal legatee, upon condition that he satisfied certain legacies therein mentioned, & settled the testator's debts. Among the legacies comprised in the will was a specific bequest to C. of testator's beneficial interest in a leasehold house in England. The will was not attested by any witness, but was valid according to the law of France.

Testator died in 1895, & in 1897 letters of administration, with the will, or a translation thereof, annexed, were granted by the Probate Division to B.

Held: although a leasehold interest in land was a chattel interest, yet for the purposes of testamentary disposition a chattel interest in land must be treated as immovable property, & as governed by the law of the country in which it was situated; & the property in the present case was consequently not disposed of by the unattested will.—PEPIN v. BRUYÈRE, [1902] 1 Ch. 24; 71 L. J. Ch. 39; 85 L. T. 461; 50 W. R. 34; 46 Sol. Jo. 29, C. A.

B. died domiciled abroad, leaving an English will, by which she disposed of her personal estate. On the death of A., who was survived by C. & D., the Crown claimed from B.'s exors. legacy duty in respect of B.'s third share of the rent-charge:—Held: such duty was payable, for that the interest in the rent-charge which passed to B.'s exors. was, by the Wills Act, 1837, an estate pur autre vie, applicable by law in the same manner as personal estate, & therefore fell within the Legacy Duty Act, 1796, & it was not exempt from duty by reason of B.'s foreign domicile, inasmuch as, although it was by law applicable in the same manner as personal estate, it was not by any of the statutes made personal estate, but was realty not following the person.—*CHATFIELD v. By a mtge. by way of settlement, in pursuance of such bond, A. mtged., inter alia, the estates & pennis, & appurtenances, & all & every the cattle, stock, & plantation implements.

Held: cattle & stock upon the estate & pennis were not included in the bond, & though the mtge. deed, made in pursuance of such bond, was by way of marriage settlement, yet it could not enlarge the provisions of the bond.

Cattle & stock upon a plantation or penn in Jamaica are, by the law of the Island, personal estate, & not affixed to the freehold.—TURNER v. BARCLAY (1854), 9 Moo. P. C. C. 264; 14 E. R. 297, P. C.

305. — Proceeds in specie removed from locus rei sitæ.]—Whether the ct. will enforce against debtors, having in their hands proceeds of the sale of land situated out of the jurisdiction, the equities to which such proceeds would have been subject if the land had been situated within the jurisdiction, depends upon the question whether the contract which is sought to be enforced was or was not, by the lex loci rei sitæ, capable of being fulfilled.

If a contract relating to land situated out of the jurisdiction be one which the lex loci rei sitæ renders incapable of fulfilment, the ct. will not enforce the contract against the proceeds of a sale of such land coming to the possession of parties within the jurisdiction, though they take such proceeds bound

The rights of the parties interested in the proceeds of the sale of land situated out of the jurisdiction do not cease to be governed by the lex loci rei sitæ by the circumstance of such proceeds being brought in specie within the jurisdiction.

A law permitting alienation of land, only upon the terms of the proceeds being applied in a particular manner, is a restraint upon alienation; & restraints upon the alienation of land are always governed by the lex loci rei sitæ.—*WATERHOUSE v. 306. — — — Proceeds not subject to Mortmain Acts.]—The Royal Geographical Society & the Royal Society being corps., the one for the improvement & diffusion of geographical knowledge, & the other for improving natural knowledge, are charities as defined by 43 Eliz. (c. 4), & are within the Statute of Mortmain.

Testator bequeathed legacies to the societies, & other undoubted charities, & after directing that all the charitable legacies should be paid out of his pure personal estate, he gave the residue of his real & personal estate to his exors., the plffs. His property consisted of pure personalty, leaseholds, in this country, & a small real estate in Madeira, which was sold after his death. The pure personalty was insufficient to pay in full the charitable legacies.

Held: (1) the charities were not entitled to the pure personalty in priority to the debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, & costs of suit; these were first payable ratably out of the pure & mixed personalty; & the charities would then take the residue of pure personalty; (2) the proceeds of sale of the Madeira estate were not pure personalty; but, inasmuch as it was foreign realty, it was not subject to the Mortmain Act, & the charitable legacies were entitled to a claim upon it for so much of their legacies as should remain unpaid after the above application of the pure personalty. — *BEAUMONT v. 307. — — — Immovable sold under special legislation—Rights of curator ad bona of foreign lunatic.]—A fund of upwards of £13,000 Consols, representing the proceeds of sale of real estate, the absolute property of a foreign lunatic, which had been sold by order of the ct. under the powers of the Partition Act, 1868, stood in ct. to the credit of the lunatic. The curator ad bona of the lunatic, duly appointed according to the law of the country in which the lunatic resided, who according to that law had the fullest powers & control over the lunatic's real & personal estate, petitioned for the transfer of the fund to him:—Held: the fund, as representative of real estate sold under special legislation, was subject to the laws of this country relative to real estate, & must remain in ct. as a fund which might devolve upon the heir-at-law of the lunatic, & the curator ad bona was only entitled to receipt of the dividends.—*GRIMWOOD v. 309. — — — — —.]—S., testator in this action, who died in Sept. 1880, domiciled in England, for many years previous to his death carried on the business of sheep-breeding in partnership with his brother R. in New Zealand. Part of the partnership property consisted of a freehold estate of 29,000 acres in New Zealand known as the Milbourne estate. By articles of partnership dated Feb. 14, 1879, made between S. & R., it was agreed that the Milbourne estate should be forthwith sold in the manner which the parties should mutually agree upon, & the articles contained provisions for the case of no agreement & for carrying on the partnership until sale. R. died in Jan. 1880. S. was entitled to four-sevenths of the partnership property. No sale of the estate was made in R.'s lifetime or in that of S. By his will S. gave his four-sevenths shares in the Milbourne estate to trustees upon trust to sell, with powers of management till sale, & subject to the payment of an annuity, & of the income of one-seventh to the widow of R. during her life, to divide the proceeds & the produce till sale among thirteen charities. An administration action was commenced in 1881. The New Zealand property had never been sold, but the income had from time to time been paid into ct. Under an order made in Apr. 1888, the funds then in ct. had been divided, & legacy duty had been paid upon the moneys arising from the New Zealand estate. The duty had been paid under an arrangement that it should be repaid if it was ultimately decided not to be payable. The Governors of the London Hospital, who had been appointed to represent the other charities, presented a petition asking for distribution of the fund which had accumulated in ct. since Apr. 1888, without payment of legacy duty, on the ground that being proceeds of real estate in New Zealand, it was not subject to English legacy duty:—Held: S.'s interest in the property whether regarded as a share in land agreed to be sold by the articles of partnership or as a share in partnership property, was personal & movable property, & therefore subject to legacy duty according to the law of testator's domicile.—*Re STOKES, STOKES v. will gave all his real & personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale, & conversion, upon certain trusts inter alia for his children for their respective lives, with remainders to their respective issue. These trusts were as the ct. held on the evidence to a great extent invalid under Italian law as regarded land in Italy, the result being that the tenants for life took their shares absolutely. Part of the land in Sardinia had been sold by the trustees:—Held: (1) whether the trustees or the children took the land, as heirs according to the Italian law, the trustees had power under that law, & it was their duty to sell the land, & the proceeds of sale must be held by them upon the trusts declared by the will; (2) the rents of the unsold land until sale would devolve according to Italian law, but that it was competent to & legal for the children to elect that those rents should be applied as if they had been income resulting from the proceeds of the sale.—Re PIERCY, WHITWHAM v. 312. — Interest of proceeds—Treated as personality.—A portion of an entailed estate was sold by the heir in possession for the redemption of the land-tax, & the surplus-money was invested in terms of the statute. The heir of entail next entitled sold for valuable consideration his reversionary & contingent right to the interest of this fund, & assigned it to the purchaser by a deed prepared in the English form, & executed in England, where the parties were domiciled, but without the solemnities required by the law of Scotland.

Held: the interest of the money was movable, & was well assigned by the English deed, comitate gentium.—SCOTT v. ALLNUTT (1831), 2 Dow & Cl. 404; 6 E. R. 778, H. L.

These she sealed up, & left in his iron chest for safety. Some time before his bkptcy. he told one of the directors of the co. that he had so deposited the shares & the director told the board the circumstance, on the morning of Dec. 7. On the evening of the same day, the act of bkptcy. was committed:—

Held: the shares were neither in the reputed ownership nor in the order & disposition of the bkpt.

SECT. 1.—GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF JURISDICTION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—TITLE TO FOREIGN IMMOVABLES DIRECTLY IN ISSUE.

314. General rule—Application of foreign law.—The incidents to real estate, the right of alienating or limiting it, & the course of succession to it, depend entirely on the law of the country where the estate is situated.

An estate in Sicily was granted to an English subject, which he disposed of by his will upon certain trusts:—Held: as he could not subject his successor to a course of succession different from that which accorded with the grant & the law of Sicily, so neither could he subject the successor, as such, to any duties or obligations different from the duties & obligations which by the grant & the law of Sicily were annexed to his holding.—NELSON (EARL) v. BRIDPORT (LORD) (1846), 8 Beav. 547; 9 L. T. O. S. 471; 10 Jur. 1043; 50 E. R. 215.

315. — Colonial land.—Statute of Mortmain, 9 Geo. 2 (cap. 36) does not extend to the island of Grenada, in the West Indies; the object of the statute being wholly political; it having grown out of local circumstances, & being intended to have only a local operation.

PART IV. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.

314 i. General rule—Application of lex loci rei sitæ.—Land in Upper C. was held in common by J. & E. & three others. E. became a nun in M., by which, according to Lower C. law, she became civilly dead as regarded her property; she afterwards died there:—Held: E. had not lost her share of the land by becoming a nun.—STUART v. PRENTISS (1861), 20 U. C. R. 513.—CAN.

314 ii. — — —.—Immovable property is governed by lex loci rei sitæ.—BARINDS v. GREEN (1911), 16 B. C. R.

Donations inter vivos in Mortmain are not prohibited by the statute, but regulated; the statute requiring enrolment in the Ct. of Ch.; by which is meant the Ct. of Ch., in England, where there is an ancient office for the enrolment of deeds, & there being no enrolment offices annexed to the Cts. of Ch. in the colonies.

Regularly, all questions of title to land in the colonies are to be decided, in the first instance, by cts. of local judicature, from which an appeal lies to the King in Council.—A.-G. v. STEWART (1817), 2 Mer. 143; 35 E. R. 895.

Lands in the plantations are no more under the jurisdiction of this ct., than lands in Scotland. Demurring for want of jurisdiction is informal and improper; a deft. should plead to the jurisdiction.—ROBERDEAU v. ROUS (1738), 1 Atk. 543; 26 E. R. 342, L. C.

319. ——— ———.]—Where land in a colony is vested in the Queen by a Colonial Act for the public purposes of the colony the Petitions of Right Act, 1860, does not give jurisdiction to the Ct. of Ch. to entertain proceedings against the Crown as a trustee of such land present within the jurisdiction of the Ct.

By a Canal Act of the Provincial Legislature of Canada, land taken for a canal was vested in the Queen. By a second Provincial Act the land so taken was vested in the officers of Her Majesty's Ordnance; & it was enacted that so much of the land taken as had not been used for the canal should be restored to the owners. By a third Provincial Act the lands were re-vested in the Queen for the purposes of the colony, & subject to future colonial legislation.

To a petition of right by suppliants claiming the restoration of certain lands taken for the canal from their predecessors in title, but not used, a demurrer was allowed on the ground that the cts. of this country had no jurisdiction.—Re HOLMES (1861), 2 John & H. 527; 31 L. 339. ——*As a general rule an English ct. will not adjudicate on questions relating to the title to or the right to the possession of immovable property out of the jurisdiction of that ct. ; & the exceptions to this rule depend on the existence between the parties to the suit in England of some personal obligation arising out of contract or implied contract, fiduciary relation, or fraud, or other conduct which in the view of an English Ct. of Equity would be unconscionable, & do not depend for their existence on the law of the locus of the immovable property. In 1831 D. entered into a marriage contract with T. in France, both of them being domiciled French subjects. Pl'tf., the only son of this marriage, alleged that according to French law T. thereby became entitled to one-half of the after-acquired property of D. & to a life interest in the other half of the property. In 1836 D. went to India, & in 1839 went through a form of marriage with X., on whom & on others he by a settlement made in 1865, of which defts. were trustees, conferred interests in immovable property in Madras. D. died in 1885 & T. died in 1890. In 1893 an official in Madras, who was not a party to the English action mentioned below, took out letters of administration in India of the estate of T. which vested all her movable & immovable property in Madras in him. In 1907 pl'tf. took out letters of administration of the estate of T. in England. Pl'tf. & defts. being all in England, pl'tf. in an English action sought to impeach the settlement of 1865 as being contrary to the law of France & in contravention of his rights thereunder :—Held : the action ought not to be entertained.—*DESCHAMPS v. In a suit where the subject was immovable property situate in Scotland, & the contract sought to be enforced was entered into & to be performed in Scotland, & defts. were domiciled in Scotland:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit; (2) upon questions of jurisdiction, Scotland is a foreign country; (3) the statutory power of serving a debt. out of the jurisdiction, & proceeding in his absence, did not give the ct. extended jurisdiction so as to enable it to determine the subject-matter of the suit; (4) where debt. had been served with a subpoena out of the jurisdiction, he was entitled to demur for want of jurisdiction, instead of moving to discharge the order for personal service abroad.—COOKNEY v. (2) If a pltf. in this ct. makes out a case which entitles him to a declaration of lien upon the real estate of a debt. out of the jurisdiction, this ct. will make it, & in some cases will grant a receiver; but it will leave pltf. to make it available or not, as he can, by means of the foreign tribunals.

342. — Good title acquired by foreign law.]— Indian Registration Act XX. of 1866, makes void all instruments relating to real estate in India which ought to have been registered under the Indian Registration Act, XVI. of 1864, but were not so registered, & destroys all equities arising out of them. A. being resident at Madras, in 1865 executed a deed by which he conveyed land in India to pltf. & covenanted for further assurance. The deed was not registered under the Indian Registration Act, 1864, which provides that if such a deed be not registered it shall not be received in evidence in any ct. in India. In 1866 A. mtgd. the same land to defts., who had notice of pltf.' conveyance, & defts. registered the mtge. deed under the Indian Registration Act, 1866. Pltf. filed a bill to enforce the covenant for further assurance against defts.:—Held: pltf. had no equity against defts., & the bill was dismissed.—Semble: independently of the operation of the Indian Registration Act, 1866, as pltf.' deed was forbidden by the Indian Registration Act, 1864, to be received in evidence in India, it could not be sued on in England either as a deed of conveyance or as a deed of covenant for further assurance.—HICKS v. In an action instituted in England by the heir-at-law & next of kin of testator against persons who had taken possession of the personal & real estate in the colony of testator, all parties to the action being resident in England.

Held: the English ct. had jurisdiction in the action to determine (1) as to the title to the real estate as well as the personalty situate in the colony, the two being so mixed together under the will that they could not be dealt with separately, (2) as to whether a trust of the real estate had been created by the will or not.—*Re CLINTON, CLINTON v. surrender for trust—Testator died domiciled in S., leaving heritable & movable property there, & movable & immovable property in A. His will contemplated a sale of his A. immovables by his trustees. The

349. —.—Testator domiciled in Scotland, & possessed of a large personal & some heritable property in Scotland & of a comparatively small personal property in England, by will made in Scotch form appointed several persons to be exors. & trustees, some of whom resided in England & some in Scotland. The trustees obtained a confirmation of the will in Scotland, & the confirmation was sealed by the English Court of Probate under Confirmation of Exors. (Scotland) Act, 1858. An infant legatee resident in England brought by his next friend an action here to administer the estate, & the writ was served upon some of the trustees in England, & (under an order) upon the Scotch trustees in Scotland. The trustees appeared without prote. & took no steps to discharge the order, but obtained an order of reference to inquire whether the further prosecution of the action would be for the benefit of infant pltf.; upon which an order (not appealed from) was made for the further prosecution of the action. The trustees removed all the English personalty into Scotland before the action came on for trial:—Held: the English ct. had jurisdiction to administer the trusts of the will as to the whole estate, both Scotch & English; & as no proceedings were pending in a Scotch ct. (if such were possible) by which the interests of infant pltf. could have been equally protected, the jurisdiction was not discretionary, but the decree was a matter of course.—*EWING v. Mortgage of Island of Sark.]—Bill that debt. might redeem a mtge. of the island of Sark, or be foreclosed. Debt. pleaded to the jurisdiction of the ct., that the island was part of the Duchy of Normandy, & had laws of their own, & were under the jurisdiction of the cts. of Guernsey. Plea overruled, because the mtge. was of the whole island, & for that debt. was served here, for equitas agit in personam.—TOLLER v. CARTERET (1705), 2 Vern. 494; 1 Eq. Cas. By the law of Scotland, no lien or equitable mtge. on real property is created by such a deposit:—Held: nevertheless, the contract being made in England, by contracting parties domiciled in this country, which was also the domicile of the assignees under the bkcy., the estate was charged, with the equitable mtge., & the assignees were bound to pay to the creditor the amount of the proceeds of the sale of the estate.—*Re COURTNEY, Ex p. 357. ——— ——— ———.]—S. & Co., who were merchants in London & Shanghai, applied to the applts., who were merchants in Prussia, to open a credit on their behalf for £5,000, & offered to deposit with them as a security the title-deeds of a house at Shanghai. The negotiations were commenced verbally, when all parties were in Prussia, but were concluded, after some correspondence, by a letter written by S. & Co. to the applts. from London, inclosing the title-deeds of the house in Shanghai. Applts. accordingly accepted bills drawn by S. & Co. & payable in London. S. & Co. shortly afterwards became liquidating debtors, a considerable sum being then due to the applts. on the bills. No conveyance or memorandum of the deposit was made at the British Consulate at Shanghai, but the house remained registered in the name of S. & Co. Applts. accordingly applied for an order that the trustee in liquidation should convey the house to them. Evidence was adduced that, according to the law of Prussia, the contract was binding personally on S. & Co., but that, as the necessary formalities for perfecting the security at Shanghai had not been gone through, applts. had no mtge. or lien on the house:—Held: the contract must be governed by English law, & applts. had a good security on the house by the deposit of the deeds (MELLISH, L.J.):—Held: whether the contract was governed by English or by Prussian law, the contract was personally binding on S. & Co., & could be enforced against their trustee in liquidation; and the Ct. made an order to sell the house & pay the proceeds to applts. 358. ——— Obligation of mortgagee to produce securities for inspection—Mortgage of colonial land.]—Bill by the owner of an estate in Demerara, against an incumbrancer thereon, to restrain him from enforcing payment in this country of notes which had been given for part of the debt, on the ground that the encumbrancer could not deliver up the gross copy of the acts of hypothecation, which it was alleged was necessary to a valid discharge. The common injunction was obtained. The answer admitted that the incumbrancer had no gross copy in his possession, & that a second gross copy would not be issued by the ct. without indemnity; but it did not state for what purpose or in whose favour the indemnity was required, or that gross copies had not been actually taken out

c. Action for redemption—In domestic court—Mortgage of foreign lands.]—A creditor who has recovered judgment in M., & who has a lien on the lands of the judgment debtor there, cannot maintain in O. an action for redemption of a mtge. on such lands in M. as are subject to the lien.—*HENDERSON v. in respect of the charges which deft. had upon the estate, or that any inquiries or searches had been made in reference to these questions, or that any cancellation or discharge had been entered in ct. in respect of the previous payments on account of the debt. Pltfs. & deft. had both acted with regard to the estate, in their previous dealings concerning it, without requiring the production of the grosses. The ct. dissolved the injunction upon the incumbrancer giving security to indemnify the pltfs. from any consequences arising from the absence of the grosses.

The cts. of this country will apply the general law of this country, being abstractedly just, and not exclusively founded upon any peculiar or technical rule, to questions relating to lands in a colony, where a different system of jurisprudence prevails, unless it is suggested or shown that the laws of the colony are different on the point in question; & therefore the mtgee. of an estate in Demerara was held not to be bound to produce his securities for inspection before payment.—*BENTINCK v. 359. Against subsequent assignee with notice—“Obligations” payable to bearer—Action pending in local court.—A company with an office in London, & having house property at Florence, raised, under powers in their articles, a sum of money by the issue of obligations payable to bearer, whereby they purported to bind themselves, their successors & assigns, & all their estate, property & effects, reserving the right to redeem a certain part of the obligations (to be determined by drawings) in each of eight successive years. Subsequently, by a mtge. in the Italian form, registered at Florence, the co. mtged. the property to a bank with a London office, who had notice of the obligations. The bank having taken proceedings in the tribunal at Florence to enforce their mtge., an action was brought on behalf of the holders of the obligations against the company & the bank, claiming to be mtgees. of the Florence property in priority to the bank. On motion to restrain the sale of the property:—Held: if the obligations created a charge on the co.’s property, they could not be enforced as against the bank claiming under a registered mtge. at Florence, & the matter being already before the tribunal of the country where the property was situated, this ct. would not interfere.—*NORTON v. 361. Contract to give legal mortgage—On foreign land—Treated as English mortgage.—(1) An English contract to give a mtge. on foreign land, although the mtge. has to be perfected according to the lex situs, is a contract to give a mtge., which, inter partes, is to be treated as an English mtge. subject to such rights of redemption & other equities as the law of England regards as necessarily incident to a mtge.

(2) The equitable rule against clogging the equity of redemption of a mtge. applies to an English contract for an issue of debentures to secure a loan, & will be enforced against a contracting party in the jurisdiction although the floating security to be created by the debentures comprises foreign land where the clog doctrine is possibly not recognised.—*BRITISH SOUTH AFRICA CO. v. 362. — Right to execution of legal mortgage.—By a deed of Oct. 9, 1907, a testator, in consideration of £1,000, then expressed to be owing by him to his two sisters, charged all his share & interest in an estate in the island of Dominica, West Indies, to secure the repayment of this sum, & of such further sums as should thereafter be advanced by his sisters, & he agreed to execute a legal mtge. of the property to them to secure all such principal money & interest whenever required to do so. On July 18, 1912, a further charge for £1,000 on the same property was indorsed upon the first deed. By his will testator gave all his estate wherever situated to trustees upon certain trusts, & died insolvent in 1913 without having executed any legal mtge. of the property. By the law applicable to immovables in Dominica the equitable charge was not sufficient to create a valid incumbrance upon this property.

Upon a summons issued by the two sisters in a creditors’ action for the administration of testator’s estate:—

Held: the sisters were entitled to have a legal mtge. of the foreign land executed in their favour to secure the moneys intended to be secured by the two documents. The contract was to be construed by the law of England, & the death of one of the parties could not operate to change the law by which it was to be construed & prejudice the right of the other party to have specific performance.—*Re SMITH, LAWRENCE v. 366. Injunction—To restrain disturbance of possession—Laches by vendor—Effect of decision of local court that vendor not bound.]—A. was the administrator of an estate, to one third of which each of his brothers B. & C. was entitled. In 1833 A. wrote to B. & C., offering, in order to prevent the necessity of accounts & the probability of dispute, to pay each £1,000 for his share. B. accepted the offer & C. wrote to say that whatever B. determined would meet his approbation. A. & B. acted on the contract as complete, & C. never repudiated it or asked for any accounts or explanations. B. died in 1849, & in 1850 C. & B.'s representatives commenced a suit in Chili against A. to recover their shares. Two Chilean courts in succession decided that there was a contract binding B. but not C. A., who had actively defended the suits in Chili, now came to England, & filed a bill, to restrain C. from disturbing him in the possession:—Held: (1) C.'s delay for seventeen years, & until after B.'s death, barred his right to an account according to English law & injunction granted.

(2) The contract being between three domiciled Englishmen, was governed by English law, although the principal subject-matter was landed property in Chili, & therefore the Chilean decisions were not binding upon this ct.

A contract between domiciled Englishmen relating to real estate in a foreign country, is to be determined by the lex loci, but a contract between an Englishman domiciled & resident in England & an Englishman resident in a foreign country, but not having acquired a foreign domicile, must be governed & construed by the rules of the English Law.—*COOD v. 367. — To enforce implied covenant for quiet enjoyment.]—In July 1896 plffs. entered into an agreement with the defts. under which the sole & exclusive right to work certain lands situate in the Island of Milos & belonging to the defts. was granted to the plffs. for a period of five years; the agreement also contained a provision for a renewal of the period for three further periods of five years each.

The right conferred by this agreement was expressed to be granted for the purpose of enabling the plffs. to get & work manganese; & they were to pay by quarterly payments certain royalties therefor, & a minimum royalty was fixed.

Clause 6 provided in the event of any royalties being in arrear for three months or a breach of any of the provisions of the agreement the defts. might determine the licence & re-enter the premises.

On May 17, 1898, a further agreement was made modifying the first agreement & providing for the payment of the royalties half-yearly on Apr. 8 & Oct. 8, in each year.

A dispute having arisen between the original grantors of the lands & defts., & the former having requested plffs. to pay the royalties to them instead of to defts., plffs. on Oct. 7, declined to pay to defts. the royalties due on Oct. 8, & offered to refer the question to arbn.

Oct. 12, defts. took forcible possession of the lands & remained in possession of the same.

Oct. 18, plffs. tendered to defts. the money due, but the tender was refused.

Nov. 2, plffs. instituted this action & now moved for an injunction to restrain defts. from taking or keeping possession of the lands in question & of the machinery & stock of manganese in or about the premises.

The registered offices of plffs. & defts. respectively were situate in London:—

Held: if there was jurisdiction to grant the injunction sought for, such jurisdiction ought to be exercised with great caution; as defts. were in actual possession of the lands they ought not to be disturbed & the motion must be refused.—*BLACK POINT SYNDICATE, LTD. v. Co., a co. incorporated according to the laws of the United States, issued, in 1888, debentures charged upon property in Mexico, of about seventeen million acres in extent. The debentures were secured by a covering deed made between the I. Co. of the first part, the P. Co. called the trustee, of the second part, & three persons, appointed as a committee on the part of the debenture-holders, and called the committee, of the third part. This deed purported to charge the property in Mexico, gave powers of sale & other powers to the trustee co. & the committee,

& provided that the committee might at any time, at discretion, call upon the trustee to register in Mexico the hypothecation of the lands to be given by the I. Co. to the trustee. This registration had never been made by the trustee or demanded by the committee. It was admitted that by the law of Mexico the charge on the land had no validity unless registered. The I. Co. were holders of some of these debentures. In May 1889 the M. L. C. Co. was incorporated in England to take over the assets & liabilities of the I. Co. The property of the I. Co. was transferred to the M. L. C. Co., subject to the rights of the debenture-holders. The transfer to the M. L. C. Co. was duly registered in Mexico, & gave that co. a complete legal title according to Mexican law. The land comprised in the debenture trust deed was wholly undeveloped, & produced no income. The M. L. C. Co., being unable to pay the interest on the debentures, proposed a scheme for the conversion of the debentures into preference shares. This scheme was approved by a majority of the debenture-holders, at a meeting held in Oct. 1889, but had not been accepted by the M. I. Co. Early in 1890 the M. I. Co. commenced an action in the Q. B. Div. against the I. Co. for the half-year's interest unpaid on Jan. 1, 1890, & in Feb. 1891 the Ct. of Appeal gave judgment for the pl'tfs. in that action. On Nov. 4, 1891, the M. I. Co. commenced this action in the Ch. Div. to enforce the security of their debenture, & they now moved for a receiver of the rents & profits of the land in Mexico, & the proceeds of sale thereof, & of certain shares & moneys received by the M. L. C. Co. from other cos. for sale of lands alleged to be comprised in the security.

Held: as the deft. co., being subject to the jurisdiction of this ct., had taken a conveyance of the land with notice of & expressly subject to the pl'tfs.' charge, the ct. had jurisdiction to prevent their making an unconscionable use of the Mexican law or gaining any advantage by having registered their transfer before the charge of which they had notice: Semble: it had jurisdiction to appoint the receiver asked for.—*MERCANTILE INVESTMENT & GENERAL TRUST CO. v. 380. — Effect of—Interference with receiver.]

Held: (1) the existence of the charge created by the debenture though valid according to English law, did not entitle the debenture-holders to prevent P. & Co., who were unsecured creditors, from asserting & enforcing any rights given them by French law against this French debt, there being no equity in favour of the debenture-holders as against P. & Co.; the debt due from the French firm must be treated as being situate in France & subject to French law, & P. & Co. could not be prevented, at the suit of the debenture-holders, from taking any proceedings the law of France allowed for recovering their debt out of this French asset, & the attachment which alone was recognised by the law of France ought to prevail over the title of the debenture-holders; (2) the appointment of the receivers made no difference; for though the Ct. can appoint receivers over property out of the jurisdiction, the receiver is not put in possession of foreign property by the mere order of the Ct.; something else has to be done & until what is necessary has been done in accordance with foreign law, any person, not a party to the suit, who takes proceedings in a foreign country is not guilty of contempt on the ground of interfering with the receivers' possession or otherwise, & for this purpose no distinction can be drawn between a foreigner & a British subject.—*Re MAUDSLAY, SONS & FIELD, MAUDSLAY v. SECT. 3.—ALIENATION AND ASSIGNMENT OF IMMOVABLES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

381. Validity of title—Governed by lex situs.]—

The lex loci rei sitæ governs exclusively the tenure, title & descent of immovable property.—FENTON v. LIVINGSTONE (1859), 33 L. T. O. S. 335; 23 J. P. 579; 5 Jur. N. S. 1183; 7 W. R. 671; 3 Macq. 497, H. L.

382. — — — — —.]—(1) It is established as a general principle, that a legal title, duly acquired in any one country, is a good title all the world over. Duly to acquire a legal title to real estate, such legal title must be according to the lex loci rei sitæ. The due acquisition of a legal title to movables may give rise to the question whether the lex loci contractus, or the law of the country wherein the contracting parties may be domiciled, or even the lex loci rei sitæ, shall prevail. Where all these circumstances are combined in the acquisition of a legal title to a movable, such title is, beyond doubt, good all the world over.

(2) A judgment of a foreign ct. is conclusive, inter partes, where there is nothing on the face of the judgment which a ct. here can inquire into. The cts. of this country may, however, disregard a foreign judgment, inter partes, if it appears on the record:—(a) to be manifestly contrary to natural justice; or (b) to be based on domestic legislation not recognised by foreign countries; or (c) to be founded on a misapprehension of what is the law of this country; or (d) to be founded upon a distinct refusal to recognise the laws of the country under which the title to the subject-matter of litigation arose.

Semble: a foreign judgment even in rem may be examined & disregarded, if it appears on the face of it to have been founded on a perverse disregard of English law in a case properly subject to that law by the comity of nations.

(3) The same rules apply to judgments of Colonial cts.

(4) A ship, the property of British subjects, was duly mortgaged, in Great Britain, to other British subjects, & being in the mtgors.' possession, proceeded to New Orleans. Whilst there it was attached by creditors of the mtgors. resident in New Orleans, &, after due intervention & hearing of the British mtgees., before & by the cts. of Louisiana, sold under process of the ct., to satisfy the attaching creditors, to a British subject, who had notice of the mtgees.' intervention. On a bill by the mtgee. against the purchaser:—Held: the sale was subject to the right of the mtgees.—SIMPSON v. FOGO (1863), 1 Hem. & M. 195; 1 New Rep. 422; 32 L. J. Ch. 249; 8 L. T. 61; 9 Jur. 383. Powers given by 1 Will. 4, c. 60, not applicable to foreign immovables.]—The powers given by 1 Will. 4, c. 60, do not extend to real or personal property in a foreign country.—PRICE v. DEWHURST (1839), 8 Sim. 617; 8 L. J. Ch. 267; 59 E. R. 244.

384. Bankruptcy—Real property in England.]—To an action on a judgment of the Supreme Ct. of the Cape of Good Hope, deft. pleaded in bar that, before the recovery of the judgment, by an ordinance of that colony relating to the administration & distribution of insolvents' estates, it was enacted, that the Supreme Ct. might, upon petition of the insolvent, accept the surrender of his estate, & place it under sequestration in the hands of the Master of the Ct.; & that further execution of any judgment against the insolvent or his estate should, after the order for sequestration had been lodged, be stayed during the pendency of such sequestration; & that all actions pending against him for any debt or demand provable against the estate, & all proceedings therein upon any order being made for the sequestration of such estate, should, be stayed. The plea then stated the petition of deft., the surrender of his estate, that it had been placed under sequestration, that plffs. proved the amount of the judgment against deft.'s estate, that the estate was distributed, & that plffs. received 1s. 6d. in the pound on the amount of the judgment debt:—Held: the plea was bad.

It seems to be clear that the law of the Cape of Good Hope cannot be taken to affect the debtor's real estate out of that country, which, being extra-territorial, is also out of the jurisdiction of the Ct. where the judgment was obtained (PARKE, J.).—*FRITH v. 386. ——— Post-nuptial settlement of foreign land—Equity of wife & children.]—After the marriage of a female ward a settlement is made, under the direction of the ct. in England, for the benefit of the wife & children of the marriage, of a moiety of a plantation in Demerara, of which the wife was seized in fee at the time of the marriage; the husband & wife afterwards mortgage the estate to persons having full notice of the settlement; by the law of Demerara the settlement was a nullity, & in no manner affected the rights & powers of the husband and wife over the estate:—Held: the mtge. is valid, inasmuch as the equity of the wife & children attached only upon the person of the husband, & not upon the estate.—MARTIN v. MARTIN, BELL v. MARTIN (1831), 2 Russ. & M. 507; 39 E. R. 487.

389. Assignment complying with lex situs—Not complying with lex loci contractus—Conveyance of sporting rights over land in Scotland—Not under seal.]—By Scots law an instrument under seal is not necessary for the conveyance of a sporting right, & therefore the stipulations of an unsealed lease made between Englishmen in England of a sporting right over land in Scotland may be enforced by action in the English Courts, as the provision of the law of England that an instrument under seal is necessary for the conveyance of a right to an incorporeal hereditament, is not part of the lex fori. Even if such lease were invalid for want of a seal, the lessee, after having had an enjoyment of the right, could not set up the invalidity as a defence to an action for breach of a stipulation in the lease to leave a good breeding stock of game on the ground at the termination of the lease.—*ADAMS v. 390. Burden on immovable by lex situs—Burden primarily on personalty by deceased's lex domicilii—Liability of heir—Payment of heritable bond.]—DRUMMOND v. DRUMMOND, No. 291, ante.

391. ————.]—All questions respecting real estate belong to the law of the country where the estate is situate.

Petitioner, heir of tailzie under a settlement made by E., of a Scottish estate, filed a bill to have his estate exonerated from a heritable bond by the application of personal estate in England. The question, whether the heir of tailzie in Scotland had an equity to be exonerated by the application of the personal estate, was, like every other question respecting real estates, to be determined by the law of the country, where the real estate was situate, & could not depend upon the law of the country where the personal estate happened locally to be. All which a ct. here could do would be to refer it to the master, to inquire what was the law of Scotland to be applied to the case; & though such a reference was frequently made in a simple case, it could not be conveniently done in a complex case of equitable circumstances (LEACH, V.C.).

It appearing that a suit and cross-suit were already commenced in Scotland, this case ordered to stand adjourned until the determination there.—ELLIOTT v. MINTO (LORD) (1821), 6 Madd. 16; 56 E. R. 994.

392. ———— Payment of annuity.]—A domiciled Scotsman, by his will, devised & bequeathed to trustees all his real & personal estate, & after directing payment of his debts, testamentary & funeral expenses, & giving various legacies & annuities, directed the residue of his estate to be apportioned amongst certain charities. Testator's personal estate was more than sufficient to satisfy all his debts, testamentary & funeral expenses, & the legacies & annuities; his residuary estate comprised English & Scottish realty.

By the law of Scotland, debts, testamentary & funeral expenses, & legacies, are a primary charge on personal estate, & annuities are a primary charge on heritable or real estate.

Testator's heir-at-law claimed the English realty as undisposed of, on the ground that by English law it was not liable to contribute to the charities or annuities. It was conceded that the charitable gifts, so far as they were payable out of the English realty, were void:—

Held: the Scots law of administration applied, & the English realty, ratably with the Scottish realty, must contribute towards the annuities.—Re HEWIT, LAWSON v. DUNCAN, [1891] 3 Ch. 568; 61 L. J. Ch. 76; 65 L. T. 48; 40 W. R. 188.

393. Movables primarily liable for debts of deceased by lex situs—Whether deceased's lex domicilii applicable—Payment of debts by heir out of produce of immovables—Right of heir to relief against personalty.]—A person domiciled in England, who was indebted in money upon bond, died intestate, leaving real estate in Scotland, & the bond debts were paid by the heir out of the produce of the real estate in Scotland.

Held: the right of relief or demand against the personal estate, which by the law of Scotland is given to the heir who has paid movable debts, is capable of being made available in England, where the personal estate is the primary fund for the payment of all debts.—WINCHELSEA (EARL) v. GARETTY (1838), 2 Keen, 293; 7 L. 394. ———— Right of legatees to marshalling of assets against heir.]—Testator domiciled in England died possessed of personal estate & also of real estates in Scotland. His will purported to deal with the Scottish real estates, but was inoperative to pass them, & they descended to the Scottish heir. A suit having been instituted for the administration of testator's estate against the exors., one of whom was the Scottish heir, he elected to take the descended estates in opposition to the will, & gave up the legacy which had been bequeathed to him by the will:—Held: (1) the liability of the Scottish real estates to the payment of debts, as between the heir & the pecuniary legatees, must be determined by the law of Scotland, & not by the law of the country where testator's estate was being administered; (2) as the law of Scotland threw the general debts primarily on the personal estate, & did not permit them to fall, directly or indirectly, on the real estate until the personal estate was exhausted, there could be no marshalling in the English ct. against the Scottish heir in favour of the pecuniary legatees; (3) no part of the general costs of the suit could be thrown on the Scottish estates; & the heir was entitled to his costs out of the personal estate except the extra costs occasioned by his election. Semble: if the real estate had been situate in England, the costs of the suit, which, under the circumstances, would have been confined to the administration of the personal estate, ought not to have been thrown on the real estate.—HARRISON v. HARRISON (1873), 8 Ch. 395. Sum charged on immovable—How right to sum barred—Governed by lex loci rei sitæ.]—By a marriage settlement, a Jamaica estate was limited to trustees for a term of years, in trust to raise £18,000 to be laid out in land, in Great Britain, of the value of £600 a year; & the land, when purchased, was to be settled on the husband for life, with remainder to the wife for life, with an option to her to have an annuity of £600 a year, out of the land, in lieu of her life estate. Before the £18,000 was raised, the wife joined with her husband, both of them being resident in this country, in mortgaging the Jamaica estate in fee, & the wife acknowledged the mtge. deed before a magistrate, which, by the laws of Jamaica, was equivalent to levying a fine. The husband afterwards died:—Held: the wife had barred herself of all claim to the provision made for her by the settlement.—FORBES v. ADAMS (1839), 9 Sim. 402; 8 L. J. Ch. 116; 59 E. R. 437.

The whole was charged on A.'s Irish estate, but the settlement & will were made in England, & all parties lived here:—Held: the money was decreed to be paid into ct. with English interest, & without deducting the charge of the return from Ireland.—*PHIPPS v. 398. — — — — — Rentcharge on land in Ireland.]—Prior to the passing of the Act for assimilating the currencies of England & Ireland, an English lady married an Irish gentleman. By their settlement, which was executed at Bath, where the marriage was solemnised, it was recited that the gentleman had agreed to charge certain of his estates in Ireland with the payment of a rent-charge of £1,000 a year to the lady for life, in case she should survive him, but the sum secured to her by the deed was expressed to be £1,000 a year sterling lawful money of Ireland:—Held: she was entitled to £1,000 a year sterling.—*COPE v. 401. — — — — — Portions out of land in Ireland—Interest pending vesting.]—By a deed of settlement B. was empowered to charge certain lands in Ireland with any sum, not to exceed £400 a year, as a jointure for his wife, & with any sum not to exceed £2,000 sterling for his younger children.

In exercise of the power B. charged the lands with £2,000 late Irish currency, to be vested in & paid to his younger children in equal shares on their attaining twenty-one or marriage; & he directed, in the event of his dying before the shares became vested, that his said children should be entitled to interest on their presumptive portions at 5 per cent. by way of maintenance from the time of his death until such portions should be payable:—

Held: the £2,000 carried interest at 5 per cent. Irish currency, from the death of B. until the shares of the younger children became payable.—DENNY v. DENNY (1866), 14 L. T. 854.

402. — — — — — Indicated in instrument—Rent-charge on land in Ireland.]—Power in a marriage settlement to grant to a wife any annual sum of money, or yearly rent-charge to be tax free, & without any deduction, & to be issuing out of & chargeable upon land in Ireland, so that such rent-charge do not exceed, in the whole, the yearly sum of £3,000 of lawful money of Great Britain:—

Held: a rent-charge appointed under this power is payable in Ireland in the currency of England. But that the appointee is not entitled to have the sum transmitted to England free of the charge of conveyance & exchange properly so called. The lex loci contractus & the law applicable to cases of money charged as a rent payable out of land, where no provision as to the place of payment is made by the instrument, are inapplicable to a case where the instrument itself furnishes the means of interpretation.

In ambiguous contracts the domicile of the parties, the place of execution, the purpose & the various provisions & expressions of the instrument are material to be considered in the construction.

Courts of equity are not bound to adopt the opinion of the courts of law to which a case is sent for advice.—LANSDOWNE v. LANSDOWNE (1820), 2 Bli. 60; 4 E. R. 250, H. L.

403. — — — — — Mortgage on colonial land.]—A., resident in Amsterdam, being the owner in possession, of a plantation in British Guiana, by an instrument executed on her behalf, by her attorney in London, in the year 1817, sold the plantation, cum annexis, to B. for 100,000 guilders Holland currency, & £30,000 sterling; taking, as part of the consideration-money, a first mtge. on the plantation for the 100,000 guilders. By this mtge. it was stipulated that the 100,000 guilders were not to be paid during the lifetime of A.; but upon her death, to her lawful descendants, if any, & if not, to the nephews and nieces of J. B.; & it was specially provided that if at any time the interest, at the rate of 5 per cent., should not be punctually paid every year, at Amsterdam, & that if, by such default, A. should be obliged to appoint an attorney to demand the same in the colony, the interest in that case should be at the rate of 6 per cent., & a further charge of 10 per cent. for commission. A. intermarried with E., and the interest on the mtge. not having been paid as stipulated, an attorney was appointed at British Guiana, to recover the arrears. In 1828 without issue or lawful descendants, leaving E., her husband, surviving; at which time the interest on the mtge. was still in arrear. In the year 1836, C. & Co. purchased the first mtge., & all the interest therein, which the parties claiming title under the limitation in the mtge.-deed to the nephews & nieces of J. B. had. The consideration-money paid by C. & Co. was considerably less than the amount of the first mtge. & interest thereon. Upon the passing of the Act for the abolition of slavery, C. & Co. received from the Compensation Comrs., in respect of this mtge., a sum more than sufficient to repay them what they had paid for the mtge., but much less than was due upon the mtge. for principal & interest. The plantation was sold in 1838, at the suit of B., & all creditors having claims were summoned to render their claims, & upon C. & Co. claiming priority under the first mtge., the Supreme Ct. of Demerara & Essequibo held, that the second mtgee. was preferent over the first, as under the Anastasian law, which they declared prevailed in British Guiana, an assignee for a valuable consideration of a debt or chose in action, secured by debt, could not recover more than the amount of the consideration-money, actually paid to the assignor, with legal interest from the time of payment, & that the sum received by C. & Co. from the Compensation Comrs. was more than sufficient to pay off, & must be held to extinguish the whole debt upon the first mtge.:—Held: (1) in the absence of any fraud by C. & Co. in the purchase of the first mtge., & of any authority to show that the lex anastasiana prevailed in British Guiana, or could be applied to a case so circumstanced, the amount of the consideration-money given by C. & Co. was not to enter into question between them & the second mtgee.; (2) the term, in the mtge. deed, Holland currency, coupled with the fact of Amsterdam being the place mentioned for payment, meant Dutch currency, & not colonial currency; (3) the clause for varying the interest from £5 to £6 was not confined in its operation to the lifetime of A.; but that circumstances might have rendered it inequitable to increase the rate of interest after A.'s death, or during some portion of the time, after that event.—*MACRAE v. 1,000 years, upon trust by mortgaging the said estates, or out of the rents & profits thereof, to raise £15,000, to be divided among the younger children of the marriage as D. should appoint. D. appointed the whole of the portions among his children, appointing £4,000 to his daughter, to be raised at certain specified times, with interest in the meantime at 5 per cent. The trustees being unable to raise the portions by mtge., an action was brought to carry the trusts into effect:—Held: (1) D. having only a power of distributing the portions & not of charging them, had no power to fix the rate of interest; but that the land being in Ireland 5 per cent. was the proper rate to be fixed by the ct.; (2) under the terms of settlement the trustees of the term had right to apply the rents & profits in payment of the interest & in reduction of the capital.—*BALFOUR v. SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

409. Mobilia sequuntur personam.]—First, it is a clear proposition, not only of the law of England, but of every country in the world, where law has the semblance of science, that personal property has no locality. The meaning of that is, not that personal property has no visible locality, but that it is subject to that law which governs the person of the owner. With respect to the disposition of it, with respect to the transmission of it, either by succession, or the act of the party, it follows the law of the person. The owner in any country may dispose of his personal property. If he dies, it is not the law of the country in which the property is, but the law of the country of which he was a subject, that will regulate the succession (LORD LOUGHBOROUGH, C.).—SILL v. WORSWICK (1791), 1 Hy. Bl. 665; 126 E. R. 379.

410. —.]—The general rule, that mobilia sequuntur personam, need not be controverted, though that rule, or rather fiction, if without exception, would in some extreme cases lead to absurdity & injustice, more especially in the modern state of society, & with reference to the nature & extent in these times of personal property, particularly funded property. The rule took its rise when mobilia, for the most part, did accompany the person; but still recognising the rule, it is necessary to ascertain the national character of the persona; for it would be carrying the fiction into manifest absurdity to hold, that the person & his mobilia changed their character with every place which he might enter, or pass through, or move to (SIR J. NICHOLL).—STANLEY v. BERNES, No. 40, ante.

411. —.]—The law of the domicile of a testator or intestate decides whether his personal property is liable to legacy duty.

A British born subject, died domiciled in a British Colony. At his death he possessed personal property situate in Scotland. Probate of his will was taken out in Scotland, for the purpose of there administering this property: & out of the fund thus obtained legacies were paid to legatees residing in Scotland:

Held: Legacy Duty was not payable in respect of these legacies.—THOMSON v. ADVOCATE-GENERAL (1845), 12 Cl. & Fin. 1; 13 Sim. 153; 4 L. T. O. S. 389; 9 Jur. 217; 8 E. R. 1294, H. L.

412. —.]—The doctrine depends upon a principle which is expressed in the Latin words; & that is the only principle of the whole of our law as to domicile when applicable to the succession of what we call personal estate. It is so, not by any special law of England, but by the deference, which, for the sake of international comity, the law of England pays to the law of the civilised world generally. Domicil is allowed in this country to have the same influence as in other countries in determining the succession of movable estate; but the maxim of the law of the civilised world is mobilia sequuntur personam, & is founded on the nature of things. When "mobilia" are in places other than that of the person to whom they belong, their accidental situs is disregarded, & they are held to go with the person. But land, whether held for a chattel interest or held for a freehold interest, is in nature, as a matter of fact, immovable & not movable. The doctrine is inapplicable to it (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—FREKE v. CARBERY (LORD), No. 448, post.

418. Dispute as to title—Between domiciled English parties—Movable fund in Scotland—Governed by English law.]—The law of Scotland & of England is that a pledgee may redeliver the goods to the pledgor for a limited purpose without thereby losing his rights under the contract of pledge.

The pledgees of a bill of lading returned it to the pledgors to obtain delivery & sell on behalf of the pledgees, & account for the proceeds towards satisfaction of the debt:—Held: the pledgees' security was not affected, & they were entitled to the proceeds of the cargo as against the diligence of general creditors of the pledgors.

424. Foreign shares certificate—Pledge in England—Whether pledgee lawfully in possession governed by English law—Consequences of lawful possession governed by foreign law.]—The registered owner of shares in a New York co. held certificates which stated that the shares were transferable only on the surrender & cancellation of the certificate by an indorsement thereof. The indorsement was in the form of a transfer for value received, blank in the names of the transferor & transferee, with a power of attorney in blank to carry out the transfer. His owner's exors. obtained probate of his will, & in order that the shares might be registered in their own names signed as exors. the transfers on the back of each certificate, in blank, & sent them to their broker, who fraudulently deposited them with a bank which took them bond fide & without notice as security for advances. The bank retained the certificates & took no steps to obtain registration. The exors. having brought an action against the bank to establish their title to the certificates:—Held: since all the dealings with the certificates were transacted in England by persons domiciled there, the respective rights of the exors. and the bank must be determined by English law.

What is effectual to transfer shares in a foreign country must be decided by the laws of that country.—COLONIAL BANK v. CADY & WILLIAMS, LONDON CHARTERED BANK OF AUSTRALIA v. CADY & WILLIAMS (1890), 15 App. Cas. 267; 60 L. J. Ch. 131; 63 L. T. 27; 39 W. R. 17; 6 T. L. R. 329, II. L.

425. Delivery warrant—Of goods 'n Scotland—Delivery warrants pledged in England—Pledge subject to requirements of Scottish law.]—Goods were stored by G. a domiciled Englishman in a bonded warehouse in Glasgow, transferred into the name of G. as owner; & the warehouse-keeper issued to G. delivery orders showing that the goods were held to G.'s order "or assigns by indorsement hereon." G. obtained a loan from I., an English merchant, and delivered to him in England a letter of hypothecation bearing that he deposited a part of the goods with him in security, with power of sale, & G. indorsed & handed to I. the delivery warrants. I. did not intimate or give notice of the right he had acquired to the warehouse-keeper. R. & B. claiming as personal creditors of G., arrested the goods in the hands of the warehouse-keeper in order to found jurisdiction against G. in Scotland; & then raised an action against him in the Scottish ct., upon dependence of which they again arrested the goods, claiming through the arrestment a preferable right thereto:—Held: (1) the case was governed by the law of Scotland, & the right of the pledgee I., in the goods was defeated by the arrestment executed by R. & B., I. not having intimated his pledge to the warehouse-keeper; (2) Factors Act, 1889 (c. 45) [extended to Scotland by Factors (Scotland) Act, 1890 (c. 40)], s. 3, was merely intended to define the full effect of the pledge of the documents of title made by a mercantile agent, & had no application to the case of the pledge of the documents of title by one in the position of G. who was not a mercantile agent within the meaning of the Act; nor was G. a pledgor within s. 9 of the same Act.—*INGLIS v. A petition was presented by the Master in Lunacy of New South Wales, & the lunatic by her next friend, asking for payment out of the fund to the master:—Held: the master was empowered to collect the assets of the lunatic in the colony, but no such power was given him with regard to assets in England; (2) the ct. had jurisdiction to order payment of the corpus to the master where such payment was shown to be necessary for the protection of the lunatic's estate, or for her maintenance, but no necessity had been shown.—Re BARLOW'S WILL (1887), 36 Ch. This closed will, with the cover thus indorsed, was proved or registered in Chile, & letters of administration with the will, including the cover, annexed, were granted to pltf. in England, where the testator possessed real property:—Held: the indorsement on the envelope & the document therein enclosed constituted one testamentary disposition, & the testator had executed a will capable of passing his real estate in England.—*Re NICHOLLS, HUNTER v. 444. — Incidents of estate created—Scottish will of English & Scottish realty—Effect as to Scottish heritage.]—Where a testator in a foreign will expresses himself in technical language of the place where made & where he is domiciled, to obtain the intention the technical terms must be interpreted by the meaning put on them in the system of law from which they are borrowed.

(2) By the common law of Scotland the actual intention of the maker of any validly executed settlement of movables received effect when duly ascertained, & now by Titles to Land Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1868, c. 101, the Scottish law, which would previously have rejected as inoperative a foreign will dealing with Scottish lands not executed with all the required formalities, & not expressed in appropriate terms of de presenti conveyance, must, so far as may be practicable with the principles of that law, give effect to the intention as expressed in the will, just the same as if it dealt with movables & not heritage.

(3) The technical rule of Scottish law applicable to movable & immovable property, that a gift or devise to a parent in life-rent, & after his death to his unborn or unnamed children in fee, confers a fee on the parent & a spes successionis only on the children is excluded by anything in the gift itself, showing beyond doubt that the intention was to give nothing more than a life interest to the parent.

(4) A testator, domiciled in England, who died possessed of lands in England & Scotland, left a will executed according to the forms of English law, by which he devised all such of his lands as consisted of freehold of inheritance to the use of his eldest son, E., & his assigns for his life without impeachment of waste, & after the death of E. to the use of the first & every other son of E., successively, according to their respective seniorities in tail male, with remainders over. Under a subsequent clause E. took as residuary legatee all property not otherwise disposed of. Subsequent to the date of the will children were born to E. He claimed the Scottish estate as vested in him absolutely, or alternatively that the estate belonged to him as residuary legatee or as heir-at-law. This claim was opposed on behalf of his infant children:—Held: (1) under the above Act the law of Scotland must, so far as practicable, give effect to the intention of the testator, as gathered from the whole context interpreted by English law; (2) undoubtedly the intention of the testator was that E. should take a life interest only, & that the fee of the Scottish estates should go to the eldest son of E., & the others nominated; (3) the intention as to the separate destination of the life-rent & fee of the estate, could be carried out substantially without inconsistency with the practice or policy of the law of Scotland, the rule being valcat quantum valere potest; (4) a registrable title fell to

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

A. By what Law governed.

453. By lex domicilii.—(1) Succession of movable effects situated in a foreign country, whether testate or intestate, are regulated by the lex domicilii.

(2) Succession to personal effects must be regulated by the lex domicilii.

PART VI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

453 i. By lex domicilii.—Where a testator bequeaths notional personalty situated in N.S.W. to persons domiciled & resident in the same foreign country, the rights of those persons inter se to the property are regulated by the law of that domicile.—Re LEE HING'S WILL (1901), 1 S. R. N. S. W. 199; 18 N. S. W. N. 239.—AUS.

453 ii. ———.—A will having directed the whole estate to be converted into personalty, legatees domiciled without O. could not be affected by any statute of O.; the locality of all rights to movable property being at the domicile of the person entitled to it.—Re GOODHUE (1872), 19 Gr. 366.—CAN.

453 iii. ———.—An English will of movables by a testator domiciled in L. C. must be interpreted with regard to the law of L. C., & not that of E.—McGIBBON v. ABBOTT (1885), 10 App. Cas. 653, P. C.—CAN.

453 iv. ———.—In the succession of movables lex domicilii prevails.—LASHLEY v. MORELAND (1809), 15 Fac. Coll. 465, H. L.—SCOT.

453 v. ———.—The character of funds situated in a foreign country as heritable or movable is to be determined by the law of that country; accordingly, bonds bearing interest in the island of Jamaica & falling by succession to a married woman in S., being by the law of J. movable, become part of the goods in communion & the husband on the wife's death is entitled to one half thereof.—NEWLANDS v. CHALMERS' TRUSTEES (1832), 11 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 65.—SCOT.

453 vi. ———.—MACPHERSON v. TYTLER (1850), 12 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 486; 22 Sc. Jur. 103.—SCOT.

453 vii. ———.—Where a person dies domiciled in S., having money in British stocks, the right of succession depends on the law of S.—CRAIGIE v.

(3) The domicile of the deceased father being in Scotland, the right of legitim extends to personal effects in England or elsewhere, as well as in Scotland.—HOG v. HOG (1792), 2 Coop. temp. Cott. 497; 47 E. R. 1269; sub nom. HOG v. LASHLEY, 6 Bro. Parl. Cas. 577, H. L.

454. ———.—(1) A. & his wife, who were by birth British subjects but were afterwards domiciled at St. C., belonging to Denmark, returned to England, & there made a joint will, disposing of a mtge. at St. C., which belonged to them jointly. They afterwards made separate wills, which were proved in the Prerogative Ct. of Canterbury. After the death of the survivor, certain proceedings were instituted at St. C., by the exors., named in the joint will, & a judgment was obtained for the establishment of that will:—Held: the ct. at St. C. had no authority to decide as between the contending parties, & the exor. of the joint will, having come over to this country, was held liable to account to the parties beneficially interested under the separate wills for the assets of A. received at St. C.

(2) The law of the country in which a deceased party was domiciled at his death, both decides the right of succession as to his personal estate, & also regulates the decision as to what constitutes his last will.—PRICE v. DEWHURST (1838), 4 My. & Cr. 76; 8 L. J. Ch. 57; 2 Jur. 1006; 41 E. R. 30, L. C.

455. ———.—(1) The persons named as trustees & exors. in the will of a domiciled Scotchman having declined to act, his next of kin obtained letters of administration of his personal estate in England from the proper Ecclesiastical Ct. there, & afterwards consented to the appointment by the Ct. of Session in Scotland of other persons as trustees & exors. in place of those named in the will with all the powers that had been thereby given to them. These trustees so appointed raised an action in the Ct. of Session against the administratrix, calling on her to transfer to them the personal estate possessed by her under the administration, & offering her a full release from liability:—Held: the personal estate in England must be administered there by the administratrix, by virtue of the letters of administration.

(2) The law of the domicile of a deceased person governs the succession to his personal estate, 453 viii. ———.—A husband & wife were married in S. & afterwards removed to E. The wife afterwards returned to S. & died there, but the domicile of the parties at the dissolution of the marriage was in E. At the date of the marriage, the wife possessed a heritable bond, which she afterwards uplifted, & deposited the price in a S. bank in her own name. The wife having left a trust settlement, & the sum in the bank being claimed by her trustees, on the ground that it was a surrogatum for the heritable bond, & also by the surviving husband, as falling under the jus mariti:—Held: the parties having been domiciled in E. at the dissolution of the marriage, the question of right to the property must be regulated by the law of E.—*HALL'S TRUSTEES v. (3) The cts. in Scotland have no power to appoint persons to administer personal property in England, that power being exclusively vested in the English Ecclesiastical Cts., & of that the Scottish cts. are bound to take notice.—PRESTON v. MELVILLE (1841), 8 Cl. & Fin. 1; 8 E. R. 1, L. C.; subsequent proceedings (1845), 15 Sim. 35.

456. —.]—The law of the domicile of a testator governs questions of testacy & intestacy, of the construction of the will & of the rights of those who claim to be next of kin.

Where, therefore, a will is made by an Englishman, who dies domiciled abroad, & the foreign court has granted probate of the will, it becomes the duty of the English Ct. of Probate (some of his personal property being situated in this country) to grant ancillary probate to the foreign exors. It has no right to constitute itself a court of construction.

The Ch. Ct., in like manner, is not entitled to entertain an administration suit founded on a question relating to the construction of the will, & the foreign executors may properly accept its jurisdiction.

But parties thus entitled to insist on the authority of the ct. of the domicile, may by their conduct give to the English ct. authority & jurisdiction to construe the will, & administer the estate, so far as funds & persons in this country are concerned.—ENOHIN v. WYLIE (1862), 10 H. L. Cas. 1; 31 L. J. Ch. 402; 2 L. T. 263; 8 Jur. N. S. 897; 10 W. R. 467; 11 E. R. 924, H. L.

458. — At death of testator.]—The succession to property in England of a deceased foreigner is regulated by the law of his place of domicile as it existed at the time of his death.

A domiciled Paraguayan died in Paraguay leaving personal property in England. After his death, but before a grant was made in England, a decree of the Govt. of Paraguay declared that all the property of deceased, wheresoever situate was the property of the nation of Paraguay:—Held: although by the law of Paraguay as existing at the time when a grant of probate of deceased's will was applied for the will might be invalid, the right to the grant & the succession to the property must be governed by the law of Paraguay as it existed at the time of the death, & the Govt. of Paraguay had no locus standi to contest the validity of the will.—LYNCH v. PARAGUAY PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT (1871), L. R. 2 P. & D. 268; 40 L. J. P. & M. 81; 25 L. T. 164; 35 J. P. 761; 19 W. R. 982.

459. —.]—In the administration of the personal estate of a person dying domiciled abroad, the ct. applies the law of the place of domicile as it stood at the time of the death of the deceased person, & does not take any account of any subsequent change, though retrospective, which the legislature of the foreign country may make in that law.—Re AGANOR'S TRUSTS (1895), 64 L. J. Ch. 521; 13 R. 677.

460. — Ascertainment of domicile—Decree of Probate Court.]—A native of Chili made his will in London & died. A caveat having been entered on behalf of his daughter, the exors. propounded the will in solemn form, alleging that testator was domiciled in England. The daughter pleaded that deceased was at the date of the will & until his death domiciled in Chili, & that the will was not duly executed according to the law of Chili. Upon this plea, inter alia, the exors. took issue. The judge of the Probate Ct. made a decree by which he pronounced for the validity of the will, found that deceased was at the date of the will & at his death a domiciled Englishman, & decreed probate to the exors. The daughter afterwards filed a bill against the exors., alleging that testator was a domiciled Chilean, that his will, being executed in England according to English law, was good by the law of Chili, but so far only as testator could by the law of Chili dispose by will of one-fourth of his personal estate, & that the other three-fourths belonged to the daughter. The exors. by answer set up the decree of the Probate Ct. as a bar. An order having been made for inquiry as to testator's domicile in an administration suit under circumstances which, it was contended, made it equivalent to an order in the suit by the daughter against the exors., the question whether the order was right was litigated between the daughter & the residuary legatee:—Held: (1) the decree of the Probate Ct. was not conclusive in rem as to the domicile, because the finding as to the domicile was not necessary to the decree; (2) for the same reason the decree of the Probate Ct. was not conclusive inter partes as to the domicile as between the daughter & the residuary legatee, for the exors. could not, by litigating in the Probate suit a question of domicile, which it was not necessary to decide for the purposes of that suit, conclude the residuary legatee as to testator's power of disposing of his property, & as the residuary legatee was not bound, the daughter could not be bound, since estoppel must be mutual.—*CONCHA v. 461. Where court of domicil has pronounced—How far decision binding on English Court.]—The law of the domicil of a deceased person governs the succession to his personal property.

Where, therefore, in a foreign ct., upon the death of a person domiciled in the country where that ct. had jurisdiction, C. claimed to be the natural son of H., deceased, & as such natural son to be entitled by the law of that country to inherit his father's property, & alleged that his father was of a particular station in society (a circumstance which allowed of such a claim by a natural son), & that the father had died domiciled in the country, & had died intestate, & the foreign ct. found all these allegations in his favour:—Held: the Probate Ct. in this country was bound by the judgment of the foreign ct., & had, therefore, rightly admitted C. to be heard as contradictor to a will set up in this country as having been made by H., disposing of his personal property here.—DOGLIONI v. CRISPIN (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 301; 35 L. J. P. & M. 129; 15 L. T. 44, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. CRISPIN v. DOGLIONI (1863), 3 Sw. & Tr. 96.

462. ——— Jurisdiction of court to impugn validity.]—If the will of a deceased has been formally recognised & acted upon by the ct. of competent jurisdiction in the country of his domicil & at the time of death, & remains unquestioned in that country, the Ct. of Probate will not allow the validity of such will to be litigated here.—MILLER v. JAMES (1872), L. R. 3 P. & D. 4; 42 L. J. P. & M. 21; 27 L. T. 862; 37 J. P. 488; 21 W. R. 272.

463. ——— Though judgment by default—& all parties not before foreign court.]—Although the parties claiming to be entitled to the estate of a deceased person may not be bound to resort to the tribunals of the country in which he was domiciled, & although the cts. of this country may be called upon to administer the estate of a deceased person domiciled abroad, & may in such a case be bound to ascertain as best they can who according to the law of the domicil are entitled to the estate, yet where the title has been adjudicated upon by the cts. of the domicil, such adjudication is binding upon, & must be followed by, the cts. of this country, even if the judgment of the foreign ct. has by the default of the party complaining of the judgment proceeded on a mistake as to the English law, or the whole of the facts were not before the foreign tribunal; for the cts. of this country do not sit to hear appeals from foreign tribunals, & if the decision of the foreign tribunal is wrong, recourse must be had to the mode of appeal provided in the foreign country. A testator who was by birth a British subject, & was the father of pltf., went to reside in Switzerland, & in 1842 acquired the "Landrecht" or "Indigenat" in the canton of Zurich, without being required to renounce his English nationality, which in the then state of English law he could not have effectually done; & he thereby became of Swiss nationality. With the sanction of the cantonal authorities he could have relinquished this "Landrecht" or "Indigenat," but he never effectually did so, although he afterwards left Switzerland & went to reside in France, where he died with a French domicil in the year 1878:—Held: (1) Naturalisation Act, 1870 (c. 14), s. 6, applied to testator; at the time of his death he was a Swiss, & not a British subject; & having regard to the French law, under which the Swiss tribunals were the proper forum, the cts. of Zurich had jurisdiction to decide upon the right of succession to his personal estate; (2) notwithstanding an attempted disposition by testator of the whole of his personal estate in favour of a stranger, pltf. was, in accordance with a judgment of the cts. of Zurich, entitled as testator's only child to nine-tenths of such estate as his compulsory portion.—Re TRUFORT, TRAFFORD v. BLANC (1887), 36 Ch. D. 600; 57 L. J. Ch. 135; 57 L. T. 674; 36 W. R. 163; 3 T. L. R. 798.

466. ——— Intestate domiciled in Syria.]—This was a question as to who was entitled to the personal estate of a British subject who died intestate domiciled in Syria at the time of her death. The intestate, a widow, left two children & the children of a deceased child. There was no doubt that the law of the domicil applied to personalty, & the only difficulty was to ascertain what that law was:—Held: if the lady had been a subject of the Ottoman Empire, the Turkish or Syrian law of succession would have applied, & the surviving children would have taken to the exclusion of the grandchildren, but part of the Syrian law was to leave the succession to the personal estate of British subjects to be governed by British law; the succession was, therefore, relegated back to the English law, & the grandchildren took the share that their deceased parent would have taken.—*Re CHURCHILL (DECEASED), LEWIS v. Though admitting this to be, it would by no means follow that his will, to be valid here, must conform to that foreign law, either upon principle or upon authority.

(2) The rule, that, where property is to be distributed under a certain law in case of intestacy, it must be so distributed in the absence of a will valid by that law, only applies to cases in which, there being no conflict of domicils, the law by which the case must be governed, whether ultimately to be deemed a case of testacy, or one of intestacy, admits of no question.—*CURLING v. H., went & took possession of his property, all personal, there, demanding it of the Belgian authorities as next of kin of deceased, & without giving any inventory. By the Belgian law a person so taking possession of a deceased person's property is held to have thereby admitted assets as between himself & creditors of deceased. Pltf., being a bond creditor of the intestate, took out letters of administration in England to his estate, & then sued H. for the amount of his bond debt here:—Held: (1) the possession by H. of assets in Belgium did not make him executor de son tort in England; (2) the peculiar liability imposed by the Belgian law on persons taking possession of the assets of deceased persons, being a legal right in Belgium, & requiring no aid from this ct., was equally invalid to support the suit, & the bill must be dismissed with costs.—*BEAVAN v. B. Material Validity.

503. Governed by lex domicilii—Bequests of personalty null & void.]—Plea by an exor., who has proved a will, that testator was at the date of his will & also at the time of his death, domiciled in the empire of France, & that all the bequests of personal estate affected to be made by it are by the laws of said empire null & void, is a good plea in bar to a suit by a legatee under the will for payment of his legacy & for administration of the personal estate of testator.—CAMPBELL v. BEAUFOY (1859), John. 320; 28 L. J. Ch. 645; 33 L. T. O. S. 7 W. R. 513; 70 E. R. 445.

504. Marshalling in favour of charities allowed.]—By Indian Succession Act, 1865 (X. of 1865), succession to the immovable property in India of a deceased person was regulated by the law of India, wherever he might have had his domicile at the time of his death, & succession to the movable property in India was regulated by the law of the country of the domicile. By the Act no man having a nephew or niece or nearer relation had power to bequeath any property to charitable uses, except by a will executed twelve months before death & deposited as therein required. A domiciled Scotchman, possessed of both movable & immovable property in India, made a will in Scotland, appointing both Indian & Scottish exors., & duly executed same according to the law of both countries. He thereby devised & bequeathed all his Indian property, movable & immovable, to the Indian exors. upon trust to sell & realise, & after payment of costs & expenses out of the free proceeds to pay £10,000 sterling to the Scottish exors., & to pay the residue to legatees. He then directed his Scottish exors. to lay out the £10,000 legacy in erecting & maintaining a hospital in Scotland. Testator died in Scotland a few days after the date of the will leaving sisters. The movable & the immovable property in India each exceeded £10,000. It being in evidence that there was no rule against marshalling in favour of charities known to the law of Scotland:—Held: the £10,000 might be well paid out of the movable property only, & the distribution of such movable property being by the law of India regulated by the law of Scotland, the whole legacy was well given to the charity.—MACDONALD v. MACDONALD (1872), L. R. 14 Eq. 60; 41 L. J. Ch. 566; 26 L. T. 685; 20 W. R. 739.

See, further, CHARITIES, Vol. VIII., p. 302.

505. — Enlargement of testamentary capacity purported to leave his wife the usufruct of the whole estate, which after certain prelegacies was to pass to a son:—Held: (1) the law of the matrimonial domicile governed the rights of spouses, both as regards property existing at the time of the marriage & property subsequently acquired; & the change of domicile did not affect these rights; (2) the children acquired, by S. law, a right of legitimation in the estate of their father, & were not deprived of this right by their parents' acquisition of a S. Af. domicile.—GAARN v. CAIRNS' EXECUTORS, [1910] E. D. L. 462.—S. AF.

503 iv. — .]—M., a native of Ireland, domiciled in Belgian Congo but retaining his British nationality, died in the Congo. He executed a will in the Congo:—Held: the material validity of a will depends on the law of deceased's domicile & as the Congo law lays down that the effects of a valid testament are determined by the national law of the deceased, the laws prevailing in Ireland would govern the question of the material validity of M.'s will.—Re MORGAN'S ESTATE, Ex p. LAW, [1915] S. R. 147.—S. AF.

by change of domicile.]—Testatrix by her will made in the Dutch language & duly executed according to the law of Holland appointed her intended husband as heir of her estate, with reservation only of the legitimate portion or the lawful share coming to her relations in a direct line in so far as they might exist at her death & might be competent & able to inherit from her. At the date of her will both the testatrix & her intended husband were of Dutch nationality & domiciled in Holland. After their marriage, which under the law of Holland did not revoke the previous will, they acquired an English domicile, the husband becoming a naturalised British subject. Testatrix died in 1903 possessed of personal estate only & leaving her husband & five children surviving her. According to the law of Holland three-fourths of her estate would under the circumstances have been distributable amongst her children as their legitimate portion & one-fourth only have been disposed of by her will in favour of her husband:—Held: the testamentary capacity of testatrix at the date of her death having been enlarged by her acquisition of an English domicile, her husband became entitled under the will to the whole of her estate.—Re GROOS, GROOS v. GROOS, [1915] 1 Ch. 572; 84 L. J. Ch. 422; 112 L. T. 984; 59 Sol. Jo. 477.

C. Made by British Subjects since Wills Act, 1861 (c. 114).

506. Who is "British subject"—Naturalised British subject.]—A naturalised British subject whilst domiciled in England made a will according to the forms required by the law of England. At the time of his death he was domiciled in Italy. His will was admitted to probate under Wills Act, 1861 (c. 114), s. 2.—In the Goods of GALLY (1876), 1 P. D. 438; 45 L. J. P. 107; 41 J. P. 25; 24 W. R. 1018.

507. — Restrictions imposed by certificate of naturalisation.]—Where an alien naturalised in 1858 under a certificate of the Secretary of State, which conferred upon him the rights of a native-born British subject, with the exception, inter alia, of any rights & capacities of a native-born British subject, out of, & beyond, the dominions of the British Crown & the limits thereof, other than such as might be conferred upon him by the grant of a passport enabling him to travel in foreign parts, made a codicil to his will in the Canton of Ticino in Switzerland:—Held: taking the certificate & Aliens Act, 1844 (c. 60), s. 6 together, such codicil could not be admitted to probate in England.—In the Goods of GATTI (1879), 39 L. T. 639; 27 W. R. 323.

508. — Foreigner domiciled in England.]—Wills Act, 1861 (c. 114), applies only to the wills of British subjects.

Therefore the ct. refused to admit to probate the will of a foreigner domiciled in England at the time it was made, such will having been executed in accordance with the law of Baden, which was testator's domicile of origin, but not with the forms required by the laws of this country.—In the Goods of KELLER (1891), 61 L. J. P. 39; 65 L. T. 763.

509. What included in "personal estate"—Leaseholds.]—An Englishman resident in Scotland bequeathed his whole means & estate to a trustee to pay certain pecuniary legacies, & all the rest of his means & estate to be divided equally among certain of his godchildren. The execution of the will was valid according to the law of Scotland, but invalid according to the English law. Testator possessed leasehold property in England:—Held: the English leaseholds passed under the will by virtue of Wills Act, 1861 (c. 114), s. 2.—Re WATSON, CARLTON v. CARLTON (1887), 35 W. R. 711.

512. Will made within United Kingdom—In accordance with English law—Domicile of testator immaterial.]—When a British subject dies abroad after Wills Act, 1861 (c. 114), leaving a will executed in England in accordance with the law of England, upon motion for probate it is not necessary to consider whether he had or had not acquired a foreign domicile.—In the Goods of RIPPON (1863), 3 Sw. & Tr. 177; 32 L. J. P. M. & A. 141; 9 L. T. 117; 164 E. R. 1242.

513. — — —.]—(1) In the event of a British subject dying abroad in a foreign country & a will is produced executed in England in proper form, the case is within Wills Act, 1861 (c. 114), s. 2, & the ct. will make a grant of probate to the exor. appointed in the English will without any regard to the domicile of deceased.

(2) But the English ct. will not make a grant of probate which might conflict with any order already made by some foreign ct. This rule applies only when an order has been made in a foreign ct., & does not apply to cases in which proceedings have been taken but no order made.—Re COCQUEREL, [1918] P. 4; 87 L. J. P. 47; 118 L. T. 96.

514. Will or codicil made abroad—Principles guiding English court in granting probate.]—Deceased wrote on the back of his will, which was not duly executed, a document headed "2 codicil." This document, although it was properly executed according to the law of the country where made, could not by that law have an independent existence, nor establish the will by reason that it was indorsed upon the will & referred to it:—Held: (1) neither the will nor codicil could be admitted to probate; (2) in determining the question what papers were testamentary under Wills Act, 1861 (c. 114), the ct. would have regard to the law of one country only, & would not mix up the legal precepts of different countries.—PECHELL v. HILDERLEY (1869), L. R. 1 P. & D. 673; 38 L. J. P. & M. 66; 20 L. T. 1014; 33 J. P. 679; 17 W. R. 865.

515. — — — No specific provision in lex loci as to form—Nor particular form prescribed.]—Testator, an English subject, residing in the Congo Free State, made a will in holograph unattested form in that state:—Held: such a will was good as made according to the forms required by the law of the place where same was made, because in fact the cts. of the Congo Free State would have upheld the will.

Semble: where there is an absence of any specific provision in the law of a foreign country as to the forms of wills, & there is a general provision that, where no specific provision exists, cases are to be decided according to general principles of law & equity, any form is sufficient which carries out the necessary requirements of testamentary disposition.—*STOKES v. 520. ——— Holograph will incorrectly dated.]—A domiciled Englishwoman residing in France drew up in her own handwriting, & signed, a document purporting to dispose of her personal estate, but owing to an inadvertent error it was incorrectly dated by her. Under French law a holograph will, in order that it might be held valid, must bear the date on which it is made, & the date, like the rest of the document, must be in testator's own handwriting. Also by French law a wrong date was regarded as no date, & a holograph will, wrongly dated, was prima facie held to be invalid. But the invalidity might be rebutted by showing that the mistake was brought about by accident or inadvertence:—Held: on the facts being proved as above such a document, although incorrectly dated, being otherwise a valid testamentary document according to French law, & the date having been inserted under such circumstances that the French cts. would grant relief, was entitled to be admitted to probate in England although it had not been adjudicated upon in the French cts.—LYNE v. DE LA FERTÉ & DUNN (1910), 102 L. The vendor assigned the bond & real lien to the bank of L. who gave J. notice thereof. J., finding that the incumbrances were not discharged at the expiration of the time for payment of the bond, deposited the principal & interest in the bank of Scotland, & informed the assignees that the money was so consigned, but should be paid to them on producing discharges from the incumbrances. The assignees produced some discharges, & received a proportion of the deposit. The balance remained in the bank on receipts taken in J.'s name up to the time of his death. J. before his death executed in England several instruments in writing. In a will respecting his Scottish estate he declared his will to be, that said receipts of deposit should become the property of certain trustees of that estate, & be indorsed to them by his exors. in a will of his English property, the money to remain in deposit until the titles of the estate should be cleared, & then to become the property of the vendors' representatives on payment of the bond. He then made a will respecting his English property, appointing exors., & afterwards cancelled it. He subsequently executed a trust deed, disposing of his Scottish estate, & therein declared that he had in a separate will respecting his English property directed his trustees & exors. to endorse said receipts to the trustees of his Scottish estate. He afterwards made a will disposing of his English property, & thereby gave his goods & chattels, wherever situated, to his nephew, & appointed him sole exor. & residuary legatee. He obtained probate of the will, & claimed thereunder the bank deposit in a suit instituted in Scotland between him & other claimants:—Held: (1) the Scottish ct. had a right to look to the first will for discovering testator's intentions respecting the deposited money; (2) without looking to that will, the trust deed contained a sufficient declaration of J.'s intention to appropriate the money to his trustees for payment of his bond; (3) following up the principle that the lex loci domicilii governed the distribution of personal estate, the Scottish & all foreign cts. are bound in the interpretation of a testator's written declarations of intention touching his personal estate, situated within the foreign juris-

The £4,000 was not paid by A. during his lifetime, but by his will, made after the death of his daughter, A. gave £16,000 between the younger children of the marriage:—Held: the will being an English disposition, the English doctrine of presumption against double portions was applicable, & the provisions made by testator's will in favour of his grandchildren operated as a satisfaction of the provisions made for them by the settlement.—CAMPBELL v. CAMPBELL (1866), L. R. 1 Eq. 383; 35 L. J. Ch. 241; 13 L. T. 667; 12 Jur. N. S. 118; 14 W. R. 327.

Probate of an English translation was afterwards granted by the Probate Division of the High Ct. to the exor. appointed by the will. The translation was certified by an English notary public to be a true & faithful translation of a copy, in French, of the original will, which was certified by a notary public in France to be a correct copy. The English translation & the certified French copy were both annexed to the certificate of the English notary, & were both deposited in the Probate Registry. A question upon the construction of the will being raised in the Ch. Division, & it being alleged that the English translation was inaccurate:—Held: (1) none of the parties insisting upon an application being made to the Probate Division to correct the English translation, the ct. was entitled to look at the original French as well as at the English translation; (2) the ct. could not construe the will without the assistance of French lawyers, nor until the testator's domicil had been ascertained.—Re CLIFF'S TRUSTS [1892] 2 Ch. 229; 61 L. J. Ch. 397; 66 L. T. 483; 40 W. R. 439; 36 Sol. Jo. 398.

The will was admitted to probate:—Held: (1) the will was an English will, & in construing it the Spanish language was only to be looked to, in order to ascertain the equivalent expressions in English; (2) K. being appointed universal heir, the beneficial interest after performing the trusts, if any there were, belonged to K., & not to testator's next of kin.—*REYNOLDS v. 532. “Next of kin” of foreigner—In English will—Whether sister of half-blood or nephew preferred.]—A bequest of personalty in the will of a domiciled Englishman to the next of kin of a foreigner must be construed to mean the nearest in blood according to English law, subject to any question of status should it arise.

Accordingly where a domiciled Englishman bequeathed a legacy to a German with a direction that in the event of the death of the legatee in his lifetime, which happened, the legacy should not lapse but be divided among the next of kin of the legatee:—

Held: the next of kin must be ascertained according to English law, & a sister of the half-blood was therefore entitled to the exclusion of nephews & nieces who by German law would have had priority.—Re FERGUSSON'S WILL, [1902] 1 Ch. 483; 71 L. J. Ch. 360; 50 W. R. 312; 40 Sol. Jo. 247.

an English bond, payable to him & his exors. Afterwards B. gave A. a heritable bond charging lands in Scotland as an additional security, & made payable to him & his heirs at a different time & with a different rate of interest. On the death of A.:—Held: the English bond was the primary security, it did not merge in the Scottish heritable bond as the jus nobilius, & the debt passed under A.'s will, executed according to the English, but not according to the Scottish, solemnities, under the general term "securities for money."—*CUST v. 534. "All my just debts"—Debts contracted in country other than that of domicile.—The expression in a will "all my just debts" include all testator's debts whenever or wherever contracted, & therefore include a debt contracted by him after the making of the will, & contracted in a country other than that of his domicile, & secured upon property situated in that other country.

The burden of showing that the words have a less extensive meaning lies on him who asserts their restricted operation.

A Scotsman domiciled in England had a Scottish estate, G. He made a trust disposition & settlement in the Scottish form of this estate, creating thereby certain charges upon it, & giving it, subject to those charges, to his eldest son. A Scottish trust disposition & settlement is equivalent to an English will, & three years afterwards he made a codicil to it, revoking one of the charges. He was possessed of considerable property in England as well as of this estate in Scotland, & shortly after making this codicil he made an English will, declaring it to be the last will as to all property real or personal of which he was capable of disposing by English law. He declared that the provisions of this will were not in any manner to affect the G. estate, nor to put to election persons who might be entitled both under the trust disposition & under the will. He directed the trustees under his will to sell, etc., all the residuary real & personal estate, & out of the moneys which should come to their hands by virtue of the residuary devise & bequest "to pay & discharge all my just debts, funeral & testamentary expenses," etc. He became entitled to the interest for his own life of a sum of money which was afterwards to go to his children. He induced the trustees of that money to let him have the money itself on his executing to them in the Scottish form a heritable bond, which by law of Scotland made the Scottish estate, G., a security for the amount:—Held: this sum so borrowed from the trustees & secured by heritable bond on the estate of G. was a "debt" within the meaning of the direction to pay all testator's just debts contained in the English will, & the residuary personal estate of testator was liable to discharge it in exoneration of the Scottish real estate of G.—MAXWELL v. MAXWELL (1870), L. R. 4 H. L. 506; 39 L. J. Ch. 698; 23 L. T. 325; 19 W. R. 15, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. MAXWELL v. HYSLOP (1867), L. R. 4 Eq. 407.

At the time of his decease testator was possessed of the bonds payable to bearer of a waterworks co. in South Africa & of the shares of mining cos. in South Africa. The bonds were only payable in South Africa. The mining cos. were constituted according to the laws of the Transvaal & Orange Free State, & had their head offices in South Africa, where the register of shareholders was kept & the directors met, but they also had an office in London, where a duplicate register was kept & shares could be transferred. Testator's name was on the London register of the cos., & all his bonds & share certificates were at his bankers in London:—Held: the bonds passed under the bequest to the "foreign trustees," but the shares passed under the bequest to the "home trustees."—*Re CLARK, McKECKNIE v. 538. — Mere general expressions.]

—An heir is not put to his election between a Scottish estate & benefits given to him by a will by the force of mere general expressions, especially if the uses of the will are not applicable to Scottish property.

A testator by a codicil, reciting that he had purchased certain freeholds since the date of his will, devised them to trustees upon the trusts expressed in his will, & directed that, if any hereditaments purchased by him at any time or times should happen to be conveyed after the date & publishing thereof, his heir-at-law, or other real representatives, & every other person in whom same should be vested, should forthwith upon his decease convey & assure same to his trustees upon the trusts of his will. He purchased other estates afterwards:—Held: as to the estates subsequently purchased a case of election was not raised against the heir taking benefits under the will.—*JOHNSON v. 539. — Universality of language of gift.]—A Scotsman, domiciled in England, & having real & personal estates here, & also real estate (heritable bonds) in Scotland, made his will in this country & in the English form, by which, by virtue of every right, power or authority enabling him in his behalf he devised & bequeathed all his real & personal estate whatsoever & wheresoever upon certain trusts for the benefit of his children. It appeared that the will was wholly inoperative to pass real estate according to the law of Scotland:—Held: the eldest son, the heir-at-law according to the Scottish law, was not put to his election, whether he would take the benefits given to him as one of the children of testator in the real & personal estate in England, or would take the Scottish real property.—*MAXWELL v. 540. — After-acquired property.]—A domiciled Englishman executed a trust disposition & settlement in the Scottish form of an estate in Scotland. He then made an English will declaring that it should not affect the previous settlement of his Scottish estate, & charged his residuary real & personal estate with payment of his debts. He subsequently charged the Scottish estate with £14,000 by means of a Scottish heritable bond. After the date of his will testator purchased other freehold property in Scotland, which passed by intestacy to his heir:—

Held: the heir was not bound to elect, but had the same right to that property which he would have had if there had been no will.—MAXWELL v. HYSLOP (1867), L. R. 4 Eq. 407; 16 L. T. 660; affd. on other grounds, sub nom. MAXWELL v. MAXWELL (1870), L. R. 4 H. L. 506, H. L.

541. — — — — —]—Testatrix of French birth made her will dated in 1878 in the French language. The will was, however, in English form, & testatrix's domicile was English. Testatrix gave legacies & annuities to various persons, including her only daughter, & a specific legacy of articles of vertu to her only son. Testatrix then declared that, after the deduction of all the above bequests, together with the necessary sums to secure the payment of the annuities, the residue of her fortune should belong to her grandson. The only real estate which testatrix possessed was situate in France. Her personal property was not quite sufficient to pay all her debts & legacies. The question was whether testatrix's real estate in France, devolving to her French heirs, could be taken as intended by testatrix to be comprised in her will, & to be subjected by her to same obligation of contributing to the payment of debts & legacies, in which event the French heirs could be put to their election:—Held: according to the authorities the universality of a gift of property contained in a will was not sufficient to demonstrate or create a ground of inference that testator meant it to extend to property which was incapable, although his own, of being given by the particular instrument, & therefore testatrix could not be said to have intended to affect her French real estate, there being nothing in the will from which the ct. could infer any such intention so as to take the case out of the rule above stated.—BARING v. ASHBURTON (1886), 54 L. T. 463.

542. — — — — — “All my real estate situate in any part of United Kingdom or elsewhere.”]—Testator by his will made in 1867 devised all the residue of his real estate situate in any part of the United Kingdom, or elsewhere, to trustees upon trust for sale & to hold the proceeds upon certain trusts. At the time of his death he was seised of real estate in England & in Scotland. According to the law of Scotland the will was inoperative to pass real estate situate there, & that estate descended to the testator's heir-at-law:—Held: the heir-at-law must elect between the benefits conferred upon him by the will & his rights as heir-at-law in the Scottish estates.—ORRELL v. ORRELL (1871), 6 Ch. App. 302; 40 L. J. Ch. 539; 24 L. T. 245; 19 W. R. 370, L. JJ.

By Paraguayan law that disposition was valid only as to one-fifth, four-fifths being the portion of the obligatory heirs. She bequeathed to those heirs benefits out of property in England. In an action to administer the English estate:—Held: the heirs must elect between what they took by the invalidity of the gift to charity under

544. — Whether heir of English real estate put to election.—D., domiciled in Scotland, & possessed of a real estate in England, & of heritable & movable property in Scotland, died leaving a trust disposition of the whole of his subject, heritable & movable, in favour of trustees, in which they were directed to turn the whole into money, & divide the proceeds equally among his four children, & the deed was executed in the Scottish form attested by two witnesses. This not being sufficient to convey the English real estate, although it was clear that it was the intention of the disposer to convey it along with the rest of his property to the trustees, the eldest son & heir-at-law insisted that it was a nullity as to the English estate, & that he was entitled to take that as heir-at-law to his father, & also to take his fourth share of the Scottish property:—Held: the heir-at-law was put to his approbate or reprobate (election), & must waive all objections, & allow the trust disposition to have full effect as to the whole property according to the intent of the disposer, or take nothing under the disposition.—DUNDAS v. DUNDAS (1830), 2 Dow & Cl. 349; 6 E. R. 757, H. L.

545. — Where by a foreign will not so executed as to pass real estate in England real estate in England is devised away from the heir & personal estate is bequeathed to the heir, the heir is not bound to elect between the real & personal estates, but takes both.

A testatrix resident & domiciled in Italy in 1890 made an Italian will purporting to give real estate in England to V. absolutely, & her residuary real & personal estate to R. The will was not so executed as to be effectual to pass real estate in England. R. was testatrix's heiress-at-law. In 1901 testatrix by deed settled the English real estate upon trust for V. for life with remainder for his children in tail, & an ultimate remainder to the use of herself in fee. V. died not having had children:—Held: R. was entitled to both the English realty as heiress-at-law & the personalty as residuary legatee, & was not put to her election between the two.—Re DE VIRTE, VAIANI v. DE VIRTE, [1915] 1 Ch. 920; 84 L. J. Ch. 617; 112 L. T. 972.

546. — Acts amounting to election by heir of foreign immovables.—A will attested by two witnesses contained a devise of freeholds in England to A., testator's son & heir, for life with remainder to trustees, & a devise to them of estates in St. K. upon trust to sell & to invest the proceeds in estates in England to be held upon the same trusts. A. was in possession of the English, & he received the rents of the St. K., estates during his life, & with his concurrence the trustees made efforts, though ineffectual, to sell the latter. After the death of A. intestate the trustees contracted to sell one of the St. K. estates, but the purchaser refused to complete, on the ground that the will was inoperative in the island, & that the estates descended upon the heir:—Held: A. had elected to take under the will & his infant heir was bound by his acts, & was a trustee under Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60), for the person claiming

548. Time of payment—Legacy to infant domiciled abroad.—A legacy bequeathed to an infant domiciled abroad may be paid when the infant comes of age by the law of England, or of the place of domicile, whichever first happens, & in the meantime must be dealt with in the usual way as an infant's legacy, although by the law of the place of domicile the guardian of the infant may be entitled to receive the legacy.—Re HELLMAN'S WILL (1866), L. F. Revocation.

555. By marriage—Governed by lex domicilii at date of marriage—Changed domicil recognising revocation by marriage immaterial.]—Testator being domiciled in Scotland in anticipation of his marriage, which subsequently took place in Scotland, executed a deed of settlement, which he also intended should operate as his will. By the law of Scotland such a document as a disposition of property at death would not be revoked by the marriage of the contracting parties. Testator after his marriage became domiciled in England:—Held: as the settlement was valid by the law of domicil as a testamentary disposition at the time of execution, as also subsequently to the marriage & at the moment when testator left the country, it continued valid notwithstanding the change of domicil.—In the Goods of REID (1866), L. A Dutch subject domiciled in Holland made her will & afterwards married, which by the law of the domicil effected no revocation of her will. She subsequently became domiciled here, whilst retaining Dutch allegiance, & died here:—Held: her will was entitled to probate in England, in spite of the marriage subsequent to its execution but before the change of domicil.—In the Estate of GROOS, [1904] P. 269; 73 L. By subsequent instrument—English will—Dealing with English realty—Subsequent Italian will with general revocation clause.]—Testator, who had exchanged an English for an Italian domicil, left two wills, one executed in England, & a later one in Italy in the form prescribed by the Italian law. The first dealt with realty & personalty, & nominated an exor. The second did not touch the realty; it nominated testator's wife sole heiress, & it contained the following passage: "I erase, revoke, & annul every other act or last will which I may have made:."—Held: both by the English & the Italian law the first will was revoked by the second, & the probate which had been granted of it should be revoked.—*COTTRELL v. Lastly he executed a paper in England which confirmed the English will in whatever it did not clash or interfere with the contents of the codicil, which was to be considered as his last & deliberate will:—Held: the Spanish codicils were not revoked by the last-mentioned paper, but, as forming part of the will which did not clash with such paper, were confirmed by it.—In the Goods of DE LA SAUSSAYE (1873), L. A testator domiciled in the Isle of Man executed a deed conveying the whole of his property to a trustee upon trust after his decease to realise & invest it, & to pay the annual income to his widow for her life, & upon her death to divide it amongst his children. This document was duly executed as a will, & the Ecclesiastical Ct. of the Isle of Man granted probate of it to the trustee as exor. according to the tenor:—Held: (1) the Isle of Man grant should be followed so far as to admit the document to probate, without any inquiry as to whether or not it was testamentary, but not so far as to make the grant to the trustee as exor. according to the tenor; (2) it appearing that testator intended to deprive the widow who was primarily entitled to the grant of any control over the administration of the estate, administration with the will annexed should be decreed to the trustee under Ct. of Probate Act, 1857 (c. 77), s. 73.—In the Goods of COSNAHAN (1866), L. 588. Disposition of property of Russian Imperial family.]—By the law of Russia all testamentary instruments executed by members of the Imperial family were disregarded, & the disposition of the property of such persons after their death was within the exclusive power of the Emperor of Russia. A., a member of the Russian Imperial family, died in Russia, having executed a will by which he appointed B., his son, as his exor. After A.'s death a meeting of the members of his family was held, & an arrangement for the disposition of his property in accordance with the terms of his will was agreed to, & was embodied in a document termed an "Acte Définitif," which was subsequently confirmed by the Emperor of Russia,

& by the terms of the "Acte Définitif" B. was constituted the sole & entire owner of certain shares held by deceased in a railway co. having its offices in England. Upon a certificate from the Russian Ambassador in England with the seal of the Russian Embassy reciting that the law of Russia was as stated above, & that under the "Acte Définitif" B. was the sole & entire owner of the railway shares:—Held: a grant should be made to the attorney of B. of letters of administration with the "Acte Définitif" annexed, limited to the property of deceased in England.—In the Goods of OLDENBURG (PRINCE) (1884), 9 P. Part of the personal estate was in England:—Held: probate might be granted to the widow of a copy of the original will properly proved, limited to such time as might elapse before the original will itself should be brought in.—In the Goods of VON LINDEN, [1896] P. 148; 65 L. She survived her husband & died in 1905 having resided many years in Switzerland & acquired a domicile in that country. A will made by her shortly before her death, executed & attested in accordance with English law, but invalid according to the law of Switzerland, after making certain specific bequests, concluded as follows: "Any other property whatsoever of which I am or may be possessed I bequeath in equal shares to all my grandchildren." A summons was taken out by the trustees of the settlement raising the question whether the will was a valid exercise of the power of appointment:—Held: (1) the will complied in form with all the requisites for a proper exercise of the power; & the only question arose from the Swiss domicile of testatrix; (2) the most reasonable principle to apply was that the will should be construed, not according to hypothetical constructions which might be placed upon it by foreign cts., but wholly with reference to English law, & that being the case Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 27, was clearly applicable, & the power was therefore

By a French settlement not under seal made in 1866 upon the marriage of his daughter, he purported to appoint the whole fund to her, reserving to himself the power of disposing of a life interest in a portion of the fund in favour of his second wife, & by a holograph codicil, dated in 1871, made in France & unattested, after reciting an arrangement made when his daughter was married between himself, his daughter & her intended husband, that such second wife should have such provision, he in effect appointed that if his daughter & her husband should carry out this arrangement they should have the whole of the fund. This codicil was admitted to probate under Wills Act, 1861 (c. 114):—Held: (1) though admitted to probate the codicil was invalid as a testamentary exercise of the power, Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), ss. 9, 10 not being repealed by Wills Act, 1861 (c. 114), & did not revoke the appointment by will; (2) the codicil could not be treated as a defective attempt to exercise the power by deed, which the ct. would aid; (3) the appointments by the settlement & codicil were frauds upon the power; (4) the arrangements made by the settlement & codicil involved a threat to revoke the will if they were not carried into effect, & consequently the will, being an ambulatory instrument, was vitiated & became a fraud upon the power although at the date of its execution it was not open to objection.—Re KIRWAN'S TRUSTS (1883), 25 Ch. Subsequently by codicil, which was unattested, but which was valid according to the law of Scotland she appointed part of the fund to her sons:—Held: the ct. would aid the defective execution of the codicil in favour of the sons, & so as to revoke the will to the extent to which the codicil effectively interfered with the disposition of the will.—*Re WALKER, MACCOLL v. (2) Although as a general rule a will is to be construed according to the law of testator's domicile, this rule does not apply where there are indications on the face of the will that testator wrote it with reference to the law of some other country.

A domiciled French subject having a general power of appointment over a fund under an English instrument left all her property to her husband by a holograph will made in French form & unattested. The will was valid by the law of France, & letters of administration with the will annexed were granted in this country. 616. Terms of power not complied with.]—Where the donee of a testamentary power of appointment is a foreigner with foreign domicile, & special formalities for the execution of the power are required by the instrument creating it, it is not enough for the valid execution of the power that the instrument purporting to execute it is a will according to the law of the domicile, but such will must comply with the formalities required by the power.

A donee of a general power to appoint by will created by a will antecedent to Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26) was a domiciled Frenchwoman. She executed a holograph will in French, which was valid by the law of France, & purported to be an exercise of the power. This will, although unattested was admitted to probate in England. The power by the terms of the will which created it was to be executed by the donee in the presence of, & attested by, two or more credible witnesses:—Held: the requirements for execution specified by the power not having been satisfied, the power was not well executed.—BARRETTO v. By it she appointed her husband general & universal legatee, & bequeathed to him all her property, but in the event of there being children she bequeathed him one-fourth absolutely & the usufruct in another fourth. There was no issue of the marriage. The lady died in 1902, & the will was admitted to probate in England. On a summons asking whether it was a valid exercise of the power of appointment:—Held: although a testamentary power contained in an English instrument might be exercised by the will of a domiciled foreigner valid according to foreign law & admitted to probate in this country, yet if such will did not effectually exercise the power apart from Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 27, there being no reference to either property or power in the will, s. 27 could be introduced as a rule of construction for the purpose of rendering the will a valid exercise of the power when the rules of construction according to foreign law would have to be applied, & therefore the will was not a valid execution of the power.—Re D'ESTE'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS, POULTER v. by a general bequest not referring either to the property or to the power, does not apply to a foreign will not executed in accordance with the provisions of the Act, though valid according to the law of testator's domicile & admitted to probate in this country, unless the will contains on its face an indication that it is to be construed according to English rules of construction.

A testatrix domiciled in France, in whom was vested a general testamentary power of appointment over personalty under an English instrument, by an unattested will, which was admitted to probate as complying with the law of France, created her niece universal legatee of her property in England as well as in France. The will contained no reference either to the power or to the property, but certain unsigned memoranda in the handwriting of testatrix referred to the property comprised in the power, & showed a clear intention to appoint in favour of the niece. Powers of appointment were unknown in France, but according to the expert evidence by the law of France the will would pass everything which testatrix could dispose of, & the unsigned memoranda would be admissible as evidence of her intention:—Held: the question of the exercise of the power was to be determined upon evidence admissible by the law of England, & the will did not operate as a valid exercise of the power.—Re SCHOLEFIELD, SCHOLEFIELD v. 621. —.]—By an unattested holograph will made in France in 1907 the English wife, aged nineteen, of a Frenchman domiciled & resident in France appointed him her legataire universel. At the time of her death in 1917 & in the events which had happened the wife had under her marriage settlement, made in England & duly sanctioned under the Infant Settlement Act, 1855 (c. 43), a general power of appointment over the settled funds by will or codicil executed in such manner as to be valid according to the law of her domicil or by any writing purporting to be a will or codicil executed in such manner that same would be valid as such according to the law of England if she were at the time of her death domiciled in England. The settlement contained a declaration that it should be construed, & the rights of all parties thereunder should in all respects be regulated, according to the law of England. Administration with the will annexed had been granted in England to the husband's attorney. According to the law of France the document was a valid will, but inasmuch as at the time of making it the wife was a married woman over sixteen, but under twenty-one, years of age, she was competent to dispose by will of only one-half of the property of which she would have been able to dispose if she had been twenty-one years of age:—Held: (1) the effect of the declaration was not to restrict the testamentary capacity of the wife to full age according to the law of England, & the will, being a good will according to the law of France, was within the contemplation of the settlement as an instrument by which the power could be exercised, notwithstanding that the wife was under twenty-one when she made it; (2) Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 27, could be invoked for the purpose of interpreting the French will, & the power had been effectually exercised by the disposition therein contained of the wife's estate in general words; (3) inasmuch as by French law the testamentary capacity of the wife was in the circumstances limited to one-half only of the property of which she could have disposed if she had been twenty-one years of age at the time of making her will, her will only operated on one-half of the property subject to the power, & the other half went as in default of appointment.—*Re LEWAL'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS, GOULD v. 622. Effect of restrictions imposed on exercise of power by lex domicilii—Will valid by English law. —On Dec. 20, 1881, prior to the marriage, solemnised in England, of a domiciled Englishwoman, a widow, with a domiciled Spaniard, real estate in England of the intended wife was vested by her in a trustee in fee, to such uses as the intended wife should by deed or will appoint, & subject thereto, to the use of the intended wife, for her separate use. The settlement was made with the approbation of the intended husband, & the deed contained a statement that this approbation was given in consideration of a renunciation the same day executed by the intended wife of any rights which she would otherwise have acquired by her marriage in respect of the property of the intended husband accordingly to the law of Spain. The deed also contained a declaration that it was to take effect and be construed according to the law of England. The marriage was solemnised on the next day. On Feb. 23, 1882, the wife, being then domiciled in Spain, executed a deed-poll in accordance with the provisions of the settlement, whereby she, in exercise of the power given to her by the settlement, appointed the real estate to the use of herself in fee for her separate use. By another deed executed the same day, to which the husband was party, she, with the consent of the husband appointed & conveyed, & the husband conveyed the real estate to the use of a trustee in fee, upon trust for sale, & out of the proceeds of sale to pay certain specified debts, & subject thereto, in trust for such person or persons as the wife should at any time or times thereafter by any writing or writings from time to time appoint, & in default of any appointment, & subject thereto, in trust for the wife absolutely for her separate use. Under this deed the trustees sold the property & out of the proceeds of sale paid the specified debts, & there then remained a surplus in his hands. The wife died on June 1, 1882, having by a will, executed immediately after her marriage, & which purported to be made in exercise of the powers reserved to her by her marriage settlement, & of all other powers enabling her, directed, appointed & declared that the real & personal estate over which she had any disposing power at the time of her death should be held & applied in the payment of certain legacies & annuities, & subject thereto, she gave four-fifths of her real & personal estate, in case she should leave no children, to her husband absolutely. She gave the remaining one-fifth of her property, charged with the before-mentioned annuities & legacies, to her brother & sisters, or to the children per stirpes of such of them as should die before her leaving children. Testatrix died without issue. The husband survived her. According to the law of Spain under such circumstances two-thirds of her property belonged to her father & mother, notwithstanding that she had left a will:—Held: whether the will was or was not a good exercise of the power reserved by the deed of Feb. 1882, it was a valid testamentary disposition by virtue of the limitation in default of appointment to the separate use of testatrix, & it took effect according to English law, & the legatee named in it, including the husband, were entitled to the benefits given to them by it.

By his will he gave the whole of his personal property, subject to a certain annuity to his wife, to his children. He died possessed of £13,000 of English Consols, & also of certain property in Jersey. The principal part of the latter consisted of a share in the property of a certain partnership, which had since his death become insolvent. His widow & two others were his extrix. & exors. A gentleman resident in Jersey was shortly after testator's death appointed tuteur of the infant children, in accordance with the law of Jersey. The widow married again, & with the two children came to reside in England. An action was commenced in the Ch. Div. by the infant children for administration of testator's real & personal estate, & for the appointment of guardians. Leave was given for service of the writ out of the jurisdiction on the tuteur & exors. in Jersey, but after service, & before appearance, they moved to discharge the order, on the ground that the proceedings were wrongly instituted in this country:—

Held: inasmuch as plffs. were resident in England, & the bulk of the property was in England, there was no reason why the action should not be brought there.—Re LANE, LANE v. ROBIN (1886), 55 L. T. 149.

Other persons, claiming under the holograph, then commenced proceedings in Italy & applied in the probate action for a stay of all the proceedings in that action. There was no dispute as to the Italian law. Upon appeal from an order staying the proceedings, the only question of substance in dispute was on the construction of the holograph letter:—Held: the English ct. had jurisdiction to make an administration order & to decide any question with regard to the assets of deceased, & the question, being only of construction of English words, ought to be decided in the English cts.—*Re BONNEFOI, SURREY v. A contract between an English & a Scottish firm, signed in London but to be performed in Scotland, contained this stipulation: "Should any dispute arise out of this contract, same to be settled by arbn. by two members of the London Corn Exchange, or their umpire, in the usual way." In an action raised by the Scottish firm in Scotland for implement of the contract & for damages, the English firm pleaded that the action was excluded by the arbn. clause:—Held: the contract was governed by English law, according to which the arbn. clause was valid, & deprived the Scottish cts. of jurisdiction to decide upon the merits of the case, unless the arbn. proved abortive.—HAMLYN & CO. v. The master of a North German vessel, owned by German Subjects, under a North German charter-party, gave a bill of lading for goods shipped on board his vessel in South America as part of a general cargo to be delivered in North Germany to English consignees. The English language, form, money & weight were used in the bill of lading, which contained the proviso, "the damages of the sea only excepted." The master of the vessel, on her arrival at Falmouth, refused to proceed on account of the outbreak of war between France & Germany. Held: whether the contract was governed by English, general maritime or North German law, the master was bound to proceed, as the bill of lading was precise in its terms, & contemplating the happening of certain events, exempted him in only one event.

(3) Seemle: as the rights & obligations of the parties to a contract are to be determined by the law which they have declared themselves to intend, & as where there is no express declaration of intention, the presumption as to the law contemplated by the parties must be gathered from the circumstances of the case, in this case the English law applied to the contract as between the shipowner & consignee.—THE PATRIA (1871), L. 646. Enforced accordingly unless contrary to morality or positive law.—When a contract is made in one country to be performed wholly or partially in another, prima facie the contract is to be construed & enforced according to the lex loci contractus, but the ct. will look at all the circumstances to ascertain by the law of which country the parties intended the contract to be governed & will enforce the contract accordingly, unless it should contain stipulations contrary to morality or expressly forbidden by positive law.

A contract was made in Massachusetts between an American citizen & a British co. of shipowners, by which the co. undertook to carry certain cattle from Boston to England in a British ship. The contract contained a clause that the co. should not be liable for the negligence of the master or crew of the ship. Such a clause is valid by English law, but void by the law of Massachusetts as being against public policy. The cattle were lost by the negligence of the master & crew, & the shipper claimed against the co. for the loss:—Held: the contract itself showed that the parties intended it to be governed by English law, & the stipulation exempting the co. from liability through the negligence of their master & crew, not being immoral

A policy of reinsurance on a ship was executed in Sweden by a Swedish corp'n. according to Swedish law. It was in the English language & in the ordinary Lloyd's form, being substantially identical with the original policy on the ship & an earlier policy of reinsurance, both of which were made in England & governed by English law. It contained a clause providing that all claims & losses should be payable in London, & that in case of any dispute under the policy defts. should be bound in all things by the jurisdiction & decision of the English law cts.:—Held: the policy must be construed by English law, as the circumstances showed such to be the intention of the parties.—*ROYAL EXCHANGE ASSURANCE CORPN. v. The L. firm acted as the agents of the Haytian firm. B. was admitted as a partner in the L. firm. C. died, & the winding up of the Haytian firm was committed by agreement to A. & B. Then A. died, leaving B. sole survivor in each firm. B. & the Haytian legal representative of C. engaged in cross-suits in Hayti, in which certain settled accounts were established. The representative of A., whose assets were all in England, was not a party to the Haytian suit:—Held: (1) there was jurisdiction in the Ct. of Ch. to wind up the partnership in Hayti, & to take the accounts of that firm & of the agency of the L. firm; (2) the law of Hayti was to regulate the transactions of the Haytian firm.—*MAUNDER v. 649. Contracts of shareholders of foreign company—Business carried on abroad—Governing body in England.—A co. consisting of Englishmen was founded in Turkey for making & maintaining a railway. The Turkish Govt. granted to the co. certain powers & privileges & guaranteed the payment of certain interest on capital. Some of the shareholders being dissatisfied with the conduct of the directors appointed a committee of investigation. E., the secretary of the committee, wrote letters to the English Foreign Secretary making grave imputations on the directors, & urging the English Govt. not to influence the Turkish Govt. in their favour. The directors commenced a criminal prosecution of E. for libel & charged the co. with the costs thereby incurred. Accounts including so much of those costs as had been paid, were sanctioned by a half-yearly meeting of the shareholders. Attention was expressly called to the item, & pltf. alone dissented from its approval. Pltf. filed this bill for himself & all other shareholders to restrain the directors from paying any further costs of the prosecution out of the funds of the co. & to compel them to refund those already paid:—Held: the payment was ultra vires, & the injunction should be granted, but no order should be made for repayment of the costs already paid, the directors having acted bonâ fide in accordance with the wishes of a very large majority of the shareholders, & the ct. having a discretion.

The assocn. in this case was one of which the rights of the members as between themselves must be taken to be governed by Turkish law. The assocn. is created by the Sultan's firman & regulated by statutes which were submitted to & sanctioned by the Turkish Govt. The contracts of the shareholders were no doubt actually executed in various places, but the bond between them was intended to be Turkish, & the corp'n. was to have its seat in the Turkish dominions, & to carry on its operations there, though its governing body was to be in England. The rights of the members of the assocn. as between themselves are, therefore, to be determined by Turkish law (WICKENS, V.-C.).—PICKERING v. STEPHENSON (1872), L. R. 14 Eq. 322; 41 L. J. (2) Where an action is brought on a judgment obtained in a foreign ct. the pendency of an appeal in the foreign ct. against that judgment is no bar to the action, although it may afford ground for the equitable interposition of the English ct., in which the action is brought, to prevent the possible abuse of its process, & on proper terms to stay execution.

(3) The judgment of a foreign ct. having jurisdiction over the subject-matter cannot be questioned here, on the ground that the foreign ct. has mistaken the law of its own country, or has come on the evidence to an erroneous conclusion as to the facts.

In an action on a judgment obtained by pltf. against deft. in the Supreme Ct. of New York, deft. pleaded that the judgment was erroneous according to the law of New York, & was liable to be reversed, & that he was prosecuting proceedings in appeal, which were then pending. He set out the record of the proceedings in the original suit there, by which it appeared that the cause had been referred by order of the ct., not to a private arbitrator selected by the parties, but to an officer of the ct. directed to ascertain the facts, who found certain facts, with a certain conclusion of law from them, & judgment was given accordingly in favour of pltf., although the same conclusion would not have followed by the English law had the same facts been found to have occurred here:—Held: the plea was no answer to the action.—*SCOTT v. Co., of London, by an agent at Glasgow, agreed with certain persons at Glasgow for a general insurance on a steamboat, without any mention of an exception of sea risk, & paid the full premium. The agent, although apprised by the secretary of the A. Co. that they did not consider themselves at liberty to insure marine risks, never communicated that circumstance to the assured, & never delivered the actual policy, in which the exception of sea risk was inserted. The steamboat was lost by fire at sea, & an action was brought in the Scottish cts. on the original contract, concluding in the alternative for a policy conformable to the contract, without exception of the sea risk, or for payment of the sum for which the steamboat was insured:—Held: the assured were entitled to judgment on the ground that that part of the statute which gave the monopoly of marine risks to the two cos., the R. & the L., did not extend to Scotland, & the contract being made in Scotland, & the action being founded on that contract, the restriction in the statute did not apply.—*PATTISON v. 659. Contract to be performed in England—Made abroad—Governed by English law.]—The ground for alleging the contract in this case to be French is, that the English house rejected the first proposal of the French house, & made another proposal, which was accepted by the French house in their letter from Calais of May 21, 1837, & that Calais was therefore the place of the contract. But it is not always the place where the contract is signed that gives a character to the contract; the most material point is, where the contract is to be performed. If it was the intention of the parties that the contract in this case should be performed in England, it is then an English, & not a French, contract, & the English law applies (ERSKINE, C.J.).—*Re TRYE, Ex p. 661. ——— Conditional offer accepted abroad—Intention that English law should prevail.]—In an action for breach of promise of marriage, in addition to the evidence given by pltf., a Danish lady, of the oral promise in Denmark, a letter was put in evidence written by deft. in England to pltf. in Denmark, in which he said: "If I were well would you marry me, little girl? Do tell me all now." Evidence of a Danish barrister was read at the trial to the effect that there was no remedy in that country for a breach of promise of marriage unless circumstances existed which were admittedly absent from the present case. Deft. came to this country some time ago, & set up in business here, subsequently turning the business into a co., which was registered & had its chief offices in this country. He was living in this country, & intended to remain here. He wrote to pltf. in the English tongue, & pltf. replied in the same language. Pltf. was an employee first of deft. & then of the co., although she was living in Denmark. Deft. knew nothing of Denmark, except that he had visited it several times & had employed pltf. there, & he knew nothing of the Danish law or language. It was intended that the marriage should take place in England & that the married home was to be there:—Held: (1) the letter was a conditional offer that was accepted by pltf., & there was evidence under the hand of deft. of the offer; (2) the intention of the parties was that the English law should prevail; (3) even if this were not so & the contract was to be governed by Danish law, there was nothing in the law of that country to show that the contract was not a valid & binding contract, but the evidence showed that there was only no remedy; (4) that being so, it was a question of procedure & the lex fori applied. & the action was maintainable in this country.—*HANSEN v. In either case they must be understood to submit to the law there prevailing, & to agree to its action on their contract.

(2) It is immaterial that such agreement so to be ruled by the lex loci contractus is not so expressed in terms; it is equally an agreement in fact presumed de jure, & a foreign ct. interpreting or enforcing a contract so made on any contrary rule, defeats the intention of the parties, as well as neglects to observe the recognised comity of nations.

686. —.]—In cases arising upon contracts entered into in a foreign country the cts. of England inquire into & act upon the laws of foreign countries where by express reference or by necessary implication the foreign law is incorporated with the contract, & proof & consideration of the foreign law becomes necessary to the construction of the contract itself. But in admitting the proof of foreign law as part of the circumstances attending the execution of the contract, or as one of the facts of the existence of a tort, an English ct. applies & enforces its own law so far as it is applicable to the case established, but will not enforce a foreign municipal law, & give a remedy in the shape of damages, in respect of an act which by the English law imposes no liability on the person from whom the damage was claimed.

In a cause of collision promoted by the owners of a Norwegian barque against a British steamer, in the High Ct. of Admlty. in England, for damage done in Belgian waters alleged to have been occasioned by the negligent & improper navigation of the steam vessel, the owners of the steamship pleaded that the vessel was in charge of a pilot, whom they were compelled by the Belgian law to employ. The owners of the barque replied that by the Belgian law it is provided that the owners of a ship which has done damage to another by collision are liable for the damage, notwithstanding the vessel was in charge of a compulsory pilot, & although the damage was occasioned by his negligence or want of skill. The owners of the steamer to this plea objected that even if the article pleaded were true, they would not be liable in the Ct. of Admiralty in England:—Held: the claim being founded on a tort committed in the territory of a foreign state, the party claiming reparation in a British ct. was not entitled to the benefit of the foreign law against the admitted provisions of the statute law of England & the practice of the High Ct. of Admiralty in respect of compulsory pilotage, by which no such liability, as provided by the Belgian law, existed, as it was contrary to principle & authority to hold that an English ct. would enforce a foreign municipal law, & give a remedy in the shape of damage in respect of an act which, according to its own principles, imposed

During the voyage the master had sold part of the cargo at a port of distress without instructions from the shippers & an action was commenced for short delivery:—Held: the master was entitled to deal with it according to the law of the flag; & such sale was justifiable by German law, as he had, after taking the best advice he could obtain, sold the cargo in the honest belief that he was acting for the best for all parties in the emergency which had arisen.—THE AUGUST, [1891] P. 328; 60 L. The charterparty, which was made in London, between defts. & the agents of pltf., who was a German subject, was in the English language, & contained all the usual provisions to be found in an English charterparty, & also provided that all freight was to be paid on right delivery of cargo in the United Kingdom in cash as customary. The ship, having met with bad weather on the voyage, put into a port of distress, & the captain, acting on the advice of surveyors sold 746 bags of rice. In an action by the shipowner to recover freight on the bags of rice so sold:—Held: the charterparty must be treated as an English contract, & the question whether freight was payable must be determined not by the law of the flag, but according to English law, under which no freight was recoverable in respect of cargo not delivered at the port of destination.—THE INDUSTRIE, [1894] P. 58; 63 L. J. P. 84; 70 L. T. 791; 42 W. R. 280; 7 Asp. M. L. C. 457; 6 R. 681, C. A.

696. — Bill of lading made in England—By master of English ship.]—By a bill of lading made in England by the master of an English ship certain packages of tea were to be delivered from the ship's deck, where the ship's responsibility should cease, at the port of Montreal unto the G. T. Ry. Co., & by them to be forwarded thence per railway to the station nearest to Toronto, & at that station delivered to the consignees or to their assigns. The instrument contained, in addition to a long list of excepted special risks, whether arising from negligence or otherwise, the following condition: "No damage that can be insured against will be paid for, nor will any claim whatever be admitted unless made before the goods are removed." In an action in the Superior Ct. in Lower Canada against the shipowner for the value of damage done to the packages during the voyage, it appeared that same were landed, placed in certain shipping sheds, removed therefrom to railway freight-sheds in Montreal, & finally delivered to the consignees in Toronto. No notice of damage was given until thirteen days after the delivery was completed:—Held: (1) the condition though in its first clause limited to insurable damage, clearly applied as regards its second clause to all damage, whether apparent or latent, which could by examination of the packages, conducted with reasonable care & skill at the place of removal, have been discovered; (2) the bill of lading in this case was a contract to be governed & interpreted by English law, & no substantive defence arising from delay in making the claim could be made apart from the express condition contained therein, notwithstanding the provisions of Art. 1680 of the Canadian Civil Code.—MOORE v. HARRIS (1876), 1 App. Cas. 318; 45 L. J. P. C. 55; 34 L. T. 519; 24 W. R. 887; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 173, P. C.

697. — — — In English language & form — Given by master of ship registered in Holland & carrying Dutch flag.]—Pltfs. shipped goods on board one of defts.' ships under a bill of lading which was in the English language & form, & described defts. by their corporate name, & which excepted amongst other things collision & accidents, loss or damage from any act, neglect or default whatsoever of the pilots, master or mariners or other servants of the co. in navigating the ship. The goods were lost by the ship coming into collision on the high seas with another ship belonging to defts., & the jury found that, though both ships were in fault, the chief blame was to be attached to the second ship. Deft. co., which was composed entirely of English shareholders, in addition to being registered in England as a limited co., was also registered in Holland as a Dutch co., which was in fact a bare trustee of the ships for the English co. The ships also were registered as Dutch ships, & carried the Dutch flag. Such registration was for the purpose of trading to &

from Dutch ports. The ships were not registered under the Merchant Shipping Acts as British ships. In an action to recover the value of the goods, based, first on the contract to carry safely contained in the bill of lading, & secondly, in tort:—Held: (1) so far as the action was based on contract, defts., as owners of the first ship, were relieved from liability for the negligence of their servants on board that ship by reason of the exceptions in the bill of lading, which was an English contract, & must be construed accordingly; (2) defts. were not liable either expressly or impliedly under the bill of lading, which had reference only to the carrying ship, for the negligence of their servants on board the second ship; (3) defts., as owners of both ships, were liable in tort, & the action, viewed as an action of tort, came within Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (9); & the Admlty. rule as to dividing the loss when both ships in collision were to blame was applicable, so defts., as owners of both ships, would have been liable for the whole amount of the loss, but as they were exonerated by the exception in the bill of lading from the share of the loss occasioned by the negligence of those navigating the carrying ship, they were only liable for the other half of the loss occasioned by the negligence of those on board the second ship; (4) both the ships were English & not Dutch ships, notwithstanding that they were registered in Holland as Dutch ships & carried the Dutch flag, inasmuch as the nationality of a ship depended upon the question of ownership.

The freight payable at Barcelona was to be paid in cash or approved bills at charterers' option at the current rate of exchange for bankers' short bills on London. The charterparty, which was made in London, was in English & on the charterers' own form, & the charterers' liability to pay freight was thereby preserved. The charterparty also contained an arbn. clause under which disputes were to be decided by commercial men in London. The steamship sailed from Calcutta & half of the freight was duly paid. She arrived at Barcelona on Dec. 28, 1918, & a sum of money was paid in sterling by the receivers of the cargo. Among the employes guaranteed was one K., who was guaranteed up to 2,500 dollars. The bank also took out a policy at Lloyd's for £40,000 by which the underwriters were to be liable for loss caused by the dishonesty of employes, & also for loss sustained by the loss or destruction on the owners' premises of bonds, banknotes, etc., owing to fire or burglary. K. made defalcations to the extent of 2,680 dollars, & the bank claimed from pltfs. the full amount of the insurances, viz., 2,500 dollars, leaving a balance of 180 dollars. The bank claimed 180 dollars on the Lloyd's policy, which was paid. The present action was brought by pltfs. against deft., who was one of the underwriters on the Lloyd's policy, for contribution in respect of the loss:—Held: (1) the case was governed by English law; (2) deft. was liable to pay a proportion of the whole loss of 2,680 dollars in the ratio of 2,680 & 2,500.—AMERICAN SURETY CO. 707. — Agreement made in Scotland—For discharge of mortgage of lands in Demerara.]—An agreement made in Scotland for the discharge of a mtge. of lands in Demerara by bills payable in Scotland is a Scottish contract, & is to be interpreted according to the law of that country.

A., being resident in Demerara, mortgaged a plantation in the colony to B. for £6,000, & such further sums not exceeding £50,000, as B. might advance, such mtge. to have proportionate rank & preference with one for which A. had given an obligatory bond of prior date, & which was afterwards made, to C., a merchant at Glasgow, for £14,000, & such further sums not exceeding £50,000 as C. might advance. By an account subsequently stated between A. & C., it appeared that A. was indebted to C. in the sum of £30,000, inclusive of the original mtge. of £14,000, in payment of which A. gave C. ten bills or promissory notes, upon which C. ultimately received £15,000 & interest. No further advances were made by B., but A. being indebted to D., also a merchant at Glasgow, an agreement was entered into for the payment of B.'s mtge. by D., to whom a transfer thereof was made. The estates of A. having been sold pursuant to an order of the Supreme Ct., & all claimants advertised to come in, C. put in his claim for £15,000, the balance due on his mtge. with interest. The representatives of D. also put in their claim for £59,766, the amount of advances made by D. to the mtgor. inclusive of the £6,000 & interest:—Held: the representatives of D. were only entitled under the security assigned to him to the amount of £6,000 & interest, & B. was entitled to rank pari passu with that security to the amount of £14,000, there being no evidence of appropriation by A. of the sums already paid, which were therefore indefinite payments.—CAMPBELL v. SUB-SECT. 5.—ENFORCEMENT OF CONTRACTS.

708. Jurisdiction of court to enforce—Contract to be performed in England—Submission to jurisdiction—Effect of prior decree by foreign court.]—(1) A decree for an account in a ct. of concurrent jurisdiction abroad is not a bar to a suit in this country.

Pltf., a domiciled Englishman, in Nov., 1852, entered into a contract at Genoa with defts., a Sardinian Societa Anonima, whereby his firm was to procure in England shares in deft. co. for the purpose of building ships to ply between Genoa & the Brazils. Pltf.'s firm were to build seven ships, with a commission of £5 per cent. on the cost of construction, & defts. were to exonerate the English shareholders from the amounts coming due from them, which were to be devoted to the building of the ships. In Nov., 1857, pltf.'s firm dishonoured some of defts.' bills, whereupon defts. commenced proceedings in the Tribunal of Commerce at Genoa, to which pltf. appeared. At that time four vessels had been built. In 1859 proceedings were commenced by pltf.'s firm against agents of defts. in London in respect of a sum of £7,000 as insurance money on one of the ships, & in 1860 defts. filed a bill against pltf., claiming this sum, & in that suit an arrangement was made whereby pltf. was at liberty to proceed with the action, & the money was ordered into ct. This bill charged that the Tribunal of Commerce at Genoa was not a fitting or satisfactory tribunal for the determination of the dispute, & prayed for an account of all transactions between the parties, & consequential relief. Deft. co. were in course of liquidation abroad:—Held: (2) defts. could not withdraw this suit from the jurisdiction of the ct.; although the contract was executed abroad it was to be performed in this country; all the materials for taking an account were here, & although defts. were beyond the jurisdiction of the ct., they had appeared, & had so far submitted to its jurisdiction; (3) pltf. was entitled to compensation for loss of contract.—PIETRONI v. 716. — Breach of negative covenants in foreign contract—Injunction to restrain granted.]—A lady, not of age, & her father by writing signed in a foreign country agreed with a theatrical manager to sing at his theatre for a definite period. By a clause subsequently acceded to & signed by her agent, & to which she & her father afterwards assented, she engaged not to use her talents at any other theatre, nor in any concert or reunion, public or private, without the written authorisation of the manager. The lady engaged with the manager of a rival theatre to sing at his theatre within the defined period, & her debut was announced in the usual public advertisements. Upon motion in a suit by the manager against the lady, her father & the manager of the rival theatre, it was objected that the positive & negative terms formed but one agreement, & that, as it had been settled that the ct. could not by injunction enforce the positive term that the lady should sing, it could not enforce the negative stipulation:—Held: although it was a foreign contract, pltf. was entitled to the injunction without reference to where the contract was entered into, or what might be the remedies, or forms of procedure in other countries on it.—LUMLEY v. 717. — Deposit of insurance policy as security for advances—Lien.]—In 1833 A., domiciled in Jersey, deposited with B., domiciled in England, a policy of insurance effected in Jersey, upon A.'s life, for the sum of £499, as security for the sum of £210 advanced by B. to him. This transaction took place in England. No notice of the deposit was given to the insurance office, who afterwards, upon a false representation of the loss of the policy, delivered to A. a duplicate of the policy, which in 1853 he by deed assigned to his wife, from whom he had obtained a judicial sentence of separation de biens, in consideration of the sum of £400, alleged to have been paid by her to him. Notice of this assignment was given to the insurance office. A. or his wife paid the premiums till A.'s death. In 1838 A. became insolvent, & made a cessio bonorum of his property, but no proof of B.'s debt was registered by him under A.'s insolvency. In an action brought in Jersey by A.'s wife against the insurance office to recover the amount of the policy, B. intervened & claimed a lien under the deposit with him by A. of the original policy:—Held: (1) as B.'s domicile was English, & the contract made in England, B. had by the English law a lien upon the policy; (2) the cessio bonorum made by A. in Jersey did not affect such lien; (3) in the absence of evidence whether the assignment to A.'s wife was bonâ fide & for a valuable consideration without notice of the deposit of the original policy to B., the cause should be remitted back to the ct. in Jersey for further proof upon these points, with a declaration that, if the evidence established the title of A.'s wife, she had a preferential title to B., but, if otherwise, her title was to be considered as subsequent to B.'s charge on the policy for the principal & interest of his debt.—LE FEUVRE v. 721. — Right of unnamed principals to sue in England—Suit against foreigners carrying on business abroad—Subject to right of set-off.—Pltfs., merchants at Havana, employed D. & Co., commission agents at Havana, to ship & consign goods for sale to defts., the bankers & agents in London of D. & Co. Defts. knew nothing of pltfs., & only dealt with D. & Co., & the goods were consigned in the name of D. & Co., & all the shipping documents were in their names. The general course of business between D. & Co. & defts. was for defts. to make advances to D. & Co. on general account, on the understanding that D. & Co. should remit them cash, bills or goods to cover such advances. On July 28, 1881, defts. received a telegram from D. & Co. requesting them to insure the goods in question. The next day defts. wrote in reply, acknowledging the telegram, & stating that they had taken out a provisional policy for the amount named. On Aug. 9 defts. received a letter from D. & Co. written on July 24, which informed them that there was an unnamed principal, who were in fact pltfs. This letter defts. answered on Aug. 10. The policy was perfected in the usual way on Sept. 18 on behalf of all parties interested. D. & Co. failed a few days before Sept. 18. The goods were lost at sea, but before the underwriters paid defts. the insurance moneys, pltfs. claimed to be entitled to the proceeds of the policies. Defts. knew of this claim, but claimed to retain & set off the policy moneys against the balance due to them on the general account between them & D. & Co. To an action by pltfs. for the insurance moneys the defence was that there was no privity of contract between pltfs. & defts.; that the contract between D. & Co. & defts. was governed by the Spanish law which prevailed at Havana, & by which defts. were entitled to treat D. & Co. as principals; & that there was a well-known course of business between foreign consignors & London merchants for the latter to make advances to the former against goods & shipping documents, on the terms that the London merchants were entitled to hold the proceeds of all goods so consigned, or, if they were lost at sea, the insurance moneys against any balance that might be due to them on their general account current with the consignors:—Held: (1) the contract between D. & Co. & defts. was governed by English law, & the persons who could sue & be sued on that contract in England must also be determined by English law; (2) by English law it was settled that pltfs., as unnamed principals, could under the circumstances sue defts., & the fact that pltfs. were foreigners carrying on business abroad made no difference; (3) the alleged usage of trade was not proved & pltfs. were entitled to the insurance moneys, freed from the claims of defts., but subject to any set-off which D. & Co. might have against pltfs. for the balance due from them to D. & Co. on the account current between them.—*MASPONS Y HERMANO v. 724. Enforceable in England—Contravention of trade laws.—In an action against the owner of a ship for non-delivery to consignee of gold shipped from Portugal:—Held: (1) the fact that the export of gold was forbidden by the law of Portugal could not alter the right of an English subject, unless there had been a particular determination in his case; (2) a usage in such trade for the master, & not the owner, to be entitled to the freight, would not prevent the owner being liable on the bill of lading; (3) where there was a trading ship concerned in a voyage, it must be considered in the nature of a common carrier.—*BOUCHER v. B. Contracts illegal by Lex loci contractus.

727. General rule.]—Defts. were incorporated in 1836 by special Act for the purposes of making & working the S. Ry., & were empowered to fix the sum to be charged by them in respect of small parcels not exceeding 100 lbs. weight each, as to them should seem proper, provided always that these provisions should not extend to articles, matters or things sent in large aggregate quantities, although made up of separate & distinct parcels, such as bags of sugar, rice & the like, but only to single parcels unconnected with parcels of a like nature which might be sent upon the railway at the same time. By a later Act it was enacted that the charges by the above Act, among others, authorised to be made for the carriage of any goods etc., to be conveyed by the co. or for the use of any steam power or carriage to be supplied by the co., should be at all times charged equally to all persons, & after the same rate per mile, etc. Pltf. collected parcels in France, & made them up into packed parcels, & the railway co. charged him double for such parcels. Pltf. commenced an action for overcharge:—Held: (1) he could not treat the contract made by him abroad as a nullity & claim to alter it, after receiving the consideration for which the price was paid, by fixing a lower price; (2) the lex loci contractus was the means of deciding whether there was illegality in the contract, & according to the law of France there was nothing illegal in it.—BRANLEY v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1862), 12 C. B. N. S. 63; 31 L. J. O. Debt. was to keep, for expenses & honorarium, one-half of the sum which he might recover from W. Debt. sued W. in an English ct. & W. paid to him £500 for the debt & £170 for costs. Debt. paid £300 to pltfs. & retained the remainder, whereupon pltfs. brought an action against him for the balance of the £500:—Held: the agreement was void, & debt. was remitted to his ordinary rights of an attorney upon a valid retainer, & was entitled to retain the £170 paid to him for costs by W., & a further sum of £40, found upon taxation to be due to him from pltfs. for additional costs as between attorney & client, & pltfs. were consequently entitled to a verdict for £160.—*GRELL v. In an action by pltf. to recover for work & services, & medicines supplied under this contract:—Held: (1) pltf., not being registered under the Act, could not recover, & the fact that the contract was made on board a foreign ship made no difference; (2) the Act was part of the lex loci of this country.—*DE LA ROSA v. 737. Shipment of arms to foreign country—Prohibition on importation.—Pltf. insured with defts. arms & ammunition for delivery at certain ports in the Persian Gulf, under a policy which covered capture at sea. The goods were seized & confiscated by an English man-of-war, acting, it was alleged, on behalf of the Persian Govt., under an edict passed in 1881, but which had never been enforced so long as the duty demanded for import of such goods was paid, prohibiting the importation of arms & ammunition into Persia:—Held: (1) pltfs. could recover on the policy, because there had been in fact no wilful concealment on their part from the underwriters of the risk of seizure, for, if they knew of the edict, they had no reason to suppose that it would be enforced so long as the duty payable was forthcoming; (2) the policy was not void, as being on goods shipped for an illegal venture; for the importation of such goods into Persia was neither contrary to the law of Persia as that law was in practice administered, nor illegal by the law of the country of the assured, England being at the time in amity with Persia.—*FRACIS, TIMES & CO. v. Deft., a Swiss subject, entered into an agreement with the plffs., French subjects residing in France, when he was in France on a temporary visit he being then domiciled in Switzerland but residing in England. Plffs. afterwards obtained judgment against him in a French ct. for breach of the agreement. 741. ————.]—An English ct. will not enforce a foreign contract, though valid by the law of the country in which it was made, in cases where the ct. deems the contract to be in contravention of some essential principle of justice or morality.

Pltf., who was domiciled in a foreign country, sued on a contract made in that country between himself & deft., a woman likewise domiciled there, whom he had coerced into signing the contract by threats of a criminal prosecution against her husband for an offence which he had committed, the consideration for the contract being that pltf. would not prosecute the husband. Evidence was given to the effect that the contract was not invalid by the law of the country in which it was made:—Held: even assuming that to be so, the ct. would not enforce a contract so procured.—*KAUFMAN v. The slaves were acquired by defts. in Brazil after the passing of Slave Trade Act, 1824 (c. 113), & before the passing of Slave Trade Act, 1843. A large number of the slaves were purchased & the others were the children & offspring of those acquired by purchase:—Held: the contract was legal, & might be enforced in this country, on the ground that s. 5 of the latter Act permitted the sale of slaves, the holding of whom was not prohibited by any Act of Parliament, & no statute prohibited the holding of the slaves in Brazil, even though the purchasing of them there might be a felony in a British subject.—*SANTOS v. 748. — Trading with the enemy—Validity determined by English law.]—An English co., owning cupreous ore mines in Spain, on various dates prior to the outbreak of the war between Great Britain & Germany, contracted to sell to three German cos. large quantities of this ore, to be shipped from Spain to Rotterdam, or certain other Continental ports, & to be delivered to the several buyers by instalments extending over a number of years. Each of the contracts contained a suspensory clause providing that, if owing to strikes, war or any other cause, over which the sellers had no control, they should be prevented from shipping or delivering the ore, the obligation to ship & deliver should be suspended during the continuance of the impediment & for a reasonable time afterwards, & the clause contained a corresponding provision in favour of the buyers, suspending the obligation to receive in the like event. At the date of the outbreak of war some of the contracts had been partially executed, the others were wholly executory. The contracts with one of the German cos. were in English form; those with the two other cos. were made in Germany & were in the German language. The English co. by actions commenced under Legal Proceedings against Enemies Act, 1915 (c. 36), claimed declarations that all the contracts were abrogated on Aug. 4, 1914, by the existence of a state of war between Great Britain & Germany:—Held: (1) apart from the suspensory clause, the contracts were abrogated on the outbreak of war inasmuch as they involved trading with the enemy; (2) the suspensory clause, assuming that it applied to a war between the countries of the contracting parties, was void as against public policy as tending to the detriment of this country & the advantage of the enemy country; (3) in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the presumption was that the law of Germany was the same as the law of England; (4) assuming that these contracts were valid by the law of Germany, the question whether they were void as against public policy was to be determined by the law of this country.—ERTEL BIEBER & Co. v. CAMPBELL (1913), 25

749. —.]—Until the contrary be proved, the general law of a foreign State is presumed to be the same as the law of this country. Assuming, however, that the ct. had heard evidence as to German law & had decided as a matter of fact that according to German law the force majeure clause in the contract covered the case of war between the United Kingdom & Germany, & that there was nothing contrary to German public policy in the clause so interpreted, this would not, in my opinion, conclude the matter in applts.' favour. Whenever the cts. of this country are called upon to decide as to the rights & liabilities of the parties to a contract, the effect on such contract of the public policy of this country must necessarily be a relevant consideration. Every legal decision of our cts. consists of the application of our own law to the facts of the case as ascertained by appropriate evidence. One of these facts may be the state of some foreign law, but it is not the foreign law but our own law to which effect is given, whether it be by way of judgment for damages, injunction, order declaring rights & liabilities or otherwise. If the policy of our law renders it unlawful for a subject of the Crown to contract with a foreigner that if war break out between this country & the State of which the foreigner is a subject the latter shall be indemnified against or be relieved from or receive compensation for a loss which he would otherwise incur, no subject of the Crown can be allowed to evade the rule by entering into such a contract out of the jurisdiction & stipulating expressly or impliedly that the contract shall be governed by a foreign law. It is clear that in deciding under Legal Proceedings against Enemies Act, 1915 (c. 36), as to the effect of the war on the rights & liabilities of the parties to a contract it is the effect of the war according to English law which is to be determined or declared, & it follows, in my opinion, that the rights & liabilities in question are also the rights & liabilities of the parties according to English law. The force majeure clause in the contract in question, even if valid according to German law, must be held void in the cts. of this country as contravening a general rule of public policy. If this be so, the suggested ground for distinguishing this case from the case of Ertel Bieber & Co. v. Rio Tinto Co. (No. 748, ante) entirely breaks down (LORD PARKER OF WADDINGTON).—DYNAMIT ACT. v. RIO TINTO Co., [1918] A. C. 292; 87 L. J. K. B. 549; 118 L. T. 191, H. L.

B. in Ireland in 1803. The bonds were expressed to be for the sum of £5,000 sterling, & the condition was for the payment of the sum of £2,500 sterling of good & lawful money of Great Britain with legal interest. The warrants of attorney recited the bonds in the same words. The judgments had only the expression £5,000 sterling. Upon the execution of the bonds credit was given to R. in the books of N. & Co. for the sum of £10,000, of which R. being advised, he by letter dated in Aug., 1801, authorised N. & Co. to answer bills to the amount of £10,000, which were afterwards drawn by the Irish firm, & accepted & paid by N. & Co. Payments on account of the debt were made at various times to B., a legal agent of N. & Co., at Dublin, & he accepted & accounted for those payments as made in Irish currency. Upon a bill filed by the assignee of the debt:—Held: it was payable in English currency & with English interest.—NOEL v. ROCHFORD (1836), 10 Bli. N. S. 483; 4 Cl. & Fin. 158; 6 E. R. 179, II. 757. By operation of proper law.]—In the first place, there is no doubt that a debt or liability arising in any country may be discharged by the laws of that country, & that such a discharge, if it extinguishes the debt or liability, & does not merely interfere with the remedies or course of procedure to enforce it, will be an effectual answer to the claim, not only in the cts. of that country, but in every other country. This is the law of England, & is a principle of private international law adopted in other countries. Secondly, as a general proposition, it is also true that the discharge of a debt or liability by the law of a country other than that in which the debt arises, does not relieve the debtor in any other country (BOVILL, C.J.).—ELLIS v. M'HENRY (1871), L. R. 6 C. P. 228; 40 L. J. C. P. 109; 23 L. T. 861; 19 W. R. 503.

759. By release in foreign country—Contract to be performed in England.]—In 1884 pltf. recovered judgment against deft. in England for £15,067 9s. 11d. In 1886 he brought an action upon the judgment in the cts. of the South African Republic, where deft. was domiciled. The foreign ct. refused to enforce the judgment in full, but gave judgment for pltf. for the sum, including interest, of £9,635 4s. 6d. Sequestration proceedings were then taken against deft. in South Africa, & eventually the £9,635 4s. 6d. was paid to pltf. by the curators under deft.'s sequestration & insolvency, & deft. was released from all debts claimable against his estate. In 1900 pltf. brought an action in England against deft. to recover the balance remaining due under the original judgment & interest thereon:—Held: (1) the action not having been brought within the period of twelve years prescribed by Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 8, pltf.'s right to recover was barred by that sect., & the part payment of the £9,635 4s. 6d. did not operate to take the case out of the statute, it not having been made under circumstances from which an acknowledgment of liability & a promise to pay the balance could be inferred; (2) pltf. had elected to take the foreign judgment in discharge of his whole cause of action, & could not afterwards sue for the residue of the original judgment debt in England; (3) the release in the foreign country could not per se get rid of a cause of action arising out of a contract to be performed in this country.—TAYLOR v. SECT. 3.—INTEREST.

760. Whether recoverable—Question of fact.]—

(1) As a general rule, the lex loci contractus governs the construction of contracts. Therefore if a bill of exchange, on the face of which no interest is reserved, is drawn in one country payable in another, the drawer is liable on its dishonour to pay as damages interest at the current rate in the country where the bill was drawn.

(2) The rate of interest at each place, & whether pltf. has sustained any damage requiring the payment of interest, are questions of fact for the jury, but which rate of interest ought to be adopted is purely a question of law for the direction of the judge.—GIBBS v. FREMONT (1853), 9 Exch. 25; 22 L. J. Ex. 302; 21 L. T. O. S. 230; 17 Jur. 820; 1 W. R. 482; 1 C. L. R. 675; 156 E. R. 11.

761. — Contract in England to be executed abroad—Foreign judgment giving interest.]—(1) A foreign judgment is prima facie evidence of a debt; & unless it be impeached, or the contrary be shown, it must be presumed that everything has been done which was necessary to support it.

(2) In an action on a judgment obtained in the Ct. of Admty. in Scotland, interest was decreed to be paid to pltf., for a debt due to him on a contract for work & labour up to the time when the principal debt should be discharged; but defts. withheld the payment, although pltf. endeavoured to obtain it:—Held: the jury might give interest in the shape of damages for the unjust detention of the money, although the debt arising out of the original contract did not carry interest.—ARNOTT v. —Where an enemy ordinance passed after the outbreak of war postponed the fulfilment of certain contracts & stated that no interest could be claimed in respect of the period during which postponement continued:—Held: such a provision was inoperative as not being part of the German general law, or as essentially one-sided & not in the contemplation of the parties to the contract at the time when they entered into it, & undertook that their rights were to be regulated by German Law, or was not conformable to the usage of nations; interest was therefore properly allowable.—Re FRIED KRUPP ACT., [1917] 2 Ch. 188; 86 L. As a general rule, in order to found a suit in England for a wrong alleged to have been committed abroad, two conditions must be fulfilled. 782. Proceedings in foreign court pending—Preliminary penal proceedings necessary by foreign law.]—It is no bar to an action in this country for an assault & false imprisonment committed by one Englishman upon another at Naples that, by the law of Naples, no proceeding to recover damages for the trespasses could be maintained by pltf., until after deft. had been found guilty & condemned by the criminal tribunal at Naples, before which he had been arraigned, in respect thereof; nor is it any bar to such action for the assault that, by the law of Naples, damages in respect of it could only be recovered in one particular form of proceeding, which had been commenced & was still pending.—SCOTT v. SEYMOUR (LORD) (1862), 1 H. & C. 219; 32 L. J. Ex. 61; international law are based on reason & justice, on a sort of moral necessity to do justice in order that justice may be done in return; its rules are flexible, & the circumstances of each particular case must be carefully considered & taken into account; (2) only the most positive, clear & undisputed rule of international law would warrant the ct. in applying the law of T. to enable defts. to defeat the claim of deceased's widow & children, pronounced by Q. law to be a just one. No such rule existed, & even if Q. law could not justly be applied, there was more authority for choosing the law of England than that of T.; (3) the Q. law was to be applied: it could not be presumed to have been the intention of either D. or defts. that the terms of his engagement with them or their mutual rights & liabilities connected with such engagement, or the services to be performed under them, should be interpreted or affected by any law other than that of Q., & it would be unreasonable & unjust to apply any foreign law so as to read into the contract of hiring an implied consent by the party hired to take the risk of accident caused by the acts & defaults of his fellow employees, a consent which plainly defts. never intended to exact nor D. to give.—DUPONT v. QUEBEC S.S. Co. (1896), Q. R. 11 S. C. 188.—CAN.

c. the law of the place recognises the liability, the ct. should not be bound by an exception which it makes, drawn from a presumption that circumstances take it out of the rule. Thus the law of N.B. renders the master responsible for the acts of his servant, except in the case of damages caused by a fellow workman (common employment), but such exception does not apply to a servant domiciled & engaged at M. to work in N.B. That engagement, interpreted according to the law of the place where it was made, excludes the presumption that the employee has accepted the risk of the common employment.—*LOGAN v. 795. Injury to submarine cable—By foreign ship—Actionable in England.]—(1) In an action brought against the owners of a ship for injury to a telegraphic cable on the high seas, the first count of the declaration stated that plffs. were possessed of the cable, which was lawfully & with the consent of Her Majesty lying at the bottom of the sea within three marine miles of the shore & coast of Kent, & defts. so negligently navigated their ship that an anchor belonging to it struck against & injured plffs.' cable. The second count was to same effect, but stated that the cable, at the time of the injury to it, was lying within eight marine miles of, & more than three marine miles from, the seashore:—Held: these counts, though omitting to allege notice on the part of defts. of the existence & situation of the cable, were good.

(2) Defts., in answer pleaded that the cable, at the time of the alleged injury to it, was lying at a place beyond the jurisdiction of Her Majesty, & defts. were aliens, subject to the laws of the kingdom of Sweden, & not to those of England, & the injury to the cable was caused by a lawful use of their anchor by defts. in the ordinary course of navigation:—Held: the introductory part of the plea, setting up that defts. were foreigners, & not subject to the laws of this country, alleged facts which, by themselves, afforded no legal answer to the action, & were only matters to be taken into account by the jury in deciding whether defts. had or had not been guilty of negligence, but that the whole plea was good.—SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH Co. v. 796. Of Imperial Government—Liberation of slaves by British subject—Ratification of act by ministers of state—Equivalent to prior command.]—Deft., a naval commander, stationed on the coast of Africa, with instructions to suppress the slave trade, was requested by the Governor of Sierra Leone to obtain the liberation of two British subjects detained as slaves at the Gallinas by the son of the king of that country, & in effecting that object to use force, if necessary. He accordingly proceeded to the Gallinas with an armed force, & having landed at Dombocorro, took military possession of a barracoon belonging to plff., who was a Spaniard, carrying on the slave trade at the Gallinas. He then communicated with the king of the country, & the two British subjects having been released, deft. concluded a treaty for the abolition of the slave trade in that country. In execution of this treaty, deft. fired the barracoons of plff., & carried away his slaves to Sierra Leone, where they were liberated. Some of plff.'s goods, used in the slave traffic, were claimed by the king as forfeited, & delivered up to him; other goods were destroyed. These proceedings having been communicated to the Lords of the Admlty., & the Secretaries of State for the foreign & colonial departments, they respectively, by letter, adopted & ratified the act of deft.:—Held: (1) plff. had a property in his slaves, & might maintain trespass for their seizure, the slave trade not being piratical by the law of nations, & it not appearing that Spain had passed any law abolishing the slave trade pursuant to the treaty embodied in 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 6; (2) the ratification of deft.'s act by the ministers of state was equivalent to a prior command, & rendered it an act of state, for which the Crown was alone responsible, & such defence was open under the general issue.—BURON v.

Act, 1889, s. 7, & a bye-law made by the Fishery Board in pursuance of above act., and the officers had prevented the landing of the fish:—Held: (1) where an action is raised on account of the actings of a Crown official, & H.M. by Lord Advocate appears in process & states that the actings complained of were duly authorised by H.M., proof that the actings were unauthorised is incompetent; (2) an alien is not entitled to question in the cts. of this country the administrative acts of the Crown.—POLL v. Imprisonment of foreign convicts by master of English vessel—In virtue of contract with foreign Government—No liability for wrongs in foreign territory.]—Deft. was convicted on an indictment charging him with assaulting the prosecutors on the high seas, & falsely imprisoning & detaining them. The prosecutors were Chilean subjects & had been ordered by the Govt. of Chili to be banished from that country to England. Deft., being master of an English merchant vessel lying in the territorial waters of Chili, contracted with the Chilean Govt. to take the prosecutors from Valparaiso to Liverpool; & they were accordingly brought on board deft.'s vessel by the officers of the Govt. & were carried by deft. to Liverpool under his contract:—Held: although the conviction could not be supported for the assault & imprisonment in the Chilean waters, it must be sustained for that which was done out of the Chilean territory, & although deft. was justified in receiving the prosecutors on board his vessel in Chili, yet that justification ceased when he passed the line of Chilean jurisdiction, & the detention of the prisoners & conveying them to Liverpool was a wrong intentionally planned & executed in pursuance of the contract, amounting to a false imprisonment & triable by English law.—R. v. SUB-SECT. 1.—WHAT MARRIAGES RECOGNISED.

See, generally, HUSBAND & WIFE.

800. Marriage as understood in Christendom—Voluntary union for life of one man & one woman to exclusion of all others.]—Marriage as understood in Christendom is the voluntary union for life of one man & one woman, to the exclusion of all others. A marriage contracted in a country where polygamy is lawful, between a man & a woman who profess a faith which allows polygamy, is not a marriage as understood in Christendom & although it is a valid marriage by the lex loci, & at the time when it was contracted both the man & the woman were single & competent to contract *validity examinable in another State.]—*The grant of letters patent is an exercise of the sovereign power of a State; & as in the case of title to land, the validity of the grant is not examinable in the cts. of another State, except in cases where the question of that validity arises merely incidentally in an action otherwise cognisable by the cts. of that other state.—POTTER v. BROKENHILL PROPRIETARY CO. LTD. (1906), 3 C. L. R. 479.—AUS.

*m. — Violation of customs law—Arrest without warrant.]—*The law of a foreign state authorising an officer of the state to arrest without warrant persons suspected of violating the customs law of the state, for the purpose of bringing them to justice, is a defence to an action in N.B. for an arrest in such state.—MAY v. SMITH (1894), 32 N. B. R. 474.—CAN.

*n. No right of action in British Court.]—*Pltf., an alien, being unlawfully within U.S.A. in violation of an Act of Congress, & liable to be deported, has no right of action in N.B. against a U.S. officer for arrest in, & deportation from, that country.—PAPAGEORGIOU v. 800 i. Marriage as understood in Christendom—Voluntary union for life of one man & one woman to exclusion of all others—Marriage between Hindus—Act IV. of 1869, s. 7.]—Petitioner & his wife married according to the rites of the Hindu religion. The wife subsequently left her husband, & marriage, the English Matrimonial Ct. will not recognise it as a valid marriage in a suit instituted by one of the parties against the other for the purpose of enforcing matrimonial duties, or obtaining relief for a breach of matrimonial obligations.—HYDE v. HYDE & WOODMANSEE (1866), L. R. 1 P. & D. 130; 35 L. J. P. & M. 57; 14 L. T. 188; 12 Jur. N. S. 414; 14 W. R. 517.

lived in adultery with another man. Both husband & wife subsequently became Christians but the wife continued to live in adultery. The husband sued under above Act for dissolution of the marriage:—Held: (1) the marriages contemplated by above sect. are those founded on the Christian principle of a union of one man & one woman to the exclusion of others; (2) the Act does not contemplate relief in cases where the parties have been married under the rites of Hindu law, a Hindu marriage not being a monogamous one.—THAPITA PETER v. THAPITA LAKASHMI (1893), 1 L. R. 17 Mad. 235.—IND.

it may there bear the name of a marriage, & the parties to it may there be designated husband & wife, is not a valid marriage according to the law of England unless it is formed on the same basis as marriages throughout Christendom, & is in its essence the voluntary union for life of one man & one woman, to the exclusion of all others.

C., an Englishman, in 1878 went to South Africa, & while there married T., a woman of a semi-barbarous tribe, according to the native customs. No religious form or ceremony was gone through, & beyond the taking of the woman, the native ceremony consisted simply in the bridegroom slaughtering an ox & sending the head to the bride's parents. By the custom of the tribe polygamy was practised, but C. never had more than the one wife, whom he took to his house, & he continued to live with her alone until 1884, when he was killed while fighting with the Boers. Ten days after his death T. gave birth to a female child. C. kept up communication with various members of his family in England, but never mentioned his marriage, & by a testamentary document he made some provision out of his property in South Africa for T., & any child which she might have by him. Under the will of his father he was entitled to real estate in England for life, with remainder to his children, with remainder over in default of issue:—Held: the union between C. & T. was not a valid marriage according to the law of England.—Re BETHELL, BETHELL v. HILDYARD (1888), 38 Ch. D. 220; 57 L. J. Ch. 487; 58 L. T. 674; 36 W. R. 503; 4 T. L. R. 319.

802. ———.]—It is an open question whether the union of a man & woman, in a state where polygamy is recognised, solemnised according to the laws of such state will be recognised in England as a marriage.—R. v. 803. ——— Monogamous marriage in non-Christian country—Valid by lex loci.]—Marriage, as understood in Christian countries, means the voluntary union for life of one man & one woman, to the exclusion of all others. Therefore, a marriage contracted on this basis will be valid though celebrated in a heathen country, provided always it be legally contracted & celebrated according to the laws & customs of that country.—BRINKLEY v. A.-G. (1890), 15 P. D. 76; 59 L. J. P. 51; 62 L. T. 911; 6 T. L. R. 191.

804. Not incestuous marriages—Deceased wife's sister.]—T. domiciled in England, in 1808 married there his deceased wife's sister, & had by her a son, A. She died in 1832. No proceedings were taken in the ecclesiastical ct. to declare the marriage void:—Held: (1) the marriage by the law of England was unlawful, & not a valid marriage; (2) though the son was legitimate in England by the rule of law that the marriage could not be declared void after the death of either of his parents, yet that rule is not binding out of England, & cannot operate to make the son legitimate in Scotland, where such a marriage is assumed to be incestuous, & to contract it a capital offence.

(3) The rule, that the lex loci contractus of a marriage establishes its validity, requires this qualification, viz., where the law of a country forbids marriage under any particular circumstances, the prohibition follows the subjects of that country wherever they may go.

(4) The comity of nations does not demand that a nation should recognise as valid every marriage which is valid lege loci contractus, & not prohibited by the common consent of Christianity. Each nation has a right to define & prohibit incest.—FENTON v. LIVINGSTONE (1859), 33 L. T. O. S. 335; 23 J. P. 579; 5 Jur. N. S. 1183; 7 W. R. 671; 3 Macq. 497, H. L.

805. ———.]—A., a native of Marburg, came to England in 1822, aged 13, & remained here till his death in 1858, having made occasional visits to Germany. In 1835 he was married in this country to B., a native of Frankfort-on-the-Maine; in 1836 he obtained letters of naturalisation; in 1841 he made a will; in 1844 his wife died, leaving children, & in 1846 he married at Frankfort C., who was B.'s sister of the half-blood, & had children by her. On his death his brother took out letters of administration as the uncle & guardian of all the children, none of whom were of age, on the supposition that the will was revoked by the second marriage. The eldest son of the first marriage on coming of age called in the letters of administration, & set up the will:—Held: (1) the principle laid down by Stuart, V.C., in Brook v. Brook (No. 806, post) as to the disability of a native-born English subject to contract such a marriage applied equally to a naturalised subject, (2) though by the law of Frankfort, C.'s domicile, such a marriage would have been valid, yet the disability of either party to the contract would invalidate the marriage.—METTE v. METTE (1859), 1 Sw. & Tr. 416; 28 L. J. P. & M. 117; 33 L. T. O. S. 139; 164 E. R. 792; sub nom. In the Goods of METTE, 7 W. R. 543.

806. ———.]—(1) A marriage of a widower with his deceased wife's sister, both being English-born subjects & domiciled at the time in England, is void, though the marriage was celebrated in a foreign country, by the law of which such marriages were legal.

(2) Where the parties to such a marriage, though English born, had been domiciled in such foreign country at the time of the marriage:—Semble: the marriage would be valid here also.

(3) A foreign marriage, valid according to the law of the country where it is celebrated, is good of the F. islands by the British consul there by words of mutual consent to live together as man and wife:—Held: there had not been a valid marriage cognisable by English law.—R. v. BYRNE (1867), 6 N. S. W. S. C. R. 302.—AUS.

808 i. ——— Monogamous marriage in non-Christian country—Valid by lex loci.]—A. was baptised in infancy into R.C. Church, but subsequently relapsed into Hinduism, & was married to a Hindu. Her Hindu husband afterwards discarded her; A. was subsequently re-admitted into R.C. Church & married by a priest to a R.C. during the lifetime of her Hindu husband:—Held: A.'s marriage with the Hindu was subsisting & valid at the time of her Christian marriage.—Re MILLARD (1887), 1 L. L. R. 10 Mad.

o. ——— Marriage between Christian & Mahomedan—Mahomedan rites.]—A marriage ceremony performed according to Mahomedan rites between a Christian man & a Mahomedan woman can create no valid marriage between the parties.—SKINNER v. DURGA PRASAD (1904), 1 L. R. 31 All. 239.—IND.

everywhere; but that applies only to the form, & not to the essentials of the contract, which depend on the lex domicilii, that is, the law of the country where the parties are then domiciled, & in which they contemplate to reside. Hence, if a marriage abroad of English subjects domiciled here is contrary to our notions of public policy, for example, polygamous or incestuous, this country will not recognise it, & will follow in that respect its own rules as to incest & policy.

(4) Marriage Act, 1835 (c. 54), does not bind all English subjects in all parts of the world, & it would not, for example, affect the law of marriage in any conquered colony in which a different law of marriage prevailed, whatever effect it might have in any other colony.—*BROOK v. 814. General rule.—A. bequeathed a sum of stock to B. for life, & then to his children living at his death. A. died, & then B. died. At B.'s death he left two legitimate daughters, & one other daughter, born under the following circumstances. B., being a widower, with two children by his first wife, & a domiciled Englishman, went to reside in France, where he cohabited with a Frenchwoman, by whom he had a daughter born in that country. After the birth of that child, B. married its mother, first at the English Embassy, then again according to the forms prescribed by the law of France, & the parents then acknowledged the child to be theirs, but B. alone signed the act of acknowledgment, which was contained in the marriage contract. Upon the question whether this child of B. could take a share of this stock jointly with the other two:—Held: she could not do so: because (1) the law of domicile was carried by the domiciled party into any foreign country in which he might be residing, & it signified nothing whether or not the marriage was in a country where the law was different from the law of his domicile; (2) the legitimacy of this child was to be ascertained by the law of that country which regulated the domicile of the father at the time of its conception & birth; (3) at that time the father was a domiciled Englishman, subject to the laws of this country; (4) by those laws, no illegitimate child of a domiciled English subject, could be legitimatised by any act of his; (5) this ct. could not refuse to recognise the marriage at the English Embassy, when no act of recognition was made by the parents, & the act of recognition, when made, being required by the French law to be by both parents, that which was executed in this case, by the father alone, appeared to be, under any circumstances, invalid.—Re WRIGHT'S TRUST (1856), 2 K. & J. 595; 25 L. 827. —.]—(1) Any incapacity of either a man or a woman, which, though recognised & enforced by the law of the domicile of either, is of a kind to which the cts. of this country refuse recognition, does not render a marriage celebrated here invalid on account of any such incapacity. A foreigner or a British subject domiciled abroad who enters into a contract of marriage with an Englishwoman domiciled in England, a marriage which would be recognised by the law of England as valid if contracted between persons domiciled in this country, does not carry with him any disability of a personal character imposed by the law of his domicile so as to preclude him from contracting a valid marriage with her in this country.

(2) A foreigner or a British subject domiciled abroad who, being in England, contracts in due form according to the laws of England a marriage with a person domiciled in England is not to be permitted to assert that he was under the burden of an incapacity, imposed by the law of the foreign domicile, to do that which he in fact did voluntarily & in due form according to the laws of England, & he cannot repudiate the marriage on the ground of such personal incapacity.

(3) Where both parties to a marriage are domiciled in a country the laws of which forbid them to marry, considerations may apply differing from those which would be applicable in cases where one party only is domiciled in a country the laws of which forbid such a marriage.—CHETTI v. C. was attainted of high treason in 1715, he escaped from England, married at Brussels in 1724, & left issue, amongst other children, J. a son & M. a daughter. J. left surviving him an only son A., who died in 1814:—Held: (1) the descendants of M. could inherit from A., as they need not mention C., the common ancestor in the pedigree, & were unaffected by the old doctrine as to corruption of blood which prevailed before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 10; (2) the marriage of C., being contracted in a foreign country was valid in England, & the children legitimate. 843. — Formalities dispensed with by lex loci.]—M., an illegitimate was born at Demerara, her father was of that colony, & from the time of her birth, she remained in Demerara until she, little more than thirteen years of age, was prevailed upon by D., a native & domiciled inhabitant of Demerara, to leave her mother, in whose house & under whose protection she was residing, & to embark with him on board a sloop at such time lying in the river at Demerara, & which immediately put to sea, & after a few days’ sail reached St. Lucia, when & where they were married, by the laws & ordinances in force, for the regulation of marriages at St. Lucia. At the time the marriage in question was had, no marriage in general could be contracted there, so as to be good & valid in law, if contracted without due publication of banns first made on three several occasions at competent intervals, unless dispensed with for some urgent & lawful cause, at the request of the principal & nearest relations of the contracting parties, & who, in that case, should have been married in the presence of four at least credible witnesses, & without the consent first had & obtained of the mother of the woman, if under the age of twenty-five & illegitimate. The marriage in question was had without any publication whatever of banns, such publication was not dispensed with at the request of the principal & nearest, or any relations of the contracting parties, they were not married in the presence of four witnesses, & the consent of the mother was not first obtained. By the laws & ordinances for the regulation of marriages at St. Lucia, at the time of the marriage in question, a marriage between Protestants by licence from the Governor for the time being, by a minister in Holy Orders of the Church of England, in the presence of two witnesses, was a valid marriage without publication of banns, or the consent, or any of the above formalities at the time of the marriage, Mr. & Mrs. D. were respectively Protestants:—Held: the marriage was valid.—*WARD v. The Armenian priests having refused to marry the parties, a Roman Catholic priest performed the ceremony according to the rites of the Romish Church, he having obtained a special licence to do so, on the ground that V. was a Roman Catholic & O. a Protestant:—Held: as by the law of the country where the solemnisation took place the marriage was invalid, & as the forms, prescribed by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 68, had not been complied with, there was no marriage.—Re ALISON’S TRUSTS (1874), 31 L. At the instance of the man, the certificate of marriage given by the person who officiated at the ceremony was antedated four years. In a suit for nullity of marriage by the man, he repudiated the marriage, on the ground, that he had never consented to a marriage, but went through the form of marriage with a simulated object in view, namely, for the purpose of obtaining a certificate to blind inquiries. There was no deception on the part of the woman, who believed it to be a marriage:—Held: (1) the marriage was valid by the lex loci contractus, there being reasonable evidence of the intention of the parties to contract, ipsum matrimonium; (2) as there was a mutual declaration of present marriage, it was immaterial whether the man had some other motive beside marriage.—BELL v. SUB-SECT. 2.—MARRIAGES OF BRITISH SUBJECTS ON HIS MAJESTY'S SHIPS.

Sec, generally, HUSBAND & WIFE.

869. Marriage by ship's chaplain—Without licence—No banns—Marriage valid.—A marriage between British subjects, solemnised on board an English man-of-war at a foreign station by a clergyman of the Established Church without licence or banns, is valid.

Petitioner, an officer in Her Majesty's army, was married in 1884 to resp., also a British subject, on board one of Her Majesty's ships, then lying at Limasol, in Cyprus, where petitioner was stationed. The ceremony was performed by the chaplain of the vessel, a clergyman of the Established Church. There had been no publication of banns & no licence had been obtained:—

Held: there had been a valid marriage according to the common law of this country, & upon proof of resp.'s adultery, petitioner was entitled to a decree nisi for dissolution of the marriage.—CULLING v. CULLING, [1896] P. 116; 65 L. J. P. 59; 74 L. T. 252; 12 T. L. R. 210.

SUB-SECT. 3.—MARRIAGES WITHIN LINES OF BRITISH ARMY SERVING ABROAD.

870. Before Foreign Marriage Act, 1892 (c. 23)—Marriage performed by priest—Presumption of validity.—Evidence that British subjects in a foreign country, being desirous of intermarrying, went to a chapel for that purpose, where a service in the language of the country was read by a person habited like a priest, & interpreted into English by the officiating clerk; which service the parties understood to be the marriage service of the Church of England, & they received a certificate of the marriage which was afterwards lost, is sufficient whereon to found a presumption that the marriage was duly celebrated according to the law of that country, particularly after eleven years cohabitation as man & wife, till the period of the husband's death.

Such British subjects being attached at the time to the British army on service in such foreign country, & having military possession of the place, it seems that such marriage solemnised by a priest in holy orders, of which this would be reasonable evidence, would be a good marriage by the law of England, as a marriage contract per verba de praesenti before Marriage Act, 1753 (c. 33); marriages beyond sea being excepted out of that Act. It would make no difference if solemnised by a Roman Catholic priest.—R. v. BRAMPTON (1808), 10 East, 282; 103 E. R. 782.

DIVORCE À VINCULO MATRIMONII.

A. As regards Petitioner and Respondent.

(a) Necessity for Domicil of Parties.

874. Whether depending on domicil at time of suit—Whether place of marriage material—Parties married in country where divorce sought.—A, an Englishwoman by origin, petitioned for dissolution of an English marriage, on the ground of adultery & cruelty. Resp. was served with a citation in Ireland, but did not appear. At the hearing facts were elicited, from which it might be inferred that resp.'s domicil of origin was Ireland, but the evidence not being conclusive, & it appearing that resp. had lived with his wife in England:—Held: without expressing an opinion as to jurisdiction, if it had clearly appeared that resp.'s domicil had been Ireland, the marriage must be dissolved.

Qu.: whether the ct. has jurisdiction in a suit for dissolution of an English marriage against a foreigner, who is served abroad with a citation to which he does not appear.

Semble: if a foreigner appears to a citation otherwise than under protest, he submits himself to the jurisdiction of the ct.—BOND v. BOND (1860), 2 Sw. & Tr. 93; 29 L. J. P. M. & A. 143; 2 L. T. 543; 8 W. R. 630; 164 E. R. 927.

875. — — — — Marriage invalid by foreign law.—Petitioner, an Englishwoman, married in England a domiciled Mexican. By Mexican law a marriage is not valid in Mexico unless it is registered by one or other of the parties to it. The marriage of petitioner & resp. had not been registered in Mexico. Petitioner, by registering the marriage in Mexico, could have obtained a judicial separation, a decree of divorce not being granted in that country. Petitioner having brought a suit for divorce in this country on the ground of resp.'s adultery, cruelty & desertion:—Held: as resp.'s domicil was Mexican, the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit.—RAMOS v. RAMOS (1911), 27 T. L. R. 515.

876. — — — — Petitioner registered alien enemy.—An alien enemy, registered as such & who is domiciled in England, has a right to bring a petition for the dissolution of his marriage solemnised in England.—*KRAUSS (OTHERWISE DES SALLES D'EPINOIX) v. Sect. 1.—Jurisdiction of court: Sub-sect. 2, A. (a) & (b).]

878. — Indian marriage.]

Divorce cts. in India have no jurisdiction to decree dissolution of a marriage between parties not domiciled in India, though the marriage was celebrated & the parties were resident in India, & the acts of adultery relied on were committed within the jurisdiction of the Indian cts.—KEYES v. KEYES & GRAY, [1921] P. 204; 90 L. J. P. 242; 124 L. T. 797; 37 T. L. R. 499; 65 Sol. Jo. 435.

See, now, Indian Divorces (Validity) Act, 1921 (c. 18).

879. — Parties not married in country where divorce sought.]—A Scotsman, in the army, was married at Gibraltar to an English woman. While retired on half-pay he resided with his family at Durham, for the education of his children, & was subsequently again employed in the military service, but still kept his family at Durham, where it remained for about ten years. Misunderstandings having arisen, an English deed of separation between the husband & wife was executed, by which he permitted her to choose her own residence, & she resided in England. The husband brought two actions of divorce against her in the Scottish cts., on the ground of adultery; one laying the acts of adultery in England, the other laying them in Scotland:—Qu.: whether the Scottish ct., in these circumstances, had jurisdiction to dissolve the marriage.—*TOVEY v. 880. — WARRENDER v. WARRENDER, No. 218, ante.

881. — (1) A Scotsman domiciled in Scotland, married in England an English lady, & after the marriage they went to Scotland to reside there. During the marriage he committed in Scotland acts of adultery, after which the wife separated from him, & came to live in England. Thereupon the husband instituted a suit in the Arches Ct. of Canterbury for restitution of conjugal rights. To this suit the wife pleaded his acts of adultery in Scotland in the form of a responsive allegation, & prayed a sentence of separation a mensâ et thoro, which was pronounced. The wife thereafter commenced an action in Scotland to obtain a divorce a vinculo, the cts. there having the power to dissolve a Scottish marriage on the ground of adultery. To this action, which was founded on the same acts of adultery, as the responsive allegation, the husband pleaded in bar the sentence of separation obtained in England:—Held: this was a bad plea, because the wife's proceeding in England, & her action for divorce a vinculo in Scotland, were collateral remedies, having distinct objects and totally different effects.

In 1871 he instituted a suit in England for the dissolution of his marriage on the ground of the adultery committed in Scotland previous to the separation. He left Scotland with the intention of taking up his permanent abode in England:—Held: he had abandoned his domicile of origin & acquired an English domicile, & the ct. had jurisdiction to dissolve the marriage.—*WILSON v. The marriage was celebrated in 1854, in England. The marriage settlements contained a proviso that they should be construed according to the laws of England. After the marriage a London residence was taken by the parties, which they occupied for six months in each year, with two or three exceptions, living for the remainder of the year in the palace of the husband's father, at Naples, or at other places on the Continent. In 1872, the lady separated from her husband in consequence of his cruelty & adultery, & she continued up to the hearing to reside in their London residence. B. As regards Co-respondent.

907. General rule—Does not depend on domicile.—Whatever it is that determines the jurisdiction of this ct. with regard to co-resps. that jurisdiction does not depend upon the domicile of the co-resp. nor is it to be determined by the question whether the co-resp. is or is not a British subject.

The conclusions at which I have arrived after some perplexity & difficulty are as follows:—(1) the jurisdiction of the ct. over the co-resp. both as to damages & costs, in a suit properly instituted here, does not depend on domicile, allegiance or residence; (2) if a foreign co-resp. is served in England, this ct. has for that reason jurisdiction over him; (3) he can be served abroad, whatever his nationality, & if he is served abroad, the statute authorising such service gives to this ct. jurisdiction over him; (4) in proper cases this ct. may exercise discretionary power, & dismiss, or dispense with, a co-resp. domiciled abroad, but he is not entitled to demand as of right that he be dismissed from the suit (EVANS, P.).—*RAYMENT v. 916. Necessity for residence within jurisdiction at beginning of suit—Residence must be bonâ fide.]—In a husband's suit for judicial separation, the wife demurred to the jurisdiction of the ct., on the ground that her husband was a domiciled Irishman. The husband admitted that his domicile of origin was Irish, & that he had carried on business in Dublin up to one month preceding the filing of his petition, but he alleged that he had taken a shop in London where he carried on his business, & had taken a house in Bayswater where he resided, with no intention of returning to Ireland. It was, however, shown that he still carried on business in Dublin, & that the lease of his shop in London was determinable at six months' notice. There was also evidence that his usual place of residence continued to be in Dublin:—Held: petitioner had no bonâ fide residence in England sufficient to support the jurisdiction of the ct.—*MANNING v. 917. ——— Domicil immaterial—Place where acts necessitating protection committed immaterial.]—In a proceeding for divorce a mensâ et thoro on the ground of cruelty, where the parties resided within its jurisdiction at the commencement of the suit, an ecclesiastical ct. would have granted relief irrespective of their domicile, & it would have made no difference that the necessity for protection arose in consequence of cruelty committed outside its jurisdiction, where the apprehension of further acts of cruelty remained.

Petitioner for a judicial separation, married to resp. in Australia, had been, before her marriage, a domiciled Englishwoman. Her husband's domicile was in Australia where, after her marriage, she resided with him. Owing to cruelty committed by him while they were travelling in Italy she sought the protection of her parents in England, & established a home for herself & her children in this country. He followed her here & required her to return to him with the children, which she was afraid to do owing to her apprehension of a repetition of the cruelty. He was engaged as a traveller for a London firm, & his time was principally occupied in travelling abroad on the business of the firm. When not so travelling he lived with petitioner in London. The husband subsequently took proceedings in Germany for dissolution of marriage upon the ground of wifely disobedience on her part in refusing to dismiss her medical attendant; & applied to stay the suit in this country pending the hearing of the German suit for divorce:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to entertain the suit for judicial separation, & no reason had been shown for a stay.—*VON ECKHARDSTEIN (BARONESS) v. Afterwards, the husband was appointed rector of a church in the state of Mississippi, where he resided with his wife till 1835. At that time the wife became a convert to the Roman Catholic faith. In 1836, both parties went to Rome, where they abjured the Protestant faith, & were formally admitted members of the Roman Catholic Church. In 1838, they returned to America, & resided in the state of Louisiana. In 1843, they again went to Rome, & upon the rescript & allowance of the Pope, on their joint petition, the husband & wife, with his concurrence took the vows of perpetual chastity & religious professions, the husband ultimately taking orders, & the wife entered a religious house as a nun, taking the vows of poverty & obedience, whereupon they separated & lived apart. In 1846, they came to England; the husband became private chaplain in a Catholic family, & the wife the Superioress of a religious community. In 1848, the husband recanted the Roman Catholic faith, & again became a Protestant, when he applied to his wife to return to matrimonial cohabitation, which she refused; thereupon he instituted a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, to which the wife pleaded, as a bar, that the rescript of the Pope, & the acts of the parties at Rome, had the force & effect of a judicial sentence of separation, a mensâ et thoro. The Arches Ct. rejected the allegation, on the ground, that the facts pleaded would not, even if proved, constitute a bar to the husband's right to a sentence for restoration of conjugal rights. The wife appealed against this rejection:—Held: leave must be given to the wife to reform the allegation by pleading & setting forth, the law of Pennsylvania as applicable to the circumstances pleaded & set forth in case same had been brought to adjudication there, & also the domicile of the husband at the time of the transactions pleaded in the allegation to have taken place at Rome.—*CONNELLY v. Subsequently B. & C. went to Scotland, & there lived in adultery. A., acting in collusion with B. & C., employed D., a Scottish solr., to obtain a divorce in Scotland. An office was taken in Glasgow, where A.'s name was put up, & where A. purported to carry on the business of a tea-merchant. A. only visited the place whilst the proceedings were pending three times, for a night & a day on each occasion, & never attempted to carry on any business there. A. then petitioned for a divorce in the Scottish cts., & swore an affidavit denying collusion with B. & C. C. was described by an alias, & precautions were taken to conceal the real facts of the case from the Scottish ct. A. obtained a divorce in the Scottish ct., & B. & C. subsequently married in the Isle of Man. C. then petitioned for a declaration of nullity of such marriage:—Held: the Scottish cts. had no jurisdiction to dissolve the marriage between A. & B., & the marriage between B. & C. was null & void.—*BONAPARTE v. After about three months' cohabitation in this country resp. went to America, to visit her mother, & to attend the approaching marriage of her sister. She never returned, although petitioner wrote & telegraphed asking her to do so. Eventually petitioner was served with a citation for divorce, at the suit of his wife, in the ct. of Philadelphia. He was advised that the American ct. had no jurisdiction in the matter, & consequently took no steps to defend that suit, in which a decree was subsequently pronounced, dissolving the marriage upon a ground which, even if true, would not have entitled the wife to have the marriage dissolved in this ct. Resp. subsequently went through a ceremony of marriage with the co- resp. in America, & lived with him there as his wife:—Held: (1) the decree of the American ct. was bad, for want of jurisdiction, inasmuch as the domicile of resp. became English by her marriage with petitioner, who was, all his life, a domiciled British subject; (2) petitioner was entitled to a decree nisi dissolving his marriage with the resp. upon the grounds of her bigamy & adultery.—*GREEN v. 935. ————.]—(1) A divorce granted by a foreign ct., being a judgment affecting the status of the parties, stands on the same footing as a judgment in rem, & cannot be set aside in this country, even on the ground of fraud, by a person who was no party to the proceedings in which the judgment was pronounced.

(2) The domicile for the time being of the married pair, when the question of divorce arises, affords the only true test of jurisdiction to dissolve their marriage; & the ct. of the bond fide existing domicile has jurisdiction over persons originally domiciled in another country to undo a marriage solemnised in that other country; & such a divorce will be recognised by the English cts. even if granted for a cause which would not have been sufficient to obtain a divorce in England. In 1880 a marriage was celebrated in England between two English persons. In 1886 the husband commenced divorce proceedings against the wife for adultery with B., which failed upon proof of the husband's cruelty, & in 1889 he sailed for New York, where he lived in adultery with another woman & acquired a domicile in the State of New York. The wife & B. continued to live in adultery, & in 1890 the wife went to New York for the purpose of obtaining a divorce, & subsequently obtained a decree from the New York ct. for dissolution of her marriage on the ground of her husband's adultery. There was no collusion between the husband & wife, but her matrimonial misconduct in England was

In 1903 B. presented a petition for a declaration of nullity of the New York marriage:—Held (3) according to the law of the State of New York & of England, the New York ct. had jurisdiction to decree a divorce, as the husband had acquired a domicile in New York; (4) the adultery complained of by the wife was committed in that State, & the wife had elected to make the domicile of the husband her own for the purpose of the divorce proceedings, & had acquired a residence there according to the law of New York, & the petition must be dismissed.—*BATER v. 936. — Marriage not in country where decree sought to be recognised.] — A Scotch divorce is inoperative on the marriage of a domiciled Englishman.

A., a domiciled Englishman married in 1837, at Gretna Green, B. a Scotswoman, & afterwards cohabited with her, without abandoning his English domicile. In 1841 B. committed adultery in Scotland with C. In the same year, on the ground of that adultery, A. obtained a divorce in Scotland. C. then married B., & died in 1855. In 1854, A. having been advised that the Scottish divorce was inoperative in England, presented a petition to the House of Lords for a bill to declare his marriage void from the date of the Scottish divorce. This petition was rejected, & on the passing of Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (c. 85), A. instituted a suit for dissolution of marriage on the ground of the adultery in 1841:—Held: (1) the Scottish sentence of divorce being inoperative, the ct. had jurisdiction to dissolve the marriage. (2) A. had not been guilty of unreasonable delay in presenting his petition, within the meaning of s. 31 of the Act.—TOLLEMACHE v. TOLLEMACHE (1859), 1 Sw. & Tr. 557; Sea. & Sm. 149; 30 L. J. P. In 1850 he married B. at the Cape, & in 1852 this marriage was dissolved by a sentence of the Colonial ct. on the ground of B.'s adultery. In 1852 he married C. in the lifetime of B., & in 1863 he died intestate. An application by C. for administration to A. as his widow was opposed on the ground that A. was a domiciled Englishman at the date of his first marriage, & that the sentence of divorce pronounced by the Colonial ct. was inoperative:—Held: as upon the evidence there was no proof that A. was a domiciled Englishman, or that his domicile was not at the Cape, the sentence of divorce must be treated as valid.

This marriage, which, by the law of Austria, was absolutely indissoluble, was subsequently dissolved in Berlin, by mutual consent, on a petition presented by the wife. S. subsequently married in England an English Protestant lady, his first wife being still alive. The second wife petitioned for a decree of nullity on the ground that the Berlin divorce did not effectually dissolve the first marriage of S., which, she alleged, was still subsisting & binding:—Held: (1) the Berlin divorce was good; (2) the second marriage was good.—INGHAM (FALSELY CALLED SACHS) v. SACHS (1886), 56 L. 941. — Divorce recognised by courts of country of domicile.—The cts. of this country will recognise the binding effect of a decree of divorce obtained in a state where the husband was not domiciled, if the courts of the country or state of his domicile would recognise the validity of the decree.

G., an American citizen temporarily resident & carrying on business in England, but who never abandoned his domicile of origin in the State of New York, married an Englishwoman in England. She afterwards instituted proceedings, which were compromised by a deed of separation. Some years later she instituted, in the State of South Dakota, proceedings for a divorce, to which he put in an answer & cross-claim, the latter being dismissed, & a decree pronounced on the wife's petition, upon a ground which would not constitute a ground for dissolving the marriage either in the cts. of the husband's domicile or in this country. Upon evidence which satisfied this ct. that the cts. of the husband's domicile would recognise a decree so obtained:—Held: the South Dakota decree of divorce must be recognised as a valid dissolution of the marriage, & the subsequent marriages of the respective spouses were consequently valid.—*ARMITAGE v. there to give him a matrimonial domicile, & afterwards resumed his residence in the colony. Mrs. S. who never was in Upper Dakota, consented by attorney to the decree, after stipulating that no scandalous grounds should be pleaded. She had left her husband some four months before the action commenced, & had since lived with W., a former inmate of S.'s house, whose intimacy with her had caused gossip, & she refused to return to her husband. The divorce was granted on these allegations, & W., who was also of Scottish birth, & fully cognisant of the facts of the divorce, afterwards went through a ceremony of marriage with Mrs. S. in San Francisco, & had a son by her:—Held: (1) as S.'s residence in Upper Dakota was not bonâ fide, but only to obtain a divorce, he did not acquire a domicile there; (2) as the law as well of Scotland as of the colony did not recognise a matrimonial domicile as conferring divorce jurisdiction, nor recognise a divorce by the cts. of a country not that of the husband's domicile, the divorce was of no effect, & the marriage with W. was invalid.—*Re STIRLING, STIRLING v. The husband was not resident in, nor domiciled in Dakota; he was not served personally with the documents in the proceedings, & did not appear at the hearing. Some years after the decree of divorce had been granted resp., her former husband still being alive, went through a ceremony of marriage in the State of New York with petitioner, who was a British subject & domiciled in this country. At the time of the celebration of the marriage, petitioner & resp. believed the decree of divorce which had been pronounced in Dakota was binding. Upon the evidence adduced it appeared that the latter decree was binding neither in Massachusetts, where resp. was domiciled at the time of the marriage, nor in the State of New York, where the marriage took place:—Held: petitioner was entitled to a decree of nullity of the marriage.—*CASS v. B. Nullity of Marriage.

944. General rule.]—A sentence of nullity of marriage, therefore, in the country where it was solemnised, would carry with it great authority in this country; but I am not prepared to say, that a judgment of a third country, on the validity of a marriage, not within its territories nor had between subjects of that country, would be universally binding. For instance, the marriage, alleged by the husband, is a French marriage; a French judgment on that marriage would have been of considerable weight; but it does not follow that the judgment of a ct. at Brussels, on a marriage in France, would have the same authority, much less on a marriage celebrated here in England (LORD STOWELL).—*SINCLAIR v. The husband went to Cal., & from a ct. there obtained a decree of divorce, which also gave him the custody of the 3 children. He then applied in Alta. for a habeas corpus for the production of the youngest child with a view to obtaining custody:—Held: granting the validity of the Cal. decree, the decision as to the custody of the youngest child, who was a British subject & was & always had been within the jurisdiction of the Alta. ct., was not binding on ct.—Re MORT (1912), 20 W. 957. General rule.]—As to the question whether intimation was necessary, they were to consider the difference between the assignation of a debt by one individual to another, & an assignment of a bkpt.'s personal property for the use of his creditors. To apply the rule of law with respect to intimation to the latter case, would cut up by the roots the use of an English commission in relation to Scottish property. Lord Meadowbank therefore in Royal Bank of Scotland v. Cuthbert, infra, held that this assignment operated like the transference by marriage. A marriage in England rendered the Scottish property of the wife her husband's without intimation; & such must be the law in cases like the present, if an English commission were to have any effect in Scotland. But if intimation were necessary, it had been given in the present case (LORD ELDON, C.).—SELKRIG v. DAVIES (1814), 2 Dow, 230; 2 Rose, 97; 3 E. R. 848, H. L.

Pltf. having come to this ct. to obtain money found by the report of the Deputy Remembrancer to be due to his wife, upon the distribution of an intestate's effects, the ct. took into consideration whether they should order the money recovered to be settled on the wife or paid to the husband. Upon reference to the Master, he certified that by the laws of Prussia, of which country they were inhabitants, the whole personalty of the husband & wife was, during the coverture, at the absolute disposal of the husband; but on the death of either, would be divided between the survivor & the heirs of deceased. The contract was executed in Ireland by applt., who was then an infant domiciled in Ireland, but it was contemplated that she & her husband should reside, & they actually resided during their married life in Scotland. The grounds upon which applt. sought to obtain reduction of the contract were, that being an infant she was incapable of contracting by the law of Ireland, & minority & lesion according to the law of Scotland, but no evidence was adduced before the Ct. of Session as to the Irish or English law with regard to the capacity of an infant to enter into contracts:—Held: (1) notwithstanding the absence of such evidence in the ct. below, the wife's incapacity according to Irish law being a substantial ground of reduction on the record, judicial notice of the English law prevailing in Ireland might be taken; (2) the capacity of applt. to bind herself by the marriage contract must be determined by the law of her domicile, i.e., the Irish or English law, & under such law she could not as an infant incur an obligation which was not shown to be for her benefit, & she was at liberty to avoid the contract & claim her legal rights as a Scottish widow.—*COOPER v. 974. Capacity to affirm or repudiate—Ante-nuptial contract—Female infant—Governed by lex domicilii of husband.]—Prior to the marriage in 1864 of an Irish lady under twenty-one with an Austrian, marriage articles in English form were executed by her & her intended husband by which it was declared & agreed by & between the parties thereto that, in case the marriage should take place, the then personal property & certain after-acquired personal property of the lady should be vested in trustees upon the usual trusts of an English marriage settlement. After the marriage the husband retained his Austrian domicile. In 1880 a settlement in English form, which purported to be made in pursuance of the articles, was executed by the husband & wife in Paris. The wife afterwards executed appointments of new trustees of the settlement, & in 1880 she exercised in favour of one of her daughters a power of appointment reserved to her by the settlement. In 1893 the husband & wife executed in Austria in accordance with Austrian law a notarial act, by which they purported to revoke & annul the marriage articles & the settlement of 1880, & to vest in the wife the unrestricted administration of all her property. In 1896 the husband & wife & their four children, all of whom had attained twenty-one, brought an action against the trustees in the Ch. Div., claiming a declaration that by virtue of the notarial act of 1893 the marriage articles & the settlement were wholly cancelled & annulled & were void by Austrian law. By Austrian law a husband & wife had a right to revoke their marriage contract, notwithstanding the birth of issue & acts of ratification, & this right of revocation could not be waived, & was not lost by lapse of time:—Held: (1) inasmuch as upon her marriage the wife acquired the Austrian domicile of her husband, & became subject to Austrian law, she never could ratify the settlement or deprive herself of the right to repudiate it, the result being that she never had the power, either before or after her marriage, of making an irrevocable contract; (2) the English doctrine, that the voidable contract of an infant bound him if he did not repudiate it within a reasonable time

She married, & through her husband acquired a Scottish domicile. At the time of her marriage she was possessed of no property, but subsequently, she being then of full age, her father transferred to her certain lands in N.Z. She executed a power of attorney to her brothers in N.Z. to manage this estate for her. Later, while on a visit to N.Z., she formally repudiated the settlement:—Held: (1) her capacity to enter into the settlement & her right of repudiation in respect thereof were governed by N.Z. law; (2) her repudiation was valid, being made within a reasonable time after attaining majority.—*BAIRD v. law, & two of the three trustees were Scotsmen. She subsequently married A., & acquired an English domicile. In an action by her against the trustees for declarator that she was entitled to revoke the trust deed:—Held: (1) her capacity to revoke as a married woman domiciled in England must be determined according to English law; (2) inquiry as to English law must be limited to her capacity to revoke, & should not include any question as to the revocable nature of the deed in itself.—*SAWREY-COOKSON v. The trusts of the settlement had been previously arranged between all the parties, & were for the benefit of the lady & her future husband, successively for life, with ultimate provisions for the children of the marriage. The marriage took place in France, but in consequence of the settlement not having been executed before a notary public in French form & duly registered, it had no validity in France. The husband filed his bill, praying payment to him of the trust fund, & charging that the settlement was wholly inoperative :—Held : the contract entered into by the settlement was not governed by the lex domicilii of the husband & wife, but by the law of England, where it was made & was to be performed, & the marriage having taken place upon the faith of its validity, the trust fund was subject to its provisions.—*VAN GRUTTEN v. The marriage took effect, but he declining in estate, her friends called on him, & he thereupon assigned certain bonds, wherein M. was bound to him ; & a letter of attorney was made after to S. to receive the money upon the bonds, who received the money of him. The bill was to have the money from M. & S. :—Held : the agreement & assignment of the debt in Holland, where such agreement between husband & wife & such assignment of bonds were good, were to be allowed here.—ASHCOMB'S CASE (1674), 1 Cas. in Ch. 232 ; 22 E. 978. Settlement to regulate English marriage—Followed by valid English marriage—Valid in England—Though marriage & settlement inoperative by foreign law.]—English subjects on their marriage may stipulate that their marriage rights shall be regulated by the law of a foreign country, & the English ct. will enforce such a contract.

A marriage settlement, made in France between English subjects, stipulated that the custom of Paris should regulate their community & the other clauses of the contract. As to £2,000, part of the wife's fortune, the husband was to be chargeable to his wife, & it was to remain her bien personnel. By the general law of France a wife could make a will. A marriage contract was then entered into in Paris between them, according to the formalities required by the French law, in anticipation of a marriage to be solemnised suivant la loi. A valid English marriage took place at the embassy, but no marriage ceremony took place according to the French forms & solemnities :—Held : (1) the rights were to be regulated by those which French subjects would have under such a contract & marriage valid in France, & whether the contract was valid or not in France, still here the wife had a power to dispose of the property by will ; (2) on the construction of the instrument the marital right over the property was excluded ; (3) a will executed according to English, though not according to French formalities, effectually disposed of this property ; (4) the marriage suivant la loi was fulfilled by the English marriage, & the settlement, being to regulate an English marriage, was valid here, notwithstanding that according to the French law the marriage & the settlement might be inoperative.—*ESTE v. The property was sold later & the proceeds invested in certain funds. In a suit by the trustees for directions, the question was whether the deed was invalid & inoperative & whether French or English law should govern the disposal :—Held : if the settlor were of French domicil, his having married a Frenchwoman sans contract did not imply such a special contract as would take away the operation of the ordinary rule that lex rei sitæ would govern immovable property.—*BONNAUD v. pronounced by a ct. in such country has no effect on the property rights of the husband & wife, property falling into possession after the pronouncement of the decree is bound by the covenant.

On the marriage of an Englishwoman with an Italian, property in England was made the subject of a settlement in English form. The settlement was executed by the intended husband & wife in Italy, where the marriage took place. By the law of Italy the settlement would have been invalid, not only through informalities attending its execution, but also because it contained dispositions of property prohibited by that law:—Held: (2) the settlement must be construed according to English law; (3) the covenant to settle after-acquired property on the trusts of the settlement was valid, & could be enforced, even though by the law of the matrimonial domicile such trusts were illegal.—*Re BANKES, REYNOLDS v. Before the marriage a settlement was made in Scottish form of the money brought into settlement by the wife, & another settlement was made in English form of the property settled by the husband. Each settlement contained a provision that the law of Mauritius should not apply so far as it was, or might be, at variance, or inconsistent with, the provision, clauses & agreements contained in the settlements. In the English settlement there was a limitation on the death of the husband & remarriage of the wife to the persons who would have been entitled to the husband's estate if he had died without issue & unmarried under the English Stat. Distribution. The husband by the law of Scotland had a testamentary power to revoke this limitation if that law applied:—Held: the law of Scotland applied.—*Re MUSPRATT-WILLIAMS, MUSPRATT-WILLIAMS v. —Where previously to the marriage of a domiciled Englishman to a domiciled Scotswoman in Scotland, a settlement was executed in Scottish form:

—Held: questions arising out of the terms of the settlement & affecting the husband's property in England could not be decided without information as to the construction which would be put upon the instrument by a Scottish ct., & a case should be sent to the Ct. of Sess. under British Law Ascertainment Act, 1859 (c. 63), to ascertain the law of Scotland applicable to the settlement. —EGLINTON (EARL) v. LAMB (1867), 15 L. T. 657.

992. Implied intention to be bound by Scottish law.]—In 1849 an Englishman domiciled in England married a Scottish lady in Scotland. Previously to the marriage the parties executed a contract of marriage in the Scottish form. The intended husband thereby bound himself, his heirs, exors. & successors to pay to the intended wife, in case she should survive him, an annuity of £200, & further to pay £3,000 to the children of the marriage after his death. After the marriage the parties resided in England. In 1870 the husband died there, having by his will dated in 1863, but which did not in any way refer to the marriage contract, given his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to pay the income thereof to his wife for life, with remainder as to the capital to his children equally at twenty-one. The wife died in England in 1886, having made a will appointing exors. During her widowhood she never received the annuity under the contract, but enjoyed the income of her husband's residuary estate. There were two children of the marriage, both of whom survived their father, but predeceased their mother, having attained twenty-one. The husband's estate being insufficient to satisfy both the arrears of the widow's annuity & the £300 payable to the children, the question was raised, by originating summons, whether the contract was to be construed according to Scottish law, under which the provision of an annuity to the wife on marriage imported a jus crediti in her favour, entitling her to rank pari passu with her husband's other creditors, the children having only a spes successionis, or according to the English law:—Held: (1) the intention of the parties on entering into the contract must be considered; (2) the fact that it was entered into in the Scottish form led to the inference that it was to be construed not according to the law of England, but according to the law of Scotland; (3) as the husband's assets were not more than enough to satisfy the paramount claim of the wife's representatives to the arrears of her annuity, the claim of the children in the division of the assets failed. —*Re BARNARD, BARNARD v. proposals, after providing for all the purposes usual in settlements of that description, stipulated that the settlement should contain all usual & necessary clauses. A settlement was afterwards executed in the English form, all the parties being then in England, & related to estates of the husband's family in England, Ireland & Jamaica, & to the money portion of the wife. No clause was introduced relating to any claim which the intended wife might have under the law of Scotland to any part of her father's property. The wife having become entitled by the law of Scotland on the death of her father, to a share of his personal estate by way of legitim:—Held: an injunction to prevent the payment of the wife's legitim, which was applied for on the ground that under the stipulation for the insertion in the settlement of usual & necessary clauses, a clause to bar legitim ought to have been introduced, should be refused.—*BREADALBANE v. The second settlement recited the first, but contained no express trusts of the rents & profits of the settled estate until sale. The first settlement provided that during their joint lives deft. & his wife should be permitted to reside in, & enjoy, all, or any part of, the settled premises rent free. Deft. on his own statement was not a domiciled Englishman at the time of the execution of the settlements & marriage. Separation took place shortly after the marriage, & a bill was filed by the wife to execute the trusts of the settlements:—Held: (1) whether deft.'s domicile was English or not, the question did not affect the jurisdiction of the ct. over him; (2) on the construction of the settlements, there was no resulting trust of the rents & profits of the settled estates until sale in favour of R., & although, owing to the separation, a joint occupation had become impossible, deft. could not take them for himself while the premises were in the occupation of others, but pltf. was entitled thereto for life for her separate use.—*RAINY v. vivor of the husband & wife, for the children of the marriage. The settlement contained provisions usually inserted in English settlements including a power for the trustees to reinvest in British or French securities. From the date of the marriage until their deaths the husband & wife resided in Italy. The Italian trustee having died, an English trustee was appointed in his place. The husband survived the wife, & died in 1877, leaving two children, the only issue of the marriage, the several trust funds being then in the names of the four English trustees. Both the children being domiciled Italians, the question arose whether under Succession Duty Act, 1853 (c. 51), duty was payable on their succession to their father in respect of the French Rentes & bank shares:—Held: succession duty was payable, inasmuch as the settlement was a British settlement, the trustees or persons having the legal ownership were subject to British jurisdiction, & the forum for deciding any claim by the children in respect of the trust funds was a British ct.—Re CIGALA'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS (1878), 7 Ch. n. Scottish settlement—Intention to be bound by Scottish law—Not affected by subsequent change of domicil.]—An ante-nuptial contract of marriage was entered into between an Englishman residing in Scotland & a Scotswoman. The contract was prepared by a Scots solicitor, was in Scots form, & contained a provision that a fund provided by the wife should after her death, failing issue, belong to her "next-of-kin, excluding her husband." Some years after the marriage the parties moved from Scotland to England, & the wife died domiciled there:

SUB-SECT. 2.—VARIATION OF MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS.

1009. Power of English court to vary—On English decree of divorce—Though settlement in Scottish form.]—A decree for dissolution of marriage having been granted on the husband's petition, it appeared that resp., a Scotswoman, was married in Scotland to petitioner, an Englishman, & that in contemplation of the marriage there had been a settlement of her property according to the Scottish law:—Held: that under Matrimonial Causes Act, 1859 (c. 61), s. 5, the ct. had power to order a variation of the settlement.—NUNNELEY v. NUNNELEY (1890), 15 P. D. 186; 63 L. T. 113; 39 W. R. 190.

o. Canadian settlement—Not affected by change of domicil to another province.]—Pltf.'s husband entered into an ante-nuptial contract in Quebec with her concerning their rights & property, present & future. He subsequently moved to Ontario, where he died intestate:—Held: (1) the contract governed all his property movable & immovable, though situate in O., provided that the laws of O. relating to realty had been complied with; (2) it made no difference whether the matrimonial domicil of the parties at the time of the contract & marriage was in O. or Q.—*TALLIFER v. Foreign marriage out of community—Wife's rights secured by ante-nuptial settlement—Not affected by change of domicil to Cape Colony.]—Where spouses having a foreign domicil are married out of community, & rights are secured to the wife by ante-nuptial contract, validly made at the domicil of the marriage, but not registered in the Cape, the subsequent removal of the parties to the Cape does not deprive the wife of her rights.—*BOSMAN'S TRUSTEE v. 1012. On separation by agreement—Marriage contract adopting foreign law—Reference to registrar to draw deed of separation—Registrar going beyond terms of agreement.]—In a suit by the wife for dissolution of marriage the parties at the hearing agreed on certain terms of separation, which were made an order of ct., & it was referred to the registrar to draft a deed of separation, embodying these terms with the usual clauses, & with full power to determine all questions as to the form of the deed, & all questions arising out of the terms of the settlement. The agreement, in addition to the usual conditions as to molestation, custody of, & access to, children, stipulated that the husband should receive £250 a year out of the annual income secured to the wife by the marriage contract, & that the husband should give up to the wife all articles of plate, jewelry, etc., belonging to her. The parties, being English subjects, had been married in Paris, & the marriage contract declared that they adopted the French law as ruling the civil conditions of their marriage. The contract stipulated that the parents of petitioner as her dowry should pay over to the husband & wife a sum of 200,000 francs, & that they should further pay an annuity of 30,000 francs for the benefit of the wife & her children, same to lapse if the donors died before the recipient & the children of the marriage, & in the case of the death of the wife without children before her parents, they contracted to pay the husband an annuity of 12,500 francs. The contract also contained various conditions as to the investment & devolution of property acquired by the wife at & after her marriage, the power of disposing of property movable & immovable by the husband & wife mutually in each other's favour, the mutual liability for debts contracted by either, etc. The deed of separation prepared by the registrar proposed that the income of 30,000 francs secured by the marriage contract should thereafter be deemed to be the sole property of the wife, & that all real & personal property, movable or immovable, now belonging or thereafter accruing to the wife, should be her separate property, independent of the control of her husband, & that all such property, not disposed of by her will or gift, should go to such persons as would have been entitled to it, if the husband had died in her lifetime. It also required resp. to relinquish all rights conferred on him by the marriage contract as to the investment of property acquired by the wife after marriage, & as to the rights of inheritance of the survivor to the property of the party who died first, & finally it stipulated that either of the parties should be at liberty to apply to the proper French tribunal for the ratification of the deed or of any of its provisions. Resp. refused to execute the deed on the ground that it was ultra vires as varying the conditions of the marriage contract, & on a motion under Supreme Ct. of Jud. Act, 1884 (c. 61), s. 14, to nominate some person to sign the deed:—Held: (1) under the terms of the agreement, the registrar had power to determine the questions arising under the French law as to whether a separation of bodies effected a separation of goods, or whether a separation of goods was brought about by the agreement, even though a contrary effect might be inferred from its terms, & also, whether an intention that separation of goods should not take place could be gathered from the agreement; (2) the parties on signing the agreement could only be taken to have intended that the deed should embody & carry out the modifications of the marriage contract relating to the respective proportions of the income to be paid to the husband & wife & to the giving up by the husband of all articles belonging to the wife, & the registrar had exceeded his powers in dealing with the pecuniary relations of the parties under the other terms of the marriage contract; (3) the deed must be referred back to the registrar to be reformed.—DE RICCI v. DE RICCI, [1891] P. 378; 61 L. J. P. 17.

1016. As to custody—Marriage of Englishwoman to Mohammedan—Legitimacy of child—Mother's right to access.]—S., an Englishwoman, had married according to the Mohammedan ritual N., a Mohammedan, he being already married. The children of this marriage had been recognised by N. as his children & his heirs according to Mohammedan law. By an agreement between S. & N. the children were brought up as Mohammedans, & S. & N. having separated, they went with their father to India, & remained there until the father's death four years afterwards. By his will N. appointed certain persons guardians of the children. S. now moved that an order be made giving her the custody of her children, as she admitted that her union with N. was not a marriage, & therefore contended that, as her children were illegitimate, she had the right to the custody of them:—Held: S. had no absolute right to the custody, & the ct. would consider what was best for the interests of the children, & having regard to the nature of their birth, the religion in which they had been educated, & the mode of life which had been adopted for them, it was best for them to remain in the custody of the guardians whom the father had appointed.—Re ULLEE; (THE NAWAB NAZIM OF BENGAL'S INFANTS) (1885), 54 L. 1017. As to maintenance — Liability of English father for maintenance of adult son—Son pauper lunatic relieved in Scotland.]—In Mar. 1896, a pauper lunatic of full age was found destitute in a Scottish parish, & in the same year he was again found destitute in another Scottish parish. The parishes having relieved him they claimed & recovered the cost of doing so from pltfs., the responsible authority for the pauper's parish settlement. Since 1896, pltfs. continued to pay for his maintenance in a pauper lunatic asylum. The pauper lunatic was the son of a domiciled Englishman, who died leaving assets in 1915. Pltfs. claimed to recover the cost of maintenance from the father's exors. on the ground that by Poor Law (Scotland) Act, 1845 (c. 83), s. 71, a relieving parish might recover from a parent or other person responsible, & that by the common law of Scotland a father must provide even for his adult son:—Held: the liability of the parent fell to be determined by the law of his domicile, & inasmuch as by English law a parent is not liable for the maintenance of his adult child except under a justices' order pltfs. could not recover the sums which they had had to expend for the maintenance of the lunatic.—*COLDINGHAM PARISH COUNCIL v. 1018. Jurisdiction of English court to appoint—Infant domiciled in Scotland—Property in Scotland.]—A Scotsman by deed duly made in the Scottish form, having all his property in Scotland, appointed his wife & eight other persons, all domiciled & resident in Scotland, to be tutors & curators of his infant daughter. Upon his death his widow & four only of the eight accepted the trusts of the deed. The widow afterwards, with consent of her co-trustees, brought the infant to England, & after residing for three years in various places there for the health of both, the widow died, recommending the infant to the care of her grandfather, who was then residing in England. The grandfather filed a bill in Ch. in the infant's name for the sole purpose of making her a ward of ct. & preventing her removal to Scotland, & upon a contest arising between him & the Scottish tutors for the guardianship of the infant, the Lord Chancellor made an order in the usual form referring it to the master to approve of proper persons to be guardians:—Held: (1) the Scottish testamentary tutors were not testamentary guardians in England, according to 12 Car. 2, c. 24; (2) the ct. had jurisdiction to appoint guardians to the infant, although her domicile & all her property were situate in Scotland; (3) the ct. was bound to appoint guardians to the infant, being made a ward by the mere filing of the bill, & although the Scottish testamentary tutors had the exclusive control of all her property, answerable to the Scottish cts. only, they had no authority over the infant in England, nor power to protect her, nor were they entitled by virtue of the deed of appointment or by international law to be confirmed or appointed her guardians in England.—*JOHNSTONE v. by the father in custody of a person in Canada. The mother applied to have the child delivered up to her on the ground that by the law of the state of Michigan she was entitled, when living apart from her husband, to the custody of the child until it should arrive at the age of twelve, subject, however, to the right of the ct. to interfere with & remove it for cause assigned. An ex p. order had been made in the wife's divorce suit in her favour, directing the father to give up the child to her. The wife earlier had given a formal document to her husband renouncing all claim to the custody of the child:—Held: (1) the parents being foreigners, & the domicile of the child not having, under the circumstances, been changed, the law of the state of M. must govern; (2) the mother having voluntarily given up the custody of the child to the father, she should not have it re-delivered to her.—Re KINNEY (1875), 6 P. R. 245.—CAN.

Infant domiciled abroad—Part of property in England—Guardian appointed by foreign court.]—The ct. will not, from any supposed benefit to infant subjects of a foreign country, part of whose property is here, & who have been sent to this country for the purposes of education, interfere with the discretion of the guardian who has been appointed by a foreign ct. of competent jurisdiction, when he wishes to remove them from England in order to complete their education in their own country. But the ct. will refuse to discharge an order by which guardians had been appointed over the children in this country, & merely reserve to the foreign guardian the exclusive custody of the children, to which he is entitled by the order of the ct. of his own country.—*NUGENT v. An infant, being a British subject, & also an American citizen, & having lost both father & mother, was brought over to England from the United States, where her property was situate, by a paternal aunt with whom she resided. An application was then made by a maternal aunt, who had been appointed her guardian by the ct. in America, to have the custody of the infant delivered to her with the view of taking the infant back to America:—Held: the ct. should not interfere, since it had no right to make such an order, even if on other grounds it had thought proper to accede to the application.—DAWSON v.

Ct. appointed S. & E. to be guardians of an infant, who was seised, as tenant for life & in fee, of estates in England & Scotland. In the same year P. was appointed tutor-at-law in Scotland to the infant. In 1860 the Ch. Ct. approved a scheme for the maintenance & education of the infant, & ordered E. to deliver him up to his other guardian, S., & discharged her from the guardianship for having clandestinely carried the infant to Scotland to evade the order of the ct. As E. persisted in retaining the infant after the service of the order a petition to the Ct. of Session in Scotland was presented by S., praying the enforcement of the order of the Ch. Ct. The consideration of his petition was adjourned from July 20 to Nov., 1860. In the meantime P., the tutor-at-law in Scotland, by application to the Ct. of Session in Oct. & Nov. restrained E. from taking the infant out of the jurisdiction of the ct. & compelled her to deliver him over to G. for temporary residence. On Feb. 7, 1861, on the petition of P. the Ct. of Session pronounced an interlocutor, forbidding S. & all others from removing the pupil from its jurisdiction:—Held: the appointment of S. as sole guardian should be confirmed, with directions to carry out the scheme of the Ch. Ct.—STUART v. BUTE, STUART v. MOORE (1861), 9 H. L. Cas. 440; 4 L. T. 382; 7 Jur. N. S. 1129; 9 W. R. 722; 11 E. R. 799; sub nom. BUTE'S GUARDIANSHIP, 4 Macq. 1, H. L.; reversg. *S. 1027. What is a foreign judgment—Judgment of colonial court.]—The judgment of a colonial ct. of the British Empire comes within the category of a foreign judgment (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—BANK OF AUSTRALASIA v. NIAS, No. 1042, post.

1028. Contents of foreign judgment—"Reasons for decision" appended to judgment.]—(1) Final decrees & judgments of foreign cts. of competent jurisdiction can be examined & impeached, not only for the purpose of allowing deft. to show that the foreign ct. had not jurisdiction on the subject matter of the suit, or that he was never summoned to answer & had no opportunity of making his defence, or that the judgment was fraudulently obtained, but also for such error as shows upon the face of the judgment itself that the judges, without any extrinsic evidence, had come to an erroneous conclusion either of law or fact.

(2) Semble: the reasons for decision appended to the judgment of a foreign ct. form part of the judgment itself.

(3) Pltfs., who were foreigners, & had always resided beyond seas, obtained judgment in 1842 in a foreign ct. against H. In 1855 they filed their bill to enforce the foreign judgment against the estate of H., who had died in 1846:—Held: although the Stat. Limitations did not apply, yet in the absence of evidence accounting for the delay, they were not entitled to the assistance of the ct. to enforce their demand.

(4) The distinction was considered between the case of a successful party in a foreign ct. seeking to enforce a foreign judgment in this country & the case of a deft. in a foreign ct. setting up a foreign judgment as a bar to the same demand in this country.—*REIMERS v. SUB-SECT. 2.—MUST BE JUDGMENT OF COURT OF COMPETENT JURISDICTION.

A. In General.

1034. Presumption in favour of jurisdiction.]—A declaration in debt on the judgment of a foreign court need not state that the court had jurisdiction over the parties or cause.

We presume that the judgment of a foreign ct. is correct (PATTESON, J.).—ROBERTSON v. STRUTH (1844), 5 Q. B. 941; 1 Dav. & Mer. 772; 3 L. T. O. S. 75; 8 Jur. 404; 114 E. R. 1503.

1036. ———.]—The presumption where a foreign ct. has purported to act properly & within its jurisdiction is omnia rite esse acta.—TAYLOR v. FORD (1873), 29 L. T. 392; 22 W. R. 47.

was duly constituted:—Held: the declaration was good.—BEER v. PATRICK (1880), 1 N. S. W. L. R. 157.—AUS.

1034 ii. ———.]—In construing an order of a foreign ct. made under authority of an Act of Parliament, the domestic ct. will be slow to inquire into the question of the foreign ct.'s jurisdiction to make the order, & will construe such order, if possible, in a way most favourable to the jurisdiction of that ct.—Re ANNAND (1888), 14 V. L. R. 1009.—AUS.

ct. by cts. of this country is that prima facie the foreign ct. will be given credit for having acted properly & within its jurisdiction if the persons affected are citizens of the country where the judgment is given. The burden of showing want of jurisdiction lies on those who impeach the judgment, which can only be done by showing either that by law there is no jurisdiction, or that the judgment is contrary to natural justice.—WALKER v. MAHON (1886), 2 T. L. R. 548, C. A.

1038. —.]—The order of a Master in Lunacy in England is prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein, & if uncontradicted ought to be regarded as sufficient evidence, being made by a competent tribunal in a matter within its jurisdiction, not only in this country, but in all His Majesty's dominions.—HARVEY v. R., [1901] A. C. 601; 70 L. J. P. C. 107; 84 L. T. 849; 17 T. L. R. 601, P. C.

1039. Essentials to establishment of jurisdiction.]—(1) To a declaration in a case for an injury done to pltf.'s ship on the high seas by deft.'s ship, then being under the care, direction, & management of certain mariners & servants of deft., by their negligence, deft. pleaded, that the ship ran foul of pltf.'s ship on the high seas, out of the British dominions; that at that time deft. was, & still is, a subject of France, & a holder & proprietor of shares in, & acting director of, a society or co. established in France, according to the laws of that kingdom, & that, at the time of the collision, the co. were the owners of the ship, & by their mariners & servants, did commit the above grievances; & that deft. never was possessed of or interested in the ship otherwise than as holder & proprietor of shares; & that, by the law of France, deft. was not responsible for or liable to be sued or impleaded individually, or in his own name or person, in respect of the causes of action, but the co. alone, or the master or person in command of the ship for the time being, was responsible for & liable to be sued & that deft. never was master, or in command of the ship:—Held: if this plea was to be construed as meaning to aver, that by the law of France deft. was not liable for the acts of the master, but that a body established by that law, & in the nature of an English corp., were the proprietors of the vessel, & alone liable for the acts of the master, the plea was a good defence to the action, but if the plea meant only, that in the French cts. the mode of proceeding would be to sue deft. jointly with the other shareholders of the co., under the name of their assocn., the plea was bad.

(2) Deft. also pleaded that the co. sued pltf. in the Commercial ct. of Havre according to the law of France, where pltf. defended & was condemned in damages, & that by the law of France, the judgment so recovered in the French ct. was an absolute & final bar to any action by pltf. against deft. in respect of the grievances & causes of action:—Held: the plea was bad in form, for not commencing & concluding by way of estoppel, & in substance, for not showing that pltf. was a French subject, or resident or present in France when the suit at Havre was commenced, so that he might be bound, by reason of allegiance, or domicile, or temporary presence, by a decision of the French ct. Qu.: whether, even with such allegations, the plea would have been a bar to the action.

(3) The pleas do not state that pltf. was a French subject, or resident or even present in France when the suit began so as to be bound by reason of allegiance, or domicile, or temporary presence by a decision of a French ct., & he did not select the tribunal & sue as pltf. in any of which cases the determination might have bound him. 1042. Absence of jurisdiction—Effect of—Generally.]—By an Act of the colonial legislature of New South Wales, it was provided that a banking co. should sue & be sued in the name of its chairman, & that execution on any judgment against the co. might be issued against the property of any member for the time being, in like manner as if such judgment had been obtained against such member personally. In assumpsit against a member of the co. on a judgment obtained in the colony against the chairman:—Held: (1) the colonial legislature had authority to pass the Act, & there was nothing repugnant to the law of England, or to natural justice, in enacting that actions on contracts made by the co. in the colony, instead of being brought against the shareholders individually, should be brought against the chairman whom they had appointed to represent them; (2) a judgment recovered in such an action, after service of process on the chairman, had the same effect beyond the territory of the colony which it would have had if deft. had been personally served with process & he being a party to the record, the recovery had been personally against him; (3) although in an action on a foreign or colonial judgment the judgment is examinable to a certain extent, as, for the purpose of showing want of jurisdiction, or that deft. was not summoned, or that the judgment was fraudulently obtained, yet such judgment is not examinable upon the merits, as, for the purpose of showing that the contract sued upon was not made, or was procured by fraud or that the judgment was erroneous.

She subsequently paid to the indorsee of bills drawn & indorsed by deceased & accepted by deft. the amount due upon them, & recovered judgment against deft. for the amount in a ct. of competent jurisdiction in France:—Held: pltf. was entitled to sue deft. in England in her own name, without having first taken out administration in England to her deceased husband.

(2) The judgment of a foreign ct. may be impeached in this country by an averment of any facts showing that the ct. was not a ct. of competent jurisdiction, but not by an averment of facts which might have been set up by way of defence in the foreign ct. & might have been tried & decided there.—VANQUELIN v. B. Defendant not Subject of Foreign Country.

1045. Meaning of "subject"—Person born in British colony—Whether "subject" of colony.]—The fact that a person is born in a British colony does not make him a subject of that colony, so as to make a judgment recovered against him in his absence in the colonial ct. enforceable in this country.

Deft. was born in the Colony of Victoria, Australia, & resided for twenty-six years there until 1890, when he came to live in England.

PART XIV. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

1046 i. Judgment not recognised.]—Judgment was given against deft. in O., he was served in British Columbia, where he resided & was domiciled. Pltf. sued in British Columbia on this judgment:—Held: deft. was not subject to the O. Cts.—WAISH v. HERMAN (1908), 13 B. C. R. 314.—CAN.

1046 ii. —.]—The mere making of a contract within the jurisdiction of a foreign ct. does not necessarily render that ct. competent to adjudicate upon all the obligatory relations which flow directly or indirectly from it.—MATHAPPA v. CHELLAPPA (1876), I. L. R. 1 Mad. 196.—IND.

1046 i. —.]—Judgment recovered in defendant's absence.]—An ex p. judgment of a French ct. against a native of British India not residing in French territory upon a cause of action which arose in British India imposes no duty on deft. to pay the amount decreed so as to bar a suit in British India.—HINDE & CO. v. Neither of his parents was born in Victoria. Since 1890 he visited Victoria on several occasions, the last being in 1906. In 1911 pltf. issued a writ against him in the Supreme Ct. of Victoria to recover a sum of money as being due on accounts stated. The writ was served on deft. in England, but he did not appear, & pltf. signed judgment in the ct. of Victoria against him in default of appearance. In an action in England upon the judgment, pltf. contended that, as deft. was born in Victoria, he was a subject of that Colony, & that therefore the judgment was enforceable here:—Held: deft. was a subject of the King, & not a subject of Victoria so as to render the judgment recovered against him in his absence binding upon him in this country, & the judgment was not enforceable here.—GIBSON (GAVIN) & CO., LTD. v. GIBSON, [1913] 3 K. B. 379; 82 L. J. K. B. 1315; 109 L. T. 445; 29 T. L. R. 665.

1048. Judgment recovered in defendant's absence.]—In an action upon the judgment of a French ct., given against defts. for default of appearance, pltf. were Danes resident in France, & defts. were Danes resident in London, carrying on business there, & having no property in France, & the contract in respect of which the judgment was obtained was not made in France. By the law of France a French subject may sue a foreigner though not resident in France, & for this purpose an alien, if resident in France, is considered by the French law as a French subject. The mode of citation is by serving the summons on the Procureur Impérial. The practice of the Imperial Govt. is to forward the summons thus served to the consulate of the country where deft. is resident, with directions to intimate the summons, if practicable, to deft.; but this is not required by law, & only done from a regard to fair dealing. The French consulate in London served defts. with a copy of the citation, but defts. in no way interfered in the proceedings in France:—Held: (1) the true principle on which foreign judgments are enforced in England is, that there is a duty or obligation to submit to the decree of a ct. of competent jurisdiction, & anything which negatives that duty is a defence to the action; (2) defts., not being at the commencement of the suit French subjects, nor owing temporary allegiance to France, nor having been there when the obligation was contracted, nor in any way interfered in the proceedings, were not subject to the jurisdiction of the French cts.; (3) they were under no obligation to submit to a jurisdiction which these cts. assumed to exercise over absent foreigners, & consequently the judgment could not be enforced in this country.

action, who has neither appeared to the process nor expressly agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of the foreign ct.

In 1895 deft., who was then residing & carrying on business in Western Australia, entered into a partnership for the working of a gold mine situate in the Colony & owned by the partnership. Deft. ceased to carry on business in Western Australia, & in 1899 left the Colony permanently & came to live in England. In 1901 plffs., being partners other than deft., brought an action in Western Australia claiming a decree for dissolution of the partnership, sale of the mine & taking of the partnership accounts. The writ was served on deft. in England, but he entered no appearance, & took no step to defend the action. The ct. decreed a dissolution of the partnership & the sale of the mine, & on taking accounts found a sum to be due from the partnership. Plffs. paid the sum, & brought an action in England to recover the share which they alleged to be due from deft.:—Held: deft., not being domiciled in Western Australia, nor resident there at the date of the action in that Colony, & not having appeared to the process or expressly agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of that ct., was not bound by its finding or decree, & the action in this country, which was based on that finding & decree, could not be maintained.—*EMANUEL v. C. Defendant not Resident in Foreign Country.

1054. Judgment not recognised—Judgment recovered in defendant's absence.]—No action will lie upon a foreign judgment on the face of which it appears that deft., not resident within the jurisdiction of the foreign ct., was neither served with process nor came in to defend the action.

The law will not raise an assumpsit upon a judgment obtained by default in one of the colonies against a party who upon the face of the proceedings appeared only to have been summoned by nailing up a copy of the declaration on the court

PART XIV. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.—C.

1054 i. Judgment not recognised—Judgment recovered in defendant's absence.]—In a personal action where certain causes of jurisdiction do not apply, a decree pronounced in absentem by a foreign ct., to the jurisdiction of which deft. has not in any way submitted himself, is an absolute nullity.—SEEGNER v. MARKS (1895), 21 V. L. R. 491.—AUS.

1054 ii. ———.]—Judgment had been obtained in Q.; service of the writ had been effected by advertisement. Deft. never resided in or carried on business in Q., & had no personal knowledge of the proceedings. In an action on the judgment:—Held: deft. was not bound by it.—SCHNEIDER v. WOODWORTH (1844), 1 Man. L. R. 41.—CAN.

1054 iii. ———.]—No action will lie on a foreign judgment, if defts. were not resident within the jurisdiction of the foreign Court & had no property or agent there, & were neither served with process in the foreign country nor defended the suit; though the judgment may have been obtained according to the practice of the foreign ct.—CYR v. SANFACON (1853), 2 All. 641.—CAN.

1054 iv. ———.]—In an action on a foreign judgment, deft. was not, at commencement of foreign action or previously, resident or domiciled within the jurisdiction of the foreign ct., or a subject of that country, & he was not served with process in the action, & had no notice of it or opportunity of defending himself:—Held: the judgment would not be recognised.—BEATY v. CROMWELL (1883), 9 P. R. 547.—CAN.

1054 v. ———.]—In an action to enforce a personal judgment obtained in Dak., it appeared that deft. had been born in Wis., had been living, at the time of judgment, & for many years previously, in N.W. Territories, & had not appeared in Dak. ct. or submitted to its jurisdiction:—Held: deft. was not bound by judgment.—DAKOTA LUMBER CO. v. RINDERKNECHT (1905), 6 Terr. L. R. 210; 1 W. L. R. 481; 2 W. L. R. 275.—CAN.

1054 vi. ———.]—In an action brought in O. upon a judgment recovered in Quebec, against an incorporated co., who, at the time the action was begun, had no office or agent in Quebec:—Held: the judgment in Quebec must be treated in O. as a nullity.—VEZINA v. WILL H. NEWSOME CO. (1907), 10 O. W. R. 17; 14 O. L. R. 658.—CAN.

1054 vii. ———.]—Pltf. brought action on a judgment recovered by him against deft. in N.W. Territories. At the time of commencing proceedings leading up to judgment he was not a resident within N.W. Territories nor was he a subject or citizen of the N.W. Territories:—Held: the action must be dismissed.—McLORG v. STANNING (1908), 7 W. L. R. 701.—CAN.

1054 viii. ———.]—A foreign judgment obtained by default against one who, at the time of the foreign action, was a resident of Alta., & was served with process in the foreign action in Alta., will not be enforced in Alta.—BELOCOURT v. NOEL (1913), 23 W. L. R. 368; 3 W. W. R. 926; 9 D. L. R. 788.—CAN.

The writ & statement of claim in the action were served upon defts. in England, but they did not appear, & judgment was given against them in default of appearance. Defts. were not natives of New Zealand & were not resident or domiciled there:—Held: as there was no appearance, & no submission by defts. to the jurisdiction of the ct., & as they were not resident or domiciled in that country, the judgment of the ct. was without jurisdiction, & could not be sued upon in this country.—TURNBULL v. c. ———.]—Unauthorized by defendant—Resident within jurisdiction.]—A judgment was recovered against B. in a foreign ct. on which action was brought in Sask. In the original pronounced by a judge in Poona. Process was issued in that ct. on Dec. 1, 1906, & reached deft. about Christmas, 1906, & required him to enter an appearance before Jan. 7, 1907. Deft. was domiciled & resident in this country when the summons reached him, & had no opportunity of entering an appearance within the time specified. It was stated on the face of the decree that deft. had ceased to be domiciled in India in 1900:—Held: the decree could not be enforced in an English ct.—JAFFER v. WILLIAMS (1908), 25 T. L. 1066. Sufficiency of appearance—Appearance by attorney—Defendant not living within jurisdiction.]—An action may be maintained upon a foreign judgment obtained by default, which states that deft. appeared by attorney, without proving that the attorney mentioned had authority to appear, or that deft. was living within the jurisdiction of the foreign ct.—MOLONY v. GIBBONS (1810), 2 Camp. 502, N. P.

1068. ———.]—Appearance to obtain release of property.]—It is no answer to an action upon a judgment of a foreign ct. given against deft. who is not resident or domiciled in or under allegiance to the foreign country, that deft. only entered an appearance to the process of the foreign ct. in order to protect from seizure property of his which may be in or which may thereafter come into that country. Such an appearance is voluntary, & is not an appearance under duress, as is an appearance when the foreign ct. has before appearance seized property of deft., so that he appears in order to release & protect property so seized in the foreign country before appearance.—VOINET v. 1069. —.]—Pltfs., owners of a British ship, commenced an action in rem & caused a vessel within the jurisdiction to be arrested in respect of a collision on the high seas. The owners of the vessel arrested were foreigners domiciled abroad. They appeared & obtained the release of their vessel by giving bail to the value of ship & freight. They then defended the action, denying their liability & counterclaiming for the damage they had sustained by reason of the collision. The foreign vessel was found alone to blame, & judgment was pronounced in the usual form condemning defts. & their bail in the amount of the damage sustained by pltfs., together with the costs of the claim & counter-claim. Defts. moved to vary the decree by limiting it to the value of their vessel, freight & costs:—Held: apart from any application for a statutory limitation of liability, the appearance of defts. being voluntary & their proceedings in the action amounting to a submission to the jurisdiction of the ct., they were personally liable to the full extent of pltfs.' proved claim.—THE DUPLEX, [1912] P. 8; 81 L. J. P. 9; 106 L. T. 347; 27 T. L. R. 577; 12 Asp. M. L. C. 122.

1070. — — — Application to reopen judgment by default—Under which conditional order of attachment issued.]—Pltf. who resided & carried on business in Paris, commenced proceedings in the Tribunal of Commerce of the Seine against defts., who were merchants carrying on business in London, for breach of contract. A notification of those proceedings was sent to the French Consul in London, who informed defts. that certain legal documents had been received by him for them & requested them to take them up. Defts., although they had reason to suspect to what the documents related, declined to take them. Thereafter judgment by default for damages & costs, was entered against defts. in the Tribunal of Commerce, & intimation thereof was given in the same way as in connection with the commencement of the proceedings, but defts. took no notice thereof until pltf. obtained the issue of a saisie-arrêt or conditional order attaching any money belonging to them in the hands of the Crédit Lyonnais bank in Paris. Defts. had a sum of £4 or £8 due to them in the bank at the time, & the bank intimated to them that the saisie-arrêt had been issued, whereupon defts. filed an opposition in the Tribunal of Commerce asking that the default judgment should be reopened. The Tribunal of Commerce allowed the opposition, heard the case on the merits, & gave judgment for defts. with costs. Pltf. appealed to the Ct. of Appeal in Paris, & that ct. held that, the first judgment of the Tribunal of Commerce having been executed by pltf., defts.' opposition was too late & therefore was not receivable, & accordingly pltf.'s appeal was allowed. Pltf. now sued on the judgment of the Ct. of Appeal restoring the first judgment of the Tribunal of Commerce:—Held: the judgment was enforceable inasmuch as (a) defts. had voluntarily appeared in the French proceedings, & (b) the judgment took its whole force & effect from the decision of the Ct. of Appeal & was not merely the original default judgment.—GUIARD v. DE CLERMONT & DONNER, [1914] 3 K. B. 145; 83 L. J. K. B. 1407; 111 L. T. 293; 30 T. L. R. 511.

1072. — — — "Conditional" appearance to set aside writ.]—Pltf. brought an action against deft. in the High Ct. of the Isle of Man claiming damages for criminal conversation with pltf.'s wife. Deft. was at no material time domiciled or resident in the Isle of Man. Pltf. obtained leave to serve deft. with a writ of summons out of the jurisdiction & deft. was duly served with a writ in England. Deft. subsequently appeared conditionally & applied to the ct. to set aside the order for service out of the jurisdiction & the writ on the ground (inter alia) that deft. was domiciled in England. The ct. dismissed the application. Deft. took no further part in the proceedings & pltf. eventually recovered judgment in the action for damages & costs. Pltf. then brought this action against deft. to enforce the judgment:—Held: deft. by reason of his application to the Isle of Man ct. had voluntarily submitted to the jurisdiction of that ct. & the judgment was enforceable against him in England.—HARRIS v. TAYLOR, [1915] 2 K. B. 580; 84 L. J. K. B. 1839; 113 L. T. 221, C. A.

No submission to jurisdiction—Judgment not recognised.]—See No. 1060, ante.

1073. What amounts to voluntary submission to jurisdiction—Shareholder in foreign company—Bound by memorandum of association—To elect foreign domicile.]—To an action on a French judgment, deft. pleaded that he was not during the accruing of the cause of action or any part of the proceedings nor from thence hitherto resident in France, or within the jurisdiction of the ct., nor subject to the laws of France; that he was never served with any process or notice whatever; nor had he any notice whatever of any proceedings in the action; nor did he appear in ct. or have any opportunity of defending himself against the claim, & the proceedings were taken in his absence, & without his knowledge, privity & consent. Replication, that deft. became a shareholder in a certain co. in France, subject to all the liabilities, & rights attaching thereto; that deft. was resident in England, & by reason thereof, it became necessary by the law of France, for deft. to elect a domicile in France, at which the directors of the co. might notify to him all proceedings relative to the co., or deft. as such shareholder; that, by the law of France all legal proceedings affecting any party having his real domicile out of that kingdom, left for him at such elected domicile, were as valid as if left at his real domicile in France; that deft. made election of domicile at a place in Paris, & gave notice thereof to pltfs.; that the assets of the co. being insufficient to discharge their debts, deft. as

d. — — — Subsequent plea to jurisdiction.]—A deft. domiciled in Alta. where all his assets were, when sued in O. appeared there without prejudice to his right to dispute the ct.'s jurisdiction, & subsequently pleaded to the jurisdiction & also upon the merits:—Held: by such procedure he had attorned to the jurisdiction of O. ct. & its judgment upon such issues would be given effect to in Alta.—RICHARDSON v. ALLEN (1915), 34 W. L. R. 606; 10 W. W. R. 720.—CAN.

a shareholder, was, by the law of France liable to pay a certain sum, & to be sued for same by plffs.; that plffs., for the recovery thereof, caused a summons to be left at his elected domicile, requiring him to appear in ct. at a certain time & place; that deft. did not appear, according to the exigency of the summons whereupon plffs. recovered judgment by default. On special demurrer to the replication:—Held: (1) the facts stated in the replication afforded an answer to the plea; (2) the word notice in the plea, meant actual notice alone, & consequently, the replication did not amount to an argumentative denial of that notice, but consisted of a statement of facts showing that no such notice need be given.—VALLEE v. DUMERGUE (1849), 4 Exch. 290; 18 L. J. Ex. 398; 14 L. T. O. S. 108; 154 E. R. 1221.

1074. ————]—To a declaration claiming a sum recovered by a judgment in a French ct., deft. pleaded that he was not a native of France, or at any time before judgment resident or domiciled within the jurisdiction of the French ct., or served with any process or summons in the suit, nor did he appear therein; nor had he any notice or knowledge of any process or summons, or any proceedings in the suit, or any opportunity of defending himself. Replication, that deft. was the holder of shares in a co. having its legal domicile in Paris, & thereby became subject to all the liabilities, rights & privileges attaching or belonging to shareholders & in particular to the conditions contained in the statutes or articles of association. That by those statutes or articles, it was provided & agreed that all disputes arising during the liquidation of the co. between the shareholders of the co., the administrators, the comrs. or between the shareholders themselves, with respect to the affairs of the co., should be submitted to the jurisdiction of the French ct.; that every shareholder provoking a contest must elect a domicile at Paris, & in default election might be made for him at the office of the imperial procurator of the civil tribunal of the department in which the office of the co. was situate, & that all summonses, etc., should be validly served at the domicile formally or impliedly chosen; that the co. became bkpt., & by the law of France the amount unpaid upon deft.'s shares became payable to pltf. as the co.'s assignee in bkptcy.; that deft. made default & provoked a contest; that he never elected a domicile; that pltf. thereupon caused a summons to be served at the office, which summons required deft. to appear in the French ct. to answer to pltf.'s claim; that by the law of France that office was the deft.'s implied domicile of election for the purpose of service, & the service was regular; & that deft. was bound to appear, but did not, whereupon pltf. recovered judgment by default against him for the amount unpaid on his shares:—Held: the replication was good, although it did not allege that deft. ever had any notice or knowledge of the statutes or articles, or of their provisions.—COPIN v. ADAMSON (1875), 1 Ex. D. 17; 45 L. J. Q. B. 15; 33 L. T. 560; 24 W. R. 85, C. A.

1075. ——— Clause in contract for settlement of disputes by specified jurisdiction.—A clause in a contract made between a British subject resident & domiciled in England & a foreigner that all disputes relating to the agreement & its fulfilment should be determined by the jurisdiction of the foreign country, gives the cts. of the foreign country jurisdiction to deal with such disputes, & to bind the British subject by a judgment of the foreign ct. duly given against him in default of his appearance, where all the requirements of the law of that foreign country as to citation, service of process & otherwise, have been complied with; & an action upon such judgment may be maintained in the cts. of this country against the British subject.—FYERICK v. HUBBARD (1902), 71 L. J. K. B. 509; 86 L. T. 829; 50 W. R. 557; 18 T. L. R. 381; 46 Sol. Jo. 318.

1076. ——— ]—By agreement made between pltf. & defts., the latter obtained the exclusive sale in Great Britain & her Colonies of pltf.'s products for five years from Jan. 1, 1906, & defts. agreed to do business with pltf. to the amount of 10,000 francs the first year, & 15,000 francs afterwards; & in case of breach of contract to pay an indemnity of 5,000 francs, the French Tribunals of Commerce alone to have jurisdiction. On May 2, 1907, pltf. issued a writ in the Tribunal de Commerce de Lyon, requiring defts. to appear on June 4, 1907. The writ recited the agreement between the parties, stated that the turnover for 1906 was only 796 francs, & claimed the penalty of 5,000 francs. Service of the writ was, in accordance with the French Code of Civil Procedure, effected by leaving it at the office of the Procureur-Général on May 2. The writ was also sent to the French Consulate in London on May 31, & notice was given to defts. the same day. Defts. received the notice, but ignored it. On June 2, defts. not appearing before the Tribunal, the case was, without notice to them, adjourned till June 18, when it came on in their absence, & judgment by default was given for the amount claimed. Service of the judgment was effected by leaving it at the office of the Procureur-Général, & on Aug. 8 notice was given of it to defts. through the French Consulate in London & was ignored by them. In Nov. notice of the execution of the judgment & a certificate of nulla bona were sent to defts. Thereafter, plffs. sued defts. in England on the French judgment:—Held: defts. were liable for the amount of the judgment, inasmuch as (a) there was nothing in the proceedings before the French Tribunal that was contrary to natural justice, notwithstanding that the defendants were informed of the commencement of those proceedings at a time when it was practically impossible for them to appear on the day named, & (b), there was in France a final judgment in existence & binding on defts. at the time when the action was commenced in the English ct.—JEANNOT v. FUERST (1909), 100 L. T. 816; 25 T. L. R. 424; 53 Sol. Jo. 449.

1077. ——— Of court awarding damages against shipowner—Appearance in court of another country to prevent arrest of ship.—After a collision between a French vessel D. & a British vessel C., the C. proceeded to a Belgian port. The owners of the D., intending to bring an action in France against the owners of the C., in respect of the collision, took proceedings in Belgium to arrest the C., as permitted by Belgian law, to answer the judgment which they might obtain in their action in France, & which might become enforceable in Belgium. The agents of the owners of the C. to prevent arrest, gave bail in the Belgian proceedings. Subsequently, the owners of the D. brought their intended action in France, & served notice of it upon the owners of the C. in the United Kingdom, but the owners of the C. did not appear, & judgment went against them by default. Then the owners of the D. took further proceedings in Belgium to obtain a decree to make the French judgment enforceable there. In those proceedings the owners of the C. appeared & opposed the making of the decree, which was nevertheless made, but without any enquiry by the ct. into the merits of the collision:—Held: the conduct of the owners of the C. in the Belgian proceedings did not amount to a submission to the jurisdiction of the French ct., & the rights of the parties in respect of the collision were not res judicata, so as to bar an action in this country by the owners of the C. against the owners of the D. in respect of the collision.—THE CHALLENGE & DUC D'AUMALE, [1904] P. 41; 73 L. An action was brought in England by the Belgian trustee in the bkpcy. against deft. for a declaration that all deft.'s assets in this country were vested in the trustee, & for the appointment of a receiver:—Held: as the Englishman had, by instructing counsel to appeal against the decree, submitted to the jurisdiction of the Belgian cts., & as the proceedings were not contrary to natural justice, they were valid, & deft.'s movable property in this country vested in the Belgian trustee, & a receiver must be appointed.—*BERGEREM v. Where deft. pleaded to such action that he was never arrested upon, or served with, nor at any time had notice of, any process of the ct. at the suit of pltf. for the cause of action on which the judgment was obtained, nor ever appeared in the action:—Held: the plea was a good defence, & a replication alleging that, before obtaining the judgment, deft. had notice of a writ of summons, issuing out of the ct. for the cause of action on which the judgment was so obtained, was bad.—*FERGUSON v. Where the law of a British colony required that, in a suit instituted against an absent party, the process should be served upon the A.-G. in the colony, but it was not expressly provided that the A.-G. should communicate with the absent party:—Held: such law was not so contrary to natural justice, as to render void a judgment obtained against a party who had resided within the jurisdiction of the ct. at the time when the cause of action accrued, but had withdrawn himself before the proceedings were com-without notice to the contributories. In an action on the Scots judgment:—Held: he had, by signing the memorandum of assocn. contracted that proceedings might be taken against him in his absence, & without notice.—JAMIESON v. ROBB (1881), 7 V. L. R. 170.—AUS.

1108. Judgment in “executive” proceedings—Defendant precluded from contesting validity of contract sued on—Unsuccessful party entitled to take subsequent proceedings in which all defences available—Spanish judgment.]—An action cannot be brought in this country upon a foreign judgment for the recovery of a debt, if the judgment does not finally & conclusively, subject to an appeal to a higher ct., settle the existence of the debt so as to become res judicata between the parties.

By Spanish law in certain cases summary or “executive” proceedings could be taken to recover a debt, & pltf. if successful obtained a “remate” judgment for the recovery of a sum of money. Such a judgment was final in those proceedings unless reversed or varied on appeal. In such proceedings deft. could plead certain limited defences, but could not set up any defence affecting the validity of the contract. Either pltf. or deft., if unsuccessful in the “executive” proceedings, might in the same ct. & in respect of the same subject-matter, take ordinary or “plenary” proceedings, in which all defences & the whole merits of the matter might be gone into. In the “plenary” proceedings the “remate” judgment could not be set up as res judicata or otherwise. A “remate” judgment could be enforced by pltf. on giving security, although either an appeal or “plenary” proceedings might be pending. A “plenary” judgment rendered the “remate” judgment inoperative & required restoration of any money paid under it:—Held: since a “remate” judgment did not finally & conclusively establish the existence of a debt no action could be brought upon it in this country.—NOUVION v. 1111. Judgment or order not enforceable in foreign country unless enforcement order obtained—Arbitration award—German award.]—An assocn. formed to promote & protect the cotton trade in L. made a bye-law rendering a member liable to expulsion for disreputable conduct in dealings with members of associated societies. Pltfs. having sold cotton, the bills of lading of which were forged, to a firm, members of a German assocn., with whom the L. assocn. had agreed that refusal to arbitrate upon questions in dispute should constitute disreputable conduct, refused to submit the questions between themselves & such firm to arbn., & a foreign award was made against pltfs. for payment of a large sum of money. By German law an enforcement order is necessary before an award can be enforced. The L. assocn. having threatened to expel pltfs. under their bye-law:—Held: the award was a valid determination upon the matters in dispute inter partes, but, although the action must be dismissed, the award was not the existing judgment of a foreign tribunal which an English ct. could enforce.—MERRIFIELD, ZIEGLER & CO. v. LIVERPOOL COTTON ASSCN., LTD. (1911), 105 L. T. 97 ; 55 Sol. Jo. 581.

1112. Original judgment liable to be abrogated or varied on application for enforcement order.]—In order that a foreign judgment may be enforceable in an English ct., it must be a final & conclusive judgment of the ct. by which it was pronounced, & it is not a final & conclusive judgment of that ct. if an order has to be obtained in that ct. for its enforcement, or if on application to that ct. for an order to enforce it the original judgment is liable to be abrogated or varied ; but it is not prevented from being a final judgment by reason of the fact that it may be the subject of an appeal to a High Ct.

By the judgment of a Judicial Comr. of Perak dated Dec. 13, 1916, which affirmed, with a variation, & previous order of a magistrate, it was adjudged that deft. should pay to pltf., his wife, as from Aug. 9, 1916, a certain sum per month for the maintenance of pltf. & the child of the marriage. In Oct. 1919, the parties having come to England, pltf. brought an action against deft. claiming five monthly payments alleged to be due under the judgment of the Judicial Comr.:—Held: the judgment was not final & conclusive within the doctrine of English law which enabled judgments of foreign cts. to be enforced in England, & pltf. could not recover.—HARROP v. HARROP, [1920] 3 K. B. 386 ; 90 L. J. K. B. 101 ; 123 L. T. 580 ; 36 T. L. R. 635 ; 64 Sol. Jo. 586 ; 84 J. P. Jo. 249.

1113. Judgment for repayment of sum of money—Amount subject to variation or termination according to circumstances—Maintenance of illegitimate child.]—A valid foreign judgment in jurisdiction, though liable to be set aside, so long as it stands is “final & conclusive” within the meaning of that expression as applied to foreign judgments, & consequently it may be sued on in this province.—BOYLE v. VICTORIA YUKON TRADING CO. (1902), 9 B. C. R. 213.—CAN.

1113 i. Judgment for payment of sum of money—Amount subject to variation or termination according to circumstances—Support & maintenance of wife.]—By an order of a foreign ct. made in an action in which a wife personam cannot be enforced in England in (inter alia) the following circumstances:—(a) If it is contrary to public policy; e.g., by recognising the right of an illegitimate child to perpetual maintenance against the putative father & his estate. (b) If the cause of action is unknown in England; e.g., the right to a posthumous affiliation order. (c) If the judgment is not final & conclusive as to the amount payable; e.g., if the maintenance can be varied or terminated according to the child's circumstances.—*Re MACARTNEY, MACFARLANE v. SUB-SECT. 4.—JUDGMENT MUST BE FOR SUM CERTAIN.

1114. Sum subject to deduction of costs to be taxed—Taxation condition precedent to action.]—Assumpsit will not lie on a decree of a foreign ct., whereby deft. is ordered to pay a certain sum of money to pltf., first deducting thereout deft.'s costs to be taxed by the proper officer & where deft.'s costs have not been taxed, either at his own request or upon an ex parte proceeding at the instance of pltf.—*SADLER v. In such action, the ct. will look at the substance, without regarding the form of the proceedings upon which the decree is founded.—HENLEY v. SOPER (1828), 8 B. & C. 16; Dan. & Ll. 38; 2 Man. & Ry. Plea, that the decree was made in respect of matters of trust & exor.-ship accounts, not cognisable in a ct. of law:—Held: bad, debt being maintainable at law on a decree of a colonial court of equity simply ascertaining a balance & ordering payment by deft. to pltf.

(2) Plea that pltf. sued in the Supreme Ct. as widow of H. in right of H. without showing any right of representation to warrant such suit, & that the decree was made on matter of complaint solely in right of H.:—Held: bad, because whatever constituted a defence in that ct. ought to have been there relied on; & because this ct. would assume that right had been done there, unless something appeared to have been done repugnant to natural justice. (3) Pleas, showing a set-off for debts from H., or his estate to deft.:—

sued her husband for support & maintenance, the husband was ordered to pay into ct. a specified sum per month for the support & maintenance of his wife, such payments to be made "until further order of the ct." In an action in another jurisdiction by the wife against the executor of her husband for arrears due under the order:—Held: the order was not such a "final & conclusive" judgment as to be enforceable by Irish cts.—M'DONNELL v. M'DONNELL, [1921] 2 I. R. 148.—IR.

The penalties were paid to the creditors in satisfaction pro tanto of their debt. The New York cts. had decided that actions for these penalties were criminal actions. An action was brought in an Ontario ct. upon a judgment of a New York ct. under this statute:—Held: (1) these actions, being by a subject to enforce in his own interest a liability for the protection of his private rights, were remedial & not penal within the rule of international law which prohibits the cts. of one state from executing the penal laws of another state; (2) it was the duty of the Ontario ct. to decide whether the New York statute was remedial or fully penal, & it was not bound by the interpretation of the New York cts.—*HUNTINGTON v. Such judgment cannot be applied to persons other than those who were parties to the litigation decided by it, except in cases where the judgment is in rem.

A Greek ship having on board a cargo consigned to Malta, the port of destination, having encountered severe weather in her passage down the Black Sea, was obliged, for the preservation of her cargo, to jettison her boats, spars & cables, & being disabled put into Constantinople, where the captain applied to the Greek Consular Ct., & obtained an order for a survey of the ship & cargo, & a sentence of average settlement, with the appointment of a curator, who by virtue of the authority conferred on him, hypothecated the cargo, & caused a bottomry bond to be executed thereon for freight & the necessary expenses of trans-shipping & forwarding the cargo. The cargo, having been trans-shipped, arrived at Malta, where proceedings were taken in the Ct. of Commerce by the consignee to set aside the sentence of average settlement & to annul the bottomry bond. The Ct. of Commerce declared its incompetency to decide regarding the average settlement, but pronounced the bottomry bond null & void. On appeal to the Ct. of Appeal at Malta, that ct. reversed the decree of the Ct. of Commerce so far as regarded its competency to decide the average act & settlement, & ordered, as regarded the decision of the nullity of the bottomry bond, that such decision should be set aside until a definite sentence on the average act & settlement should have been come to by the Ct. of Commerce. The Ct. of Commerce gave a decision on the case thus remitted against the consignee, which was equivalent to a nonsuit. On appeal from this decision, the Appellate Ct. of Malta were of opinion that the captain having taken the legal course before the Consular Tribunal at Constantinople, & that ct. having, on the report of experts, appointed a curator of the cargo, & declared the voyage ended at Constantinople, such curator was the attorney for the owners of the cargo, & had authority to hypothecate same; that where the formalities of a consular authority & verbal process justifying the expenses necessitating the loan were observed, the lender on the bottomry bond was exonerated from justifying the necessity for the loan or making inquiry as to the facts causing such necessity, & decided for the validity of the bond:—Held: the Greek Consular Ct. at Constantinople fraudulent & void as against them & that A. might account with wilful default for all moneys received for a subsequent sale by him of the property:—Held: this ct. had jurisdiction to deal with the parties to the suit as well as the subject matter thereof notwithstanding the decree of the foreign ct.; that even if full value was given & there was no actual fraud the sale was constructively fraudulent & void & decree would be made as prayed.—

being a competent ct., having jurisdiction over a Greek ship & a cargo owned by Greek subjects, the sentence of that ct. was not open to examination by the Ct. of Commerce at Malta, & it must be presumed, in the absence of manifest error or fraud, that the Greek Consular Ct. rightly interpreted & applied the Greek law, by which they had the power they exercised of deciding that Constantinople should be considered the place of the ship's destination, & the average adjusted according to the law in force at that place; & the bottomry bond was necessary & valid.—*MESSINA v. The ship was attached in a foreign port by the creditors of D., the registered owner, & proceedings were had in the ct. there for the sale of the ship. The agents of A. & B. intervened in these proceedings to protect the rights & assert the claims of A. & B. as mtgees. The ct. there refused to take notice of the claim as mtgees., as by the law of the State a mtge. of chattels was invalid. The ship was ordered to be sold. It finally arrived in a British port. Thereupon pltf. as mtgees. filed their bill to confirm the mtge., & for the usual directions:—Held: (1) the judgment of the foreign ct. was not binding on the cts. in England, the lex loci contractus being ignored by that ct.; (2) pltf. not having originated proceedings in the foreign ct., but, on the contrary, their title being wholly denied by it, were not estopped from proceeding here.—*LIVERPOOL BANK v. The mtgees. afterwards filed a bill to restrain the creditors from suing on these bonds:—Held: though the decisions of the cts. of New Orleans might be open to the reproach of injustice, yet as the creditors owed no duty to the mtgees., & had a right to proceed against the property of their debtor wherever they found it, the bill could not be maintained.—*LIVERPOOL MARINE CREDIT CO. v. her voyage was wrecked about 110 miles from Constantinople. The captain sent off the chief officer with the gold to Gallipoli, which was two & a half miles distant. The gold was then deposited with the Russian consul where it remained twelve days, the fees demanded upon delivering it up being 2½ per cent. upon its value. 1180. —.— English law—English law question of fact.]—(1) It is no bar to an action, on a judgment in personam of a foreign ct. having jurisdiction over the parties & cause, that the foreign tribunal has put a construction erroneous, according to English law, on an English contract.

Declaration was made on a judgment of a French ct. having jurisdiction in the matter. A plea set out the judgment, from which it appeared that the suit was for the breach by the shipowner of a charterparty made in England, in which was a clause that the penalty for the non-performance of the agreement should be the estimated amount of freight; & that the ct. had treated this clause, contrary to the English law, as fixing the amount of damages recoverable, & had given judgment accordingly for the amount of freight. The proceedings showed that both parties had appeared & been heard before the judgment was pronounced, but no objection was taken by deft. to the mode of assessing the damages:—Held: deft. could not set up as an excuse for not paying money awarded by a judgment of a foreign tribunal having jurisdiction over him & the cause, that the judgment proceeded on a mistake as to the English law, which was really a question of fact, & it made no difference that the mistake appeared on the face of the proceedings.

(2) The French ct. could only be informed of foreign law by evidence, & deft., having neglected to bring the English law to the knowledge of the French ct., could not impeach the judgment given against him on the ground of error as to that law (HANNEN, J.).—*GODARD v. 1184. Mistake admitted by parties.]—The presumption with regard to the judgment of a foreign ct. is that it is correct according to the law of the country to which it belongs, but when it is admitted by the parties that the law of the foreign tribunal has not been correctly declared by its judgment, such a judgment is not binding on an English ct.

A cargo of rye, shipped on an Austrian ship for carriage from Enos, a Turkish port, to Schiedam, was insured by a policy warranted free of particular average. The ship meeting with stormy weather, a portion of the cargo was damaged, & the ship had to put into the port of La Rochelle. Proceedings were taken, at the instance of the captain, in the Tribunal of Commerce at that port, & in consequence the cargo was landed & warehoused. It was necessary to sell a portion of the cargo immediately, which was accordingly done. On Feb. 21 the ct. on the petition of the captain ordered a sale of the residue, & notice of abandonment was given to defts. as insurers on the ground that, in the opinion of the experts or surveyors, the rye could not be forwarded to its destination. This notice defts. refused to accept, & on Mar. 5 defts., as insurers, summoned the captain before the Tribunal of Commerce for the purpose of having it decreed that there was no occasion to sell the residue of the rye. The ct. accordingly ordered the residue of the rye to be surveyed, & the surveyors reported that it could be re-shipped & conveyed to its destination. This report was confirmed by the ct., & notice of it given to the assured, together with notice that any course pursued with the cargo would be for their account & on their responsibility. The rye, however, was not forwarded, & remained until Dec. warehoused at La Rochelle, although the captain might have procured a ship to carry it on. The captain having in the meantime procured advances to meet the expenses caused by the interruption of the voyage, was summoned, by the parties who had made the advances, before the Tribunal of Commerce, & on Sept. 14 the ct. decreed a sale of the ship, & a statement of general & particular average of the ship & cargo to be drawn up, which was accordingly done. On Dec. 21 the Tribunal of Commerce decreed the sale of the rest of the cargo, on the ground that the weather was unfavourable for its preservation. On Jan. 25 the Tribunal of Commerce decreed that the full amount of the freight due upon the whole voyage was chargeable upon the proceeds of such sale, & an amended average statement, which proceeded on this footing, was confirmed by the ct. If the proportion of freight so payable was to be added to the extra expenses incurred in respect of the residue of the cargo so sold by reason of the interruption of the voyage, including the extra freight in respect of forwarding to the port of destination, the amount would exceed the value of the rye at the port of destination. It was admitted that neither the law of France nor of Austria was in accordance with the decree of Jan. 25, & if the proper proportion of freight had been charged to the residue of cargo sold, the value at the port of destination would have exceeded the expenses:—Held: (1) there was no constructive total loss of the cargo, inasmuch as the decree for the sale of the residue of the cargo was not due to the perils insured against, but was made for the purpose of paying advances incurred through the captain's breach of duty in not forwarding such rye to its destination; (2) the insurers were not concluded by the judgment of the French ct. from denying that there was no total loss, because it was admitted that such judgment was erroneous according to the law which it professed to administer.—*MEYER v. 1187. —.]—An American co. incorporated with the object of buying & selling land in Mexico, having acquired over seventeen million acres in the territory of Lower California in that country, borrowed under its powers a very large sum on debentures. A trust deed was executed between the co. of the first part, a trustee for the debenture holders of the second part, & an advisory committee of three persons of the third part. By the deed, which contained a covenant by the American co. that the land in Lower California should be charged with the payment of the principal money & interest payable on the debentures, the committee were empowered to call meetings of the debenture holders, to be conducted like meetings of shareholders, & a meeting was to have power to sanction any modification or compromise of the rights of debenture holders against the co. or against its property, whether such rights should arise under the debentures or under those presents, & a special resolution was to be binding on all the debenture holders. In 1889 an English co. was formed with power to buy & sell land, & other very wide powers, & on May 4 of that year the American co., being in difficulties, transferred its assets, business & liabilities to such English co., subject, as to the lands in Lower California, to the debentures & the deed of trust. The English co., being desirous that the debenture holders should exchange their debentures for fully paid preference shares in the English co., the committee called a meeting of the debenture holders, at which a special resolution to accept such preference shares in lieu of their debentures was passed by the necessary majority. Certain debenture holders who did not attend the meeting dissented from the arrangement, & brought an action against the American co. to recover interest on their debentures, which was ultimately decided in favour of the dissenting debenture holders by the Ct. of Appeal on the ground that a power to compromise rights presupposed some dispute about, or difficulty in, enforcing them, & there being no evidence of any such dispute or difficulty, there was nothing to bring the power to compromise into play. The dissenting debenture holders now brought an action against the trustee of their deed, the advisory committee, & the English co. for an account of their interest in arrear & unpaid; a declaration that by the trust deed the debenture holders were entitled to a first charge on the property comprised in the deed, & to have all necessary acts done to make such charge effectual; a declaration that the committee & the trustee of the deed had been guilty of wilful neglect & default in failing to procure & register a certain hypothecation of the land, & to put in force the powers of the deed; & for other relief. Defts. contended (inter alia) that plffs. were bound by the special resolution passed at the meeting of the debenture holders, but it was urged on behalf of plffs. that the judgment in the action against the American co. estopped the English co. in the present action from saying that plffs. were bound by the special resolution. The judge found upon the evidence that there were difficulties, not brought before the ct. in the former action, of such a substantial character in the way of the debenture holders enforcing their rights, that the majority of them might have bond fide considered it desirable to compromise those rights against the American co. & its property by passing the special resolution, & that there was no reason to doubt that the resolution was in fact honestly arrived at, & passed bond fide at the meeting by the necessary majority acting solely in what they believed to be the interests of the debenture holders:—Held: (1) the English co., not having been parties to the action against the American co., were prima facie not bound by the judgment, & although the English co., by reason of the covenant of indemnity given by them to the American co., were interested in assisting the latter co., & did assist them in the action brought against them, yet this did not put them in the position of defts. to that action, or estop them in the present action from contending that plffs. were bound by the special resolution; (2) with reference to the contention that the English co. were estopped by the judgment because they were privies in estate of the American co., that judgment could not have bound the land, & moreover, a prior purchaser of land could be estopped, as being privy in estate, by a judgment obtained in an action against the vendor commenced after the purchase; (3) although the English co. would be estopped under their covenant of indemnity from disputing the judgment as against the American co. suing them on that express covenant, there were no grounds in a totally different action like the present, to which the American co. were not even parties, for holding that the English co. were so estopped; (4) evidence being accordingly admissible as to the question whether the dissenting minority were bound by the special resolution, plffs. were bound by the special resolution, & the action must accordingly be dismissed with costs.—MERCANTILE INVESTMENT & GENERAL TRUST CO. v. RIVER PLATE TRUST, LOAN & AGENCY CO., [1894] 1 Ch. 578; 63 L. J. Ch. 366; 70 L. T. 131; 42 W. R. 365; 10 T. L. R. 186; 8 R. 791.

1190. ——— Not where object of suit personal remedy.—All civilised nations recognise the validity of maritime lien, & will enforce it when it has been declared by a foreign ct., but it is essential that it should appear from the proceedings of the foreign ct. that the object of the suit was the sale of the ship, & not a personal remedy against the captain or owners.

Plffs. brought an action & obtained judgment in the Tribunal of Commerce at Lisbon against the captain & owners of a British ship for damages for injury caused by a collision with plffs.' ship. The Portuguese cts. recognised no distinction between actions in personam & actions in rem. Defts.' ship having come into a British port, plffs. commenced an action in rem against the ship, claiming to enforce the judgment of the Portuguese ct. against it, & arrested the ship:—Held: the action in the Portuguese ct. was a personal action, & the writ in the present action & all proceedings under it must be set aside, the ct. having no jurisdiction to enforce a judgment in a personal action by proceedings in rem.—THE CITY OF MECCA (1881), 6 P. 1192. Conclusive in England—Founded on recognised law—& pronounced by competent tribunal.—

(1) If personal chattels are sold in a manner binding according to the law of the country in which they are disposed of, that disposition is binding in this country.

A cargo of deals was shipped on board a Prussian vessel by Russian merchants at Onega for an English firm carrying on business at Hull. The vessel struck on the rocks on the coast of Norway, but the cargo was landed safely. A survey was held, when the surveyors recommended, as best for all parties, that the ship & cargo should be sold, & the cargo was sold accordingly. It appeared that by the law of Norway, though the captain might not under such circumstances be able to justify the sale as between himself & the owners of the cargo, an innocent purchaser would have a good title to the property bought at such sale:—Held: the sale in Norway bound the property, & the goods having afterwards come to this country, the owner claiming under such sale had a good title to them as against the underwriters to whom the cargo had been abandoned.

(2) We are by no means prepared to agree with the Exch. Ct. in thinking the judgment of the Diocesan Ct. in Norway conclusive as a judgment in rem, nor are we satisfied that defts. in the present action were estopped by the judgment of that ct. or what was relied on as a judicial proceeding at the auction (CROMPTON, J.).

I admit, if there be a judgment in rem founded on a recognised law, & pronounced by a competent tribunal of the country where a movable chattel then is, that that judgment determines & changes the property everywhere & between all persons, as in the cases of a condemnation of goods in the Exch., or of a ship in a lawful Prize Ct. (2) Where a foreign ct., having competent jurisdiction in the matter, & honestly exercising it, delivers in a proceeding in rem a judgment, by which the sale of a chattel is ordered, the sale cannot afterwards be impeached in this country in an action against the purchaser, even though the person seeking to impeach it would by the law of this country have a preferential title to the chattel here.

A ship was, while in the port of an English colony, repaired & furnished with necessaries for the voyage. The captain drew on his owner for the amount due. The bill was never accepted. The ship sailed on its prescribed voyage, & before reaching England entered a French port. The bill was indorsed to a French subject, who sued the captain on it, & obtained in the Tribunal de Commerce a judgment against him, but the judgment freed him from personal arrest & declared the debt privileged on the ship, having priority over others. The ship was taken possession of by the French authorities under this judgment. While the ship was on its voyage, & before its arrival in the French port, the owner had executed a mtge. of the ship to a creditor. Neither the original owner nor the mtgee. was in any way personally cited in the action. The ship could not be actually sold till the Civil Tribunal of the district had confirmed the original judgment. It was confirmed, after the original owner & his assignee, he having in the meantime become bkpt., had been cited before the Civil Tribunal, & that ct. disregarded the opinion of an English lawyer as to what would be the relative rights of the holder of a bill of exchange & the holder of a bill of sale of the ship. The assignee of the mtge. afterwards instituted before the Civil Tribunal a process in the nature of a replevy of the ship, but failed in the process, & the ship was sold:—Held: there had been a judgment in rem in the French ct., & the title of the purchaser of the ship, an Englishman, could not afterwards be disturbed in this country.

1198. — — — — —.]—Where a foreign ct. having competent jurisdiction in the matter & honestly exercising it, delivers in a proceeding in rem a judgment by which a chattel within its jurisdiction is ordered to be sold & the proceeds to be divided among persons claiming interests in or liens upon the chattel, according to a certain order of priority, a person in England receiving a share of the proceeds under such a judgment cannot be declared by an English ct. a trustee of such share for another person, whether the latter was a party to the proceedings in the foreign ct. or not, even though he have a preferential title to the chattel in question according to English law of which title the person receiving the share of the proceeds had notice when he made his claim in the foreign ct.

Pltf. co. was the owner & pltf., L., was the first mtgee. of a ship, the M., when such ship was shipping cargo at B. While shipping cargo at B. the master of the M. was induced by fraud to sign bills of lading for goods which in fact were never put on board. The M. sailed for Hamburg. During the voyage a petition to wind up pltf. co. was presented, & a winding-up order was made on the same day as that on which the M. reached Hamburg. Meanwhile the false bills of lading were indorsed over to defts. for value without notice of the fraud. By German law the signing of a bill of lading by the master gives a lien for the value of the goods in it on the ship & freight, which takes precedence of all other liens & charges, save charges for wages & necessaries during the voyage. Defts. on the M.'s arrival at Hamburg had her together with her freight arrested. An action was commenced in the German cts., to which pltf., L., was, & pltf. co. was not, a party. In the result the German ct. ordered the M. to be sold, & the proceeds & her freight distributed according to a certain order of priority under which defts. received a share, & neither of pltf.s. received anything. Pltf.s. brought an action to recover the money paid to defts. as money received by defts. on their behalf:—Held: the judgment, under which defts. had received the money, being a judgment in rem, settled finally & as against everyone the interests subsisting in the ship, & it could not be reviewed in an English ct., & practically set aside by making defts. trustees of what they had received under it for pltf.s.—*MINNA CRAIG S.S. 1202. General rule.]—Although the Ct. of K. B. cannot execute sentences of a foreign ct., inasmuch as a different law prevails, the Ct. of Admty. can execute the sentence of a foreign admty. ct. when final & not interlocutory, & it is accustomed so to do because all admty. cts. in Europe proceed on the same law, viz., the civil law.—JURADO v. 1204. — Foreign court sitting under commission from belligerent Power—In neutral country.]—The sentence of a ct. of admty., sitting under a commission from a belligerent Power, in a neutral country, will not be recognised in our cts. ; & that is to be considered a neutral country for this purpose, in which the forms of an independent neutral govt. are preserved, although the belligerent may have such a body of troops stationed there, as in reality to possess the sovereign authority.—DONALDSON v. 1206. Requisites of conclusiveness—Grounds of condemnation must be apparent on face of sentence —& free from doubt & ambiguity.]—The sentence of a foreign ct. of admty., condemning a vessel for attempting to violate a blockade, is not conclusive, unless the fact upon which the condemnation proceeded appears, upon the face of the sentence, free from doubt & ambiguity ; it cannot be collected by mere inference, nor can it be left in uncertainty whether the vessel was condemned upon one ground, which would be a just ground of condemnation by the law of nations, or on another ground, which would only amount to a breach of the municipal regulations of the condemning country.

A ship was destined to a port which was notified to be under blockade :—Held : the voyage was not illegal in its inception, as the vessel might have sailed for the purpose of inquiring whether the blockade existed.—DALGLEISH v. HODGSON (1831), 1208. — — — — .]—The sentence of a foreign ct. of admty., condemning a ship or goods as lawful prize, is not conclusive in the cts. of this country as to the ground of condemnation, unless stated upon the face of it without ambiguity. It is competent to our cts. to examine the sentence carefully to see whether it proceeds on that which would be a just ground of condemnation by the law of nations, or on another ground which would amount only to a breach of the municipal regulations of the condemning country.—HOBBS v. 1212. — — — — — —.]—If it can be discerned on the face of the sentence of a foreign ct. of prize that the ct. condemned on the ground that the property was enemy's property, the sentence is conclusive evidence in the cts. here that the property was not neutral, although it appears on the face of the sentence that the prize ct. attained that conclusion through the medium of rules of evidence and rules of presumption established only by the particular ordinances of their own country, & not admissible on general principles.—*BOLTON v. k. — Injunction by foreign court—No bar to action for specific performance.]—To an action claiming specific performance of an agreement, or in the alternative, damages, the defence was pleaded that after the making of the contract an injunction was granted by a foreign ct. enjoining deft. from transferring property of any description during the pendency of an action brought against him in such foreign ct.:—Held: there was no defence to the action.—DE VENNE v. trespass under the process of a foreign ct. it seems that the plea should be formed in analogy to similar justifications under the process of our inferior cts., but at any rate a plea which only states that the ct. abroad was governed by foreign laws, that the property seized was within its jurisdiction, that certain legal proceedings were had, according to such foreign laws, against the property in question in such ct., having competent jurisdiction in that behalf, et taliter processum, etc., that deft. was ordered by the ct., having competent authority in that behalf, to seize the property, is bad, as being too general, & not giving pltf. notice whether deft. justified as an officer of the ct., or party to the cause, or of what nature the charge was, or by whom instituted, or what the order of seizure was, whether absolute or quousque, etc.—COLLETT v. 1240. Proceedings & judgment need not be set out.—Judgment was given by competent tribunals in France against G. in an action brought by him against persons with whom he had been connected in a loan transaction, for the purpose of obtaining from them an account & payment of his share of the profits in the loan. He afterwards filed a bill in the Ct. of Ch. against some of same persons, & for same purposes, charging that the proceedings & judgment of the French tribunals were contrary to justice & were not final & conclusive, & also that subsequently to the date of the judgment further profits accrued to defts. from the loan, & he claimed a right to a share of them :—Held: a plea of the foreign proceedings & judgment, set forth in substance & effect, filed by defts. to the bill, supported by averments that the matters in issue in the foreign tribunals were the same as the matters put in issue by the bill, covered the whole of the matters comprised in the bill, & was a sufficient answer thereto, & it was not necessary to set forth the proceedings & judgment at length.—RICARDO v. GARCIA (1845), 12 Cl. & Fin. 368; 9 Jur. 1019; 8 E. R. 1450, H. L.; revsq. S. C. sub nom. GARCIA v. RICARDO (1844), 14 Sim. 265.

SECT. 6.—ENFORCEMENT OF FOREIGN JUDGMENTS.

1241. SECT. 7.—EXTENSION OF JUDGMENTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—OF ENGLISH, IRISH AND SCOTTISH SUPERIOR COURTS.

A. Under Judgments Extension Act, 1868 (c. 54).

1242. To what judgments Act applicable—Judgment for debt, damages or expenses—Not Scottish decree of sequestration.—There is no authority under which an order of a Scottish ct., not being a judgment for debt, damages or expenses, within Judgments Extension Act, 1868, s. 3, or otherwise expressly provided for by statute, can be enrolled in the High Ct. in England. The enrolment of an interim act & decree of the Scottish Ct. of Session sequestrating the estate & effects of a Scottish railway co., which had been enrolled as of course in the High Ct., was therefore vacated, & proceedings in the High Ct. founded on such enrolment were set aside.—Re DUNDEE & SUBURBAN RY. CO. (1888), 58 L. J. Ch. 5; 59 L. T. 720; 37 W. R. 50; 5 T. L. R. 39.

1243. — Not order in winding up.—A domiciled Frenchman resident in Scotland brought an action against a co. in England, but all proceedings in the action were stayed in consequence of the co. being ordered to be wound up, & the Frenchman carried in his claim to prove in the winding up of the co. An order was then made in

1. To what judgments Act applicable—Judgment of Liverpool district registry of High Court.—Held:—a certificate of a judgment of the High Ct. of Justice, Q.B. Div., Liverpool District Registry, could be registered in the Books of Council & Session in terms of Sect. 2 of above Act.—ENGLISH'S COASTING & SHIPPING CO., LTD. v. BRITISH FINANCE CO., LTD. (1886), 14 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 220; 24 Sc. L. R. 167.—SCOT.

m. — When certificate of English court defective in form.—A judgment obtained in an inferior ct. of record in England was removed into Q.B. there, & a certificate, purporting to be under above Act, but omitting the material allegation that the judgment was obtained "after appearance" or "after service," was signed by Q.B. master & was registered by Master of C.P. at Dublin. The ct., acting under s. 4 of above Act, set aside the registration, & all subsequent proceedings founded upon it.—PART v. SCANNELL

n. Effect of registration of judgment.—A certificate of an English judgment had been entered in C.P. in Ireland pursuant to above Act. On motion to set aside the judgment entered in C.P., on the ground that the English judgment, on which the certificate was founded, was irregularly entered up as a final judgment, while demurrers to some of the pleas were still undecided: Held: (1) there was no judgment of the Irish ct., but merely an

On a motion to discharge the order made in chambers:—Held: although he would not have been required to give security for the costs of his action, because the judgment in an action in any division of the High Ct. could be enforced in the Scottish cts. by virtue of Judgments Extension Act, 1868, yet, as an order made in a claim in winding-up proceedings was not a judgment enforceable in Scotland under that Act, he must give security for the costs of his claim in the winding up.—Re HOWE MACHINE CO., FONTAINE'S CASE (1889), 41 Ch. 1244. Effect of enrolment—New cause of action.]

—An action having been commenced in Scotland against an administratrix to recover a debt which was barred by Stat. of Limitations in England, an action for the administration of the intestate's estate was commenced in England, & an order for administration made. Judgment for pltf. by default was afterwards given in the Scottish action. The Scottish creditor then sought to prove his debt in the administration action, but the chief clerk disallowed the claim, as being barred by Stat. of Limitations. The administratrix afterwards obtained an order from the Scottish ct. recalling the judgment by default, & giving her leave to defend. The action was then heard, & judgment given against her, which was then registered in England under Judgments Extension Act, 1868:—Held: (1) the Scottish creditor was entitled to prove in the administration action as a creditor for the amount of the judgment & costs; (2) it was not necessary that the chief clerk's certificate should be varied, as the Scottish judgment when registered under the Act created a new cause of action which had not been adjudicated upon.—Re LOW, BLAND v. LOW, [1894] 1 Ch. 147; 63 L. J. Ch. 60; 70 L. T. 57; 10 T. L. R. 106; 38 Sol. Jo. 78; 7 R. 346, C. A.

Annotation:—Consd. Re Bankruptcy Notice, [1898] 1 Q. B. 383.

1245. Mode of enforcing judgments registered—Not procedure by judgment summons.]—The procedure by judgment summons under Debtors Act, 1869 (c. 62), is not execution of the judgment debt within Judgments Extension Act, 1868, s. 4, & consequently an English ct. has no jurisentry of record of the certificate of an English judgment; (2) the certificate of the proper officer in England was conclusive on such motion that there was such final judgment; (3) a subsequent order of the officer in England, staying all proceedings on the English judgment while the demurrers remained undisposed of, had no application to the registry of the certificate in Ireland, which had been regularly done at the date of the order.—BAILEY v. WELPLY (1869), 1 R. 4 C. L. 243.—IR.

o. — Under Judgments Extension Act, 1860.]—In a suspension of a charge upon a decree of Q.B. in Ireland, obtained against parties domiciled in Scotland, & registered in terms of above Act:—Held: (1) the ct. could not competently entertain any question on the merits of the case; (2) it was competent to sist process for the purpose of enabling complainers to present an appln. to the Irish ct. in arrest of judgment.—*WOTHERSPOON v. q. — Registration as mortgage.]—An English judgment extended to Ireland under above Act can be registered as a judgment mtge., & the omission from the affidavit of judgment, made for the purpose of such registration, of the costs of obtaining & registering in Ireland the certificate of the entry of the judgment does not invalidate the registration of the judgment mtge.—Re CLELAND'S ESTATE, [1909] 1 I. By an order of the L. C., dated Aug. 10, it was ordered that the order of the Irish ct., which had been exemplified to the English ct., should be enrolled in the English High Ct., & this was done on Aug. 28. Deft. was in England:—Held: (1) the ct. had under Crown Debts Act, 1801 (c. 90), s. 16, power to make the order asked for; (2) time was given to deft., who appeared in person, to apply to the Irish ct. to discharge the order of May 7, which he alleged to have been irregularly obtained.—*NEWELL v. An appln. was made for leave to appoint a sequestrator over the estates of deft. in Ireland:—Held: the order could only be enforced by process of attachment prescribed by the statute, & although that remedy was not available against deft. by reason of his being a peer, there was no jurisdiction to issue a sequestration to enforce obedience to the order.—*KILWORTH v. A motion was subsequently made for leave to issue a writ of attachment against S. for contempt of ct. in not obeying the order of Mar. 27, 1899:—Held: as the order of Mar. 27, 1899, had not been served upon S. in Ireland, & no leave had been obtained to serve that order upon him out of the jurisdiction, there had been no disobedience thereof, & the motion for leave to issue a writ of attachment must be refused.—Re SYNGE (1901), 85 L. 1280. Plaintiff suing in own right—Obligee of bond—Obligee attainted & bond confiscated by foreign State.]—A. & B., being inhabitants of the United States of America, while those States were colonies of Great Britain, & before the war broke out between the two countries, B. executed a bond to A. During the war, after the declaration of independence by the Congress, both parties were attainted, their property confiscated & vested in the respective States, of which they were inhabitants, by the legislative Acts of those States, & a fund was provided for payment of the debts of B.:—Held: (1) A. might maintain an action on the bond against B. in England; (2) the several Acts of Attainder & Confiscation, passed by sovereign independent States, did not disable A. from suing, nor exempt B. from being sued in England; (3) it was not a good plea in bar of an action at law, that an ample fund was provided out of the effects of B. for the payment of his debts, to which A. might & ought to have resorted, & been paid, though it might be a ground for relief in equity.

(4) If the penal laws of a foreign country do not in themselves import a personal disability to sue in this, neither do they by divesting the property of a person in that country, take away his right of action in England. The subject-matter of this action being a bond, it could only be sued for according to the laws of England relating to bonds; supposing therefore the right of pltf. to be gone, that could not be set up in bar of the action, which must be brought in the name of the present pltf., whoever might be in possession of the bond, since a chose in action, is not assignable at law, & debt. could not plead that the obligee had assigned it. I would even go further & say, a right to recover any other specific property, such as plate or jewels, in this country, would not be taken away by the criminal laws of another. The penal laws of foreign countries are strictly local, & affect nothing more than they can reach & can be seized by virtue of their authority; a fugitive who passes hither, comes with all his transitory rights; he may recover money held for his use, stock, obligations & the like; & cannot be affected in this country, by proceedings against him in that which he has left, beyond the limits of which such proceedings do not extend (LORD LOUGHBOROUGH).—FOLLIOTT v. OGDEN (1789), 1 Hy. The writ will issue on a balance of account sworn by the deponent to be due to the best of his belief, but, if the mode of computing the account be mentioned, & it appears to comprise unascertained sums, it will not be granted. The ct. will always hear a debt. moving to discharge the writ; but it will only enquire, whether there is reasonable ground to suppose that pltf. will succeed in the suit. Exemption from arrest for a debt of same nature by the laws of Russia is not a sufficient ground for discharging the writ, where one of the parties is an Englishman & was resident in this country.

A debt. cannot rely on a change of residence to a foreign country so as to avoid the law of arrest, to which he was subject in Ont. at the time he incurred the debt upon which the action is brought, when that change of residence has been effected by a fraudulent flight to avoid arrest.—*KERSTERMAN v. 1. Right of arrest by Canadian law—Debt contracted abroad—Debtor absconding from own country without intention of returning.—The general rule that it is against the policy of the law to permit one foreigner to follow another into Ont., & arrest him for a debt contracted abroad, is limited to cases in which the debtor is here on temporary business, & is about to return to his own country. Where the debtor has absconded from his own country to Ont., & does not intend returning, or intends to go to some other country, the creditor may follow & arrest him in Ont.—*BUTLER v. SUB-SECT. 3.—PAYMENT INTO COURT.

1303. In action in England—Suit pending in foreign court against same fund—Possibility of foreign court ordering payment into court also.]—An assurance co. having its principal office in Edinburgh, & a branch office in London, issued a policy on which was indorsed a memorandum that the money to become payable thereunder should be payable to the exors., administrators or assigns of the assured at the office of the co. in London. On the death of the assured the policy money being claimed by the exor., who had proved the will in Scotland, & by pltf. as equitable mtgees. of the policy, the co. commenced an action in Scotland, in order to have the conflicting claims adjudicated upon, & subsequently pltf. filed the bill in this suit against the co. & the exor. of the assured. On a summons taken out by pltf. that the co. might pay the policy money into ct.:—Held: the co. having admitted they had no interest in the money, must pay it into ct. without being indemnified by pltf. from having to pay it into ct. in Scotland, although the practice of the Scottish cts. might be to require this to be done, notwithstanding the payment of same sum into an English ct.—COOK v. SCOTTISH EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY (1872), 26 L. T. 571.

SUB-SECT. 6.—LIEN.

Precedence of liens.]—See No. 1308, post.

SUB-SECT. 7.—SET-OFF.

1306. In action in England—For freight—Right under foreign law to set off value of cargo not delivered.]—A consignee of goods, or an indorsee of a bill of lading, has no right to have the value of missing goods deducted from the freight payable in respect of the goods delivered. This being the general law, it cannot be altered by a universal practice of merchants, which is not confined to any particular place or trade, to have the value of such goods deducted from the freight.

The law of a foreign country, entitling the consignee to reduce the claim against him for freight by the value of goods put on board & lost, but which amounts to an allowance by way of set-off, & not to an extinguishment of the claim for freight, is matter of procedure only, & does not apply to an action for freight brought in this country against the consignee.—MEYER v. DRESSER (1864), 16 C. B. N. S. 646; 33 L. J. C. P. 289; 10 L. T. 612; 2 Mar. L. C. 27; 143 E. R. 1280; sub nom. MAYER v. DRESSER, 12 W. R. 983.

SUB-SECT. 8.—EXECUTION.

1307. Governed by lex fori—Garnishee proceedings—Not recognised by law of nations.]—A garnishee order should not be made to attach a debt due from the garnishee to the judgment debtor where payment under the order will not be a valid discharge to the garnishee as against the judgment debtor of the amount paid under the order.

Where a foreign corpn. having its head office abroad & a branch office in London owed a debt contracted abroad to a foreign resident abroad who became a debtor on a judgment recovered against him in England:—Held: a garnishee order should not be made to attach the debt due from the foreign corpn. to the judgment debtor, because that debt would still remain due & payable abroad notwithstanding payment in England under a garnishee order, on the ground that garnishee proceedings are a process of execution & part of the lex fori & as such not recognised by the law of nations.—MARTIN v. NADEL, [1906] 2 K. B. 26; 75 L. J. K. B. 620; 95 L. T. 16; 54 W. R. 525; 22 T. L. R. 561, C. A.

SECT. 4.—PRIORITIES OF CREDITORS.

1308. Governed by lex fori—Bond on ship—Wages of foreign seamen.]—(1) Questions of the precedence of liens upon ships are to be determined by the lex fori.

(2) Seamen's wages earned before the giving of a bond are to be preferred to the bond.

PART XVI. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 7.

1. In action in United Provinces—Debt barred by limitation in United Provinces—Not barred by local law.]—In a suit filed against him in the U.P., deft. claimed to set off a debt, which, though it would have been barred by limitation in the U.P., was not barred according to the local law applicable thereto:—Held: the set-off was admissible.—BACHCHAN LAL v. BANARSI DAS (1913), I. L. R. 35 All. 238.—IND.

PART XVI. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 8.

m. Application of lex loci contractus.]—A contract was made in Vermont between persons domiciled in that state:—Held: (1) the consequences attached to the contract by the laws of Vermont must be applied by Canadian cts.; (2) one of the consequences of the contract being that the right of execution & sale of property should cease on the appointment of receivers, a judgment creditor could not be allowed to proceed to execute his judgment against such property, merely because it had passed from the territorial jurisdiction of the ct. of Vermont, into that of the cts. of Quebec.—BARKER v. CENTRAL VERMONT RY. CO. (1898), Q. R. 13 S. C. 2.—CAN.

n. Right to arrest property of foreigner—Jurisdiction founded by arrest.]—An incola is entitled to an arrest of property found within the Transvaal & belonging to a peregrinus for the purpose of founding jurisdiction in an action to be instituted for the performance of a contract entered into with such peregrinus beyond the Transvaal, & which had to be performed outside that country.—MIDDELVEI SYNDICATE v. TUCKER (1897), 4 O. R. 10.—S. AF.

o. ———.]—An incola of the Transvaal is entitled to attach ad fundandam jurisdictionem the property of a peregrinus locally situated, & where an applicant shows a prima facie cause of action the ct. cannot refuse an order for such attachment. The arrest itself, under such circumstances, founds jurisdiction, & no further ratio jurisdictionis need be present.—LECOMTE v. W. & B. SYNDICATE OF MADAGASCAR, [1905] T. S. 696.—S. AF.

Bond was given on ship, freight & cargo, ship & freight being insufficient to pay same, & suit was brought by seamen against ship & freight for wages. The owners of the cargo were allowed to appear & defend:—Held: seamen entitled as their claim was superior to that of bondholder, & therefore to that of owners of cargo deriving through him.—THE UNION (1860), 1 Lush. 128; 30 L. 1309. — Administration of debtor's assets in England—Right of creditor having obtained priority abroad by registration.]—Where a debt is contracted by an Englishman in a foreign country the provisions of the lex loci contractus do not avail to entitle the creditor to payment of his debt out of equitable assets administered in this country in priority to other creditors.

An Englishman residing in Venezuela executed an instrument to secure repayment to G. of £1,600, & G. afterwards registered the instrument in the form prescribed by the law of Venezuela, & by virtue of such registration became entitled, according to that law, to be paid his debt out of the general assets of the debtor in priority to other creditors:—Held: a fund in this country constituting equitable assets of the debtor must be divided among the creditors without regard to any such priority.—PARDO v. BINGHAM (1868), L. R. 6 Eq. 485; subsequent proceedings (1869), 4 Ch. App. 735.

SUB-SECT. 1.—STAY OF PROCEEDINGS.

A. Where no foreign Suit instituted.

1310. Stayed if vexatious & oppressive—Cause of action arising abroad—Parties domiciled abroad—Action of transitory nature in England.]—The ct. will stay an action of a transitory nature, brought within the jurisdiction, in respect of a cause of action arising out of the jurisdiction, if satisfied that no injustice will be done thereby to pltf., & that deft. would be subject to such injustice in defending the action as would amount to vexation & oppression, to which he would not be subjected if an action were brought, in another & accessible ct., where the cause of action arose.—LOGAN v. BANK OF SCOTLAND (No. 2), [1906] 1 K. B. 141; 75 L. J. K. B. 218; 94 L. T. 153; 54 W. R. 270; 22 T. L. R. 187, C. A.

1311. — Liability to be determined according to foreign law.]—In 1902 a deed of separation was executed in India between pltf. & her husband, of which deft. was the trustee. Pltf. was the wife of an American domiciled in India, & deft. then & still was a solr. practising at Madras. The husband made default in paying the allowance which by the deed he had covenanted to pay, & the complaint of pltf. against deft. was that he had wilfully or negligently delayed taking proceedings, & had so wilfully or negligently conducted proceedings against her husband that she had been unable to recover the moneys due to her in respect of the allowance. In Oct. 1906, deft. happened to be in England on a holiday, & on the day before he left for India he was served with the writ in the action. At the date of the issue of the writ pltf. was temporarily in England, but left shortly afterwards for America, where she still remained. Pltf. knew of her alleged cause of action when she was resident in India. On an application by deft. to dismiss or stay the action on the ground that it was an abuse of the process of the ct.:—Held: (1) inasmuch as the alleged cause of action arose in India, & the liability, if any, of deft. would have to be determined according to the law of India, & upon the evidence of Indian witnesses, the proper place for the action to be brought was India; (2) that the action was not brought bond fide in England; (3) the injustice to deft. in bringing the action in this country was so great that the ct. would not allow the action to proceed; (4) the fact that pltf. happened to be in England at the date of the issue of the writ was not in itself sufficient to preclude the ct. from dismissing the action.—EGBERT v. SHORT, [1907] 2 Ch. 205; 76 L. J. Ch. 520; 97 L. T. 90; 23 T. L. R. 558; 51 Sol. Jo. 499. Annotation:—As to (3) Apprvd. Re Norton's Settlement, Norton v. Norton, [1908] 1 Ch. 471.

1312. — Defendants domiciled in England but ordinarily resident abroad—Action brought to obtain undue advantage.]—An action was commenced in England, in which pltf., a married woman, claimed an account under a settlement made in India on the occasion of her marriage in 1897, & she further alleged a wilful default by defts., one of whom, pltf.'s husband, had been appointed a trustee of the settlement by a subsequent deed, the other two being the original trustees of the settlement. Defts. were all domiciled in England, but were ordinarily resident in India, pltf.'s husband being a barrister practising in Calcutta, & the other defts. holding appointments in the Indian Civil Service. The property comprised in the settlement was in India. From 1902 down to the commencement of the action pltf. was living in France apart from her husband. She then came to England, where, as she alleged, she intended thenceforth to reside permanently. The husband & another of defts. were served with the writ during their temporary presence in England. They applied to stay all proceedings in the action on the ground that it was an abuse of the process of the ct.:—Held: pltf. had in fact brought the action in England instead of in India, not for any bond fide purpose, but in order to obtain an undue advantage over defts., & the continuance of the proceedings in England would necessarily be productive of injustice to defts., & the action ought to be stayed.—Re NORTON'S SETTLEMENT, NORTON v. NORTON, [1908] 1 Ch. 471; 77 L. J. Ch. 312; 99 L. T. 257, C. A.

B. During Pendency of foreign Suit.

1313. General rule.]—Where two or more actions are pending between same parties in respect of same subject-matter, the ct. has jurisdiction to stay proceedings in all but one of them on the ground that the concurrent litigation is vexatious, even where one of the actions is in a foreign ct., & judgment has not been obtained in any of the actions. But where one action is in a foreign ct., the party applying for a stay of proceedings must make out a special case for relief, whereas, where all the litigation is in England, or, semble, in the

1314. — Suits relating to land in colonies.]—

This litigation is very unfortunate, & in my view it raises questions of wider importance than those affecting merely pltf. & defts. It raises a question as to the mode in which a ct. in this country ought to have regard to proceedings dealing with same subject-matter in a ct. in a British colony possessing an appeal to the Privy Council in this country. Before dealing with the facts of this case, I desire to say that I think every English ct. ought to be extremely careful not to infringe upon the jurisdiction of a colonial ct. in a proceeding commenced before any proceedings were commenced in England relating to land in the colony (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—JOPSON v. JAMES, No. 1320, post.

1315. — Burden of proof.]—(1) Two parties having cross-claims arising out of same transactions for substantially same relief, one commenced an action in England & the other an action in Scotland:—Held: the ct. will not restrain pltf. in either action from proceeding with his action unless it is satisfied that the continued prosecution thereof would be oppressive or vexatious.

(2) It is incumbent on the party seeking to restrain the other to show that the proceeding he complains of is oppressive or vexatious, & that the party instituting it can gain no advantage therefrom.—COHEN v. ROTHFIELD, [1919] 1 K. B. 410; 88 L. J. K. B. 468; 120 L. T. 434; 63 Sol. Jo. 192, C. A.

1320 i. Similar relief claimed—In English court—Acquiescence in English proceedings—Jurisdiction of Scottish courts.]—A Scottish co. having agents & offices in England brought an action in Scotland against the representatives of a former agent in England to recover a debt claimed by them & to obtain a security upon the estate of the deceased in Scotland. A decree for the administration of the testator's estate having been made in England, the English Ct. of Ch. granted an injunction to restrain the co. from continuing the action in Scotland, but upon appeal the order was discharged. The co. then brought another action in Scotland, & another suit having been instituted against the co. in England, in which they appeared, pursuers in that action alleging that the co. had acquiesced in the English proceedings, asked for an injunction to restrain the action in Scotland, but it was refused:—Held: there was no sufficient reason for sisting proceedings in order that the question might be tried in the Ct. of Ch. in England as the more proper & convenient forum.—CARRON Co. v. The Honduras firm employed the London firm as their agents under an agreement by which B.'s share in the profits of the Honduras firm was to be brought into account as between the two firms to the credit of the English firm. The Honduras partnership was dissolved, & B. obtained a decree in Honduras for taking the partnership accounts. Before those accounts had been fully taken, M. & C. brought this action in England against the London firm for an account of the dealings between the two firms, alleging debts to have made improper profits in their agency. Defts. denied having made improper profits, & by counterclaim asked to have the accounts of the Honduras firm taken:—Held: though, if M. & C. had not brought this action, B. would not, after obtaining a decree in Honduras, have been allowed to carry on another action here for same purpose, still as the two actions were so closely connected that neither of them could be finally wound up independently of the other, B. ought not to be prevented from proceeding with his counterclaim so as to be in a position to ask at the trial of this action for such a decree as might be right, having regard to the then position of the Honduras action.—*MUTRIE v. She propounded the will, & C., the brother of testator, entered a caveat & filed pleas in which he treated the will as that of a domiciled Englishman. He afterwards filed a bill in Ch. to restrain pltf. from intermeddling in the affairs of deceased, in which he showed that he was aware of the facts on which he now relied, as showing testator to be a domiciled Frenchman. He afterwards instituted a suit in France to set aside the will, on the ground that testator was a domiciled Frenchman, & eight months after the Ch. proceedings, moved the ct. here to stay proceedings, on the ground that the questions were the same in both cts., & if the ct. would not stay proceedings, then he moved to amend his pleas by adding one to the effect that testator was a domiciled Frenchman:—Held: the questions were not the same in both cts., for in England the assumption was that testator was a domiciled Englishman, & in France that he was a domiciled Frenchman.—DUPREZ v. VERET (1868), L. R. 1 P. & D. 583; 38 L. J. P. & M. 5; 19 L. T. 525; 33 J. P. 118; 17 W. R. 157.

1327. Differences in procedure—Defendants bound to answer interrogatories in English suit.—A., an Englishman domiciled in France, entered into a contract in France with B., a Frenchman, for carrying out jointly certain mercantile undertakings. In the course of the transactions large sums of money came into the hands of C. & D., foreign merchants in business in London. A. filed a bill against B., C. & D., alleging that, under the contract with B. he was entitled to participate in the profits of the undertaking, & praying for an account from C. & D. of the money in their hands, & that they might be restrained from handing it over to B. Defts. moved to stay all further proceedings in the suit pending certain proceedings in the French cts. instituted by A. against B., in which a construction would be put upon the French contract:—Held: there being portions of the relief sought as to which defts. were bound to answer, the motion, could not be sustained & must be refused with costs.—WILSON v. FERRAND (1871), L. R. 13 Eq. 362; 26 L. T. 387.

had been entered by consent. Defts. at the same time were proceeding in Ont. to set aside the judgment. Defts. were acting in good faith in their proceedings, their expenses would be very great, & would be duplicated if the action in Man. proceeded. Defts. applied for a stay of proceedings until determination of the litigation in Ont.:—Held: the proceedings should be stayed upon terms, securing as far as possible pltf.'s claim, & upon defts. agreeing to abide by the result of the Ont. litigation.—*CHARLEBOIS v. against a firm of French merchants for the delivery of the cargoes of certain ships, or in the alternative for damages, & for an injunction & receiver. At the commencement of the action the ships were in British waters, but they had since been removed by the direction of defts. to ports in France, & the cargoes had been taken possession of by defts. Proceedings had been instituted by plffs. in a French ct. for recovery of the cargoes. The English action comprised a claim for the cargo of one ship which was not claimed in the French action. Defts. moved that plffs. might be ordered to elect whether they would proceed with the English action or with the French proceedings:—Held: the motion must be refused.—*PERUVIAN GUANO CO. v. 1334. — Not mere hardship & inconvenience.]—The cts. in England will not, unless there is equity to justify them in so doing, interfere to restrain, by injunction, proceedings taken in a foreign ct. Mere hardship or inconvenience is not sufficient to justify such interference.—FLETCHER v. RODGERS (1878), 27 W. R. 97, C. A.

B. During Pendency of Suit.

1335. General rule—Discretion of court in exercising jurisdiction.]—The House of Lords had dissolved an injunction, granted by the Master of the Rolls, to restrain a Scottish co., having agents & property within the jurisdiction, from proceeding in the Ct. of Session in Scotland to recover a debt against the estate of a testator, who had died, domiciled in England, but leaving assets in England & Scotland, which were being administered in a suit in this country, to which the co. was not made a party. The exors. afterwards instituted another suit in this country, against the co., for an account of all dealings between the co. & testator, & then applied for a similar injunction in both suits:—Held: an injunction must be refused, with costs, on the ground that the question was concluded by the judgment of the House of Lords.

Semble: there must be a very strong case to induce the ct. to restrain a foreigner, domiciled in another country, from proceeding to obtain payment of debts according to the law of the country in which he is domiciled.—MACLAREN v. STANTON, MACLAREN v. CARRON CO. (1855), 26 L. J. Ch. 332; 26 L. T. O. S. 191; 2 Jur. N. S. 49, L. C. & L. J. J.; affg. S. C. sub nom. STANTON v. CARRON CO., 21 Beav. 152.

1336. — Balance of convenience.]—When a foreigner has appeared to an action in an English ct., he gives jurisdiction to the English ct. to restrain him from proceeding to litigate the same subject matter in the cts. of his own country, but it is a matter of discretion, & the ct. ought only to exercise this jurisdiction to prevent double vexation.

The validity of a will made in Italy, in 1872, by an Englishwoman who had married an Italian, & was domiciled in Italy at the time of her death, was in question. An action was pending in England between deceased's brother, who, as plff., sought to prove a will made in England in 1865, & her husband, who, as deft., sought to establish

z. Receivers appointed by foreign court—Company incorporated & carrying on business abroad—Attachment of property in Nova Scotia.]—Deft. co. was incorporated in New Jersey & never carried on business in Nova Scotia by itself or any agent. Proceedings were taken by plffs. at Halifax against defts. as absent or absconding debtors to recover for goods supplied in Halifax, & certain property was attached as the property of the co. The day before these proceedings were commenced, an order was made by the Ch. Ct. of New Jersey against deft. co., in a suit brought in that ct., appointing receivers of deft. co. with full power to take possession of all the property of the co.:—Held: setting aside the attachment & return, that by the proceedings in that ct. of New Jersey all the property of the co. had become vested in the receivers, & could not thereafter be attached as the property of the co.—*PICKFORD v. the will made in 1872. The husband then commenced litigation in the Italian cts. to obtain a declaration as to the validity of the will of 1872. All the witnesses as to the validity of the will were in Italy; but the property to be affected by it was all in England:—Held: the ct., in the exercise of its discretion, would not restrain deft. from proceeding with his litigation in Italy.—DAWKINS v. SIMONETTI (1880), 50 L. J. P. 30; 44 L. T. 266; 29 W. R. 228, C. A.

1837. — Bonâ fide action in court of concurrent jurisdiction not restrained—Scottish Court of Session.—The Ct. of Ch., though it has jurisdiction, will not of necessity grant an injunction to restrain proceedings in the Ct. of Session in Scotland, a ct. of competent jurisdiction.—KENNEDY v. CASSILLIS (EARL) (1818), 2 Swan. 313; 36 E. R. 635, L. C.

1838. — — — — —.—Whether a ct. having ample authority to decide the matter brought before it, should await the expected adjudication of another tribunal having only similar authority, is merely a question for the exercise of judicial discretion. If there be any want of power in the ct. it may be well that the proceedings should be stayed in order that some other ct. which has the requisite power may adjudicate.

I am far from saying that there might not be cases in which a proceeding in a foreign ct. might be regarded as a satisfactory way of ascertaining the legal rights of parties; & the Scottish cts. might very properly desire to ascertain the result of the foreign proceeding before determining the claim brought before themselves. But I can hardly conceive a greater miscarriage of justice than it would be, after a suit had been fought out to the end, if your Lordships were now to turn round upon a point of discretion & say the Ct. of Session must take into consideration what has been done in the English suit. There was no lack of materials in Scotland for the necessary purposes of justice (LORD SELBORNE).—PHOSPHATE SEWAGE CO. v. MOLLESON (1876), 1 App. Cas. 780, H. 1839. — Restrained if conducive to justice—Full justice unable to be done in foreign court.—Pltf., A., a domiciled Scotsman, through his stock-brokers in England, had various transactions for the feigned purchase & sale of shares & stock in railway & other cos., it was never intended that they should be completed by delivery of the stock, being merely time-bargains, a gambling for differences between the prices at which the shares or stock were nominally purchased & sold. The brokers obtained from A. a deposit of certain shares as security for any balance which might be due to them, & also stipulated for a bond or judge's order both in England & Scotland as a further security. Defts. rendered an account, & then sold the deposited shares, but as the proceeds did not discharge the balance due to them, they brought an action against pltf. in the Sheriff's Ct. in Scotland for the balance, & arrested his goods there, & a commission was issued for the purpose of taking evidence in England. A. then filed his bill in England, asking discovery & for an account, & an injunction to restrain defts. from proceeding with the action in Scotland, at the same time offering to pay what was due, & submitting all his property in Scotland, subject to the arrestments, to the jurisdiction of this ct.:—Held: (1) the illegality of the transaction could not be then considered, & it was no ground for stopping the proceedings in a foreign ct.; (2) from the allegation that evidence of the transactions could not, by the law of Scotland, be received in the Sheriff's Ct. from pltf. & defts., there was ground to suppose that complete justice could not be done there.—AINSLIE v. SIMS (1854), 23 L. J. Ch. 161; 21 L. T. O. S. 163.

1840. — — — — —.—If the circumstances of a case are such as would make it the duty of one ct. in this country to restrain a party from instituting proceedings in another ct. here, they will also warrant it in imposing on him a similar restraint with regard to proceedings in a foreign ct. The fact of a foreigner having property in this country, enables the ct. here to make effectual an injunction issued to him; but, especially in the case of a foreigner who seeks no assistance from the cts. here, the issuing of such injunction ought clearly to be shown to be required as conducive to justice. Where there is a plain equity in favour of an injunction, & the representatives of the real & personal property, who seek it are in this country, the ct. will grant it, & restrain proceedings in the cts. of a foreign country. In such a case the ct. will decide upon the consideration of all the circumstances, & require parties here to take or omit such steps in a foreign ct. as the ends of justice may require. The particular provisions of the foreign law applicable to a transaction, proceedings as to which in a foreign ct. are thus restrained, must not be disregarded.

A co. was chartered in Scotland for the manufacture of iron. Its manufactory & chief office of management were there; it had agents for the sale of the goods in different parts of Scotland & England, & it possessed real estate in both countries. A., a large shareholder in the co., & possessed of real & personal property in England & Scotland, was the co.'s agent for the sale of goods in London & was domiciled here. When he died, he left a will in English form, & appointed as his exors. persons who were resident in both countries; his heir was one of the persons, & was also the person who succeeded him in the London agency for the co. Probate of the will was taken out in England, & such of the exors. as thought fit to apply to the Scottish ct. were according to the Scottish law confirmed in the execution of the will. An administration suit was instituted in the Ct. of Ch., & the usual order for a general account of the debts & assets made. After this order the co. took proceedings in the Scottish cts. against the real & personal estate of testator in Scotland. Notice of an injunction at the suit of the exors. was served on the co.'s agent in London, & on the co.'s manager in Scotland; the co. did not appear, & the injunction was issued. The co. then moved to dissolve the injunction. No order was made:—Held: the injunction could not be maintained.—CARRON IRON CO. v. MACLAREN (1855), 5 H. L. Cas. 416; 24 L. J. Ch. 620; 26 L. T. O. 1842. — Not restrained unless action vexatious—Burden of proof.]—B., resident in San Francisco, brought an action against C. in England alleging that C. had been B.'s agent to purchase for him goods in England, that B. had recently discovered that C. had, in the accounts rendered, charged more for the goods than he had paid for them, & asking for an account against C. as agent. C., by his defence denied agency, alleged that he had as principal sold the goods to B., insisted on the accounts rendered as settled accounts, & alleged that a large balance was due. C. then commenced an action in San Francisco against B. to recover the amount which he so alleged to be due. B. moved to restrain this action:—Held: the action ought not to be restrained, for that there was no prima facie inference that the bringing the action abroad, during the pendency of an action in England in which the matters in dispute could be determined, was vexatious, since the course of procedure in San Francisco might be such as to give advantages to C. of which he was entitled to avail himself, & the burden lay on B. to prove that C.'s action was vexatious, which he had failed to do.—HYMAN v. 1846. Two distinct suits in different courts—For same object.]—The Ct. of Ch. will interfere by injunction to restrain a pltf. from prosecuting two distinct suits in different cts. for same object, either in this or a foreign country, but a pltf. may carry on proceedings in one ct. to establish a demand, & in another ct. to obtain security, which the former ct. is unable to give him, for what should be found due to him.

Pltfs. had obtained a decree for an account in the Ct. of Ch. in England, against defts., some of whom resided in Scotland, & had estates there. Pltfs. then instituted proceedings in the Ct. of Session in Scotland, for the same purposes as the English suit, & also to obtain a lien on the Scottish estates of defts.:—Held: an injunction must be granted to restrain pltfs. from proceeding with the suits in the Ct. of Session, except for the purpose of procuring security for what might be found due to them.—WEDDERBURN v. 1848. — English action for administration of settlement trusts—Scottish action for construction of settlement.]—An English lady married in England, a domiciled Scotsman, & a settlement in English form was executed. The settled property was wholly in England, & the trustees resided in England. The marriage was subsequently dissolved for the wife's adultery, by the Scottish ct. The effect of such a dissolution, according to Scottish law, is that the person against whom the decree is made is treated as dead for the purposes of the marriage settlement, & the question arose whether Scottish or English law was applicable. The husband brought an action in Scotland, in which the trustees were nominal pltfs., for the construction of the settlement; another action was brought in England by the wife for the administration of the trusts of the settlement:—Held: it was more convenient that the questions should be decided in the English action, & the husband & trustees must be restrained from proceeding with the Scottish action.—HEARN v. 1851. — — — Foreign matrimonial domicile.]—The fact that a married woman has commenced proceedings in this country against her husband for judicial separation does not give the English cts. jurisdiction to restrain the husband from subsequently asserting & prosecuting his right to take proceedings for divorce in a foreign country where he has acquired a domicile.—WARDOPULO v. The husband appeared under protest, & filed an act on petition, disputing the jurisdiction. Negotiations were afterwards entered into for a separation to be effected by deed, & after these had been pending for some time the husband commenced proceedings in the Scottish ct., praying for a dissolution of marriage on the ground of alleged malicious desertion for a period of four years:—Held: an injunction must be granted restraining the husband from prosecuting the proceedings in Scotland until the act on petition should be heard & determined in this ct., or until further order.—CHRISTIAN v. 1355. — Proceedings against executors abroad—Restrained on undertaking to obtain English administration decree.]—Testator domiciled in England, but occasionally residing in Scotland, gave the residue of his real & personal estate, the bulk of which was situate in England, to two of his sons, one of whom at the time of testator's death was indebted to an insurance co. carrying on business in England & Scotland. The will was proved in England, & probate recorded in Scotland. The insurance co., having previously obtained judgment in an English ct., instituted proceedings against the exors. in the Ct. of Session to arrest, in their hands, the share of the debtor in testator's residuary estate. 1362 1. Decrees in administration suits—Instituted in England & Ireland—Executor restrained from proceeding with English suit.]—Two administration suits were instituted, one in the Ct. of Ch. in England, the other in the Ct. of Ch. in Ireland. The former suit was by the exor., who resided in England, the latter by residuary legatees, who were not served with a copy of the English bill. The usual order was made in the Irish suit. The exor. subsequently entered an appearance & obtained a decree to account in the English suit. An order was subsequently made in the Irish suit directing that the petition should stand for a charge, & directing the exor. to file a discharge, setting forth accounts; which order was amended later, by directing an account of debts & legacies. The exor. filed a supplemental bill in England, to bind the petitions in the Irish suit by the proceedings in the original suit. The Master in the Irish suit made an order to restrain the exor. from proceeding with the supplemental suit in England:—Held: (1) the Ct. of Ch. in Ireland had jurisdiction to restrain the exor. from proceeding with the English suit; (2) the exor., being resident in England, had a right to protection from the English Court of Ch., against the demands of creditors, which the Ct. of Ch. in Ireland could not give him; (3) the exor. should be restrained from proceeding in the English suit without leave of the Master of the Rolls in England.—*PARNELL v. A decree was made in England for the administration of his estate. Subsequently, one of his children instituted proceedings in the Netherlands for the administration of both his real & personal estate in that country. An order was made restraining the prosecution of the pending proceedings in the Netherlands, & the taking of any other proceedings there as to the personal estate:—Held: (per KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.) the order ought not to have absolutely restrained applt. from carrying on the pending proceedings in the Netherlands, but ought to have left her at liberty to carry them on as to the real estate, if she could do so without proceedings as to the personal estate; (per TURNER, L.J.) the order ought not to be thus varied, the applt. not having shown that the proceedings could be carried on as regarded the real estate alone.—*HOPE v. In such a case the judgment or decree draws back to the date of the arrestment on the dependence, & the security thereby obtained applies to the debt subsequently established. If the arrestments are impeached on the ground that they were obtained on a misstatement of facts, this is only a ground for the recall of the process by the Scottish ct., & until so recalled, the English winding up ct. will treat the process as having been validly issued.—Re WEST CUMBERLAND IRON & STEEL CO., [1893] 1 Ch. 713; 62 L. An order was made therein for the arrest of the P., or for bail, subject to pl'tfs. giving security. The action was proceeded with, but pl'tfs. never gave the required security, & consequently the P. was never arrested. The P. left C. during the pendency of the action & came to England, where she was arrested in the present action in rem instituted by the owners of cargo in respect of same cause of action. Previously to the institution of the present action defts. had given bail in the action at C., although pl'tfs. in that action had never given the required security. The limit of defts.' liability in the German Consular Ct. was the value of the R., a sum considerably less than the limit of their liability in this country. Upon motion by defts. to release the R. without giving bail, or to stay the action:—Held: bail having been given without pl'tfs. having deposited the required security, was given voluntarily & not under compulsion, & pl'tfs. were not proceeding vexatiously in instituting a second action in this country, & the ship ought not to be released.—THE REINBECK (1889), 60 L. No legal proceedings instituted in foreign court—Mere guarantee to put in bail to answer foreign judgment—No ground for release of ship arrested in English action.]—The fact that defts. have given a guarantee abroad to put in bail to answer the judgment of a foreign ct. in a case of collision is not a ground for ordering the release of their ship from an arrest in an action commenced in this country, where no legal proceedings have been instituted in the foreign ct.—THE MANNHEIM, [1897] P. 13; 66 L. creditors of mortgagor.]—On default being made under a mtge. of a British ship, the mtgees., pl'tfs., took possession & chartered her to a port in France, where she & her freight were arrested by defts., British subjects, who claimed for necessities supplied to the ship, & in respect of which they had rendered executory in France a judgment obtained by default in England. The mtgees. intervened in the proceedings in France, & also commenced separate actions against them & against the mtgors. asking for judgment, declaring that they, as mtgees. in possession, were entitled to the ship & her freight in priority to the mtgors. & to defts. claiming for necessities:—Held: the action against defts., who claimed for necessities, was not vexatious, & ought not to be stayed, but the action against the mtgors. ought to be stayed.—THE MANAR, [1903] P. 95; 72 L. 1385. Governed by lex situs—Law converting seven years possession into absolute title—No exception in favour of absentees—Possession for nineteen years—Remedy barred.]—The effect of Stat. Limitations, or possessory law, of Jamaica, beyond Stat. Limitations in this country, is to bar not merely the legal remedy, but any suit, claim or demand, & to convert seven years possession into a positive & absolute title. There is no exception in favour of absentees, they not being within the exception expressed, in the same way as there was no such exception out of Stat. 1386. ———— Law making twelve years period of limitation—No provision for special cases—Possession for over forty years—Remedy barred.]—Tenants in common of house property in Calcutta, under the will of a testator who died in 1803, became in 1825 reduced to two. The property had all along been considered as leasehold, in which view one of the surviving co-tenants would, in the events that had happened, be entitled to five-ninths & the other to four-ninths of the property; & the rents had been received by a common agent, & shared accordingly. In 1827 the supposed owner of the four-ninths settled her share, describing it as a moiety. This description was, nevertheless, treated as an error, & the rents were continued to be received as before, & to be shared in same proportions, until 1864, when it was discovered that the property was freehold, upon which footing the supposed owner of the five-ninths would really be entitled to four-fifths, & the supposed owner of the four-ninths to one-fifth only. In 1850 an Act of limitations for India was passed, which provided that no suit for the recovery of immovable property should be maintained in any ct. within the British territories in India unless same, if instituted after two years from the passing of the Act, should be instituted within twelve years from the time when the cause of action arose. The property having been sold, & the proceeds paid into ct., the owner of the four-fifths claimed upon petition to be entitled to that proportion of the fund:—Held: under the English law the ct. would, after so long a possession & user, have presumed a grant; (2) under the same law the ct. would have held the settlement in 1827 by one of the co-tenants to have been a legal ouster of the other; (3) the case was governed by Indian law; (4) under the provisions of the Act of the Indian Legislature the claim of petitioner had become barred, & he was entitled to five-ninths only of the fund.—Re PEAT'S TRUSTS (1869), L. R. 7 Eq. 302.

1387. — Annuity charged on land—Land producing no income for seventeen years—No Act applicable—Arrears recoverable.—By will in 1810 B. devised to trustees his estate in Jamaica to hold to the use that H. should, out of the rents & profits, receive for life an annuity payable quarterly for her separate use, with powers of distress & entry & perception of the rents & profits, & after her decease to the use that the trustees should pay the annuity unto her children, as she should appoint, for their lives. Testator gave other annuities out of the rents & profits of same estate, & gave the estate to the use of his son for life, with remainders over. The last payment on account of H.'s annuity was in 1842. H. died in 1853. She made an appointment, & arrears were due to her & her appointees. The estate was for some years a waste, & no rents & profits were received till 1870, & when received they were paid into ct.:—Held: Stat. Limitations did not apply to Jamaica, & the legal personal representative of H. was entitled to be paid the arrears due to her.—PITT v. DACRE (LORD) (1876), 3 Ch. D. 295; 45 L. J. Ch. 796; 24 W. SUB-SECT. 2.—MOVABLES.

1388. Governed by lex fori—General rule.—Where a ct. entertains a cause of action which originated in a foreign country, the rule is to adjudicate according to the law of that country, yet the ct. proceeds according to the prescription of the country in which it exercises jurisdiction.—RUCKMABOYE v. LULLOOBHROY MOTTICHUND (1853), 8 Moo. P. C. C. 4; 5 Moo. Ind. App. 234; 22 L. T. O. S. 203; 14 E. R. 2, P. C.

1389. — Remedy not barred by foreign law—Barred in England—Debt not recoverable.—In an action of debt, it was averred that, before the making of the instrument & obligation thereafter mentioned, pl'ts. carried on business in Scotland, & that one A. & def't. were resident & domiciled therein, & that, by a certain instrument & obligation in writing, which was set out, A. & def't. became bound, & obliged themselves conjointly & severally to pay to pl'ts. the sum of £400 sterling. It was then averred that, by the law of Scotland at the time of making such instrument & thence hitherto in force, the time for bringing any suit or instituting any legal proceeding by pl'ts. against def't. upon the instrument, & the cause & right of action accruing thereon, had not yet elapsed, that is to say, by virtue of the law, pl'ts. had the right & privilege of suing & bringing any action thereon, at any time within forty years from the time of making & signing the bond. Plea that the cause of action did not accrue within six years:—Held: a good plea.—BRITISH LINEN CO. v. DRUMMOND (1830), 10 B. & C. 903; 9 L. J. O. S. K. B. 213; 109 E. R. 683.

Right to retain security for debt unaffected.—The widow of testator, to administer whose estate this action was brought, claimed to prove under the administration judgment as a creditor against his estate in respect of two sums of £2,400 & £10,000. As regarded both debts she had obtained security by means of an attachment in France upon assets of testator in that country. The ct. held that the claim for £2,400 was barred in England by Stat. Limitations. It was not, however, barred under French law. The claim in respect of the £10,000 was admitted, & the question was then raised, whether the widow was bound to account for the proceeds of her security in France as regarded the £2,400, or bring them into hotchpot, before she could receive any dividend in respect of the £10,000:—Held: the widow was entitled to prove for, & receive dividends in respect of the £10,000 without accounting for the proceeds of the security in respect of the £2,400.—Re BOWES, STRATHMORE (EARL) v. VANE, [1889] W. N. 53.

1393. ————.]—Pltfs., attorneys in the Isle of Man, conducted for deft. the defence to a suit commenced against him in the Consistory Ct. there in 1858, which was dismissed in Apr., 1861. In Sept., 1861, pltfs. in that suit appealed to the Staff of Govt., the Manx Ct. of Appeal, & pltfs. conducted the appeal on deft.'s behalf till Oct. 1, 1862, when pltfs. dissolved partnership, & the proceedings were conducted by one of them until the appeal was heard & judgment given on Apr. 7, 1865. On Oct. 30, 1865, pltfs. brought an action in the Deemsters Ct., Isle of Man, for their costs to Sept. 1, 1862, in which judgment was given for deft. on the ground that the debt was barred by the Manx Stat. Limitations, which enacted that actions of debt upon any trading contract or demand without specialty should be commenced within three years next after the cause of action. In an action on the bill of costs:—Held: (1) a plea of the judgment in the Manx ct. was no answer, as the Manx Stat. Limitations only barred the remedy, & did not extinguish the debt; (2) Stat. Limitations here was no bar, as in case of appeal from a judgment the attorney, who conducted the suit in the ct. below & the appeal, was not entitled to bring his action until the appeal was determined; (3) where a ct. of competent jurisdiction had decided a matter pltf. was estopped from disputing the decision or litigating the matter in the cts. of another country.—*HARRIS v. Part I.—In General.

1. Sources of constitutional law—Acts of Parliament—Magna Carta—Declaratory of common law.]—R. v. CURTIS, No. 834, post.

Part II.—The Title to the Crown.

2. At common law—By descent.]—(1) Allegiance is a true & faithful obedience of the subject due to his Sovereign. This allegiance & obedience is an incident inseparable to every subject ; for as soon as he is born he owes by birthright allegiance & obedience to his Sovereign.

(2) As the subject owes to the King his true & faithful allegiance & obedience, so the Sovereign is to govern & protect his subjects, regere et protegere subditos suos ; so as between the Sovereign & subject there is duplex et reciprocum ligamen ; quia sicut subditus regi tenetur ad obedientiam, ita rex subdito tenetur ad protectionem ; merito igitur ligeantia dicitur a ligando, quia continet in se duplex ligamen. Allegiance is the mutual bond & obligation between the King & his subjects, whereby subjects are called his liege subjects, because they are bound to obey & serve him ; & he is called their liege lord, because he should maintain & defend them.

(3) There are found in the law four kinds of allegiances : (a) Ligeantia naturalis, absoluta, pura et indefinita, & this originally is due by nature & birth-right, & is called alta ligeantia, & he that oweth this is called subditus natus. (b) Ligeantia acquisita, not by nature but by acquisition or denization, being called a denizen, or rather denizon, because he is subditus datus. (c) Ligeantia localis, wrought by the law, & that is when an alien that is in amity cometh into England because as long as he is within England he is within the King's protection ; therefore so long as he is here, he oweth unto the King a local obedience or allegiance, for that the one draws the other. (d) A legal obedience, or allegiance which is called legal, because the municipal laws of this realm have prescribed the order & form of it ; & this to be done upon oath at the torn or leet.

(4) Ligeantia acquisita, or denization, appears to be three-fold : (a) Absolute as the common denizations be, to them & their heirs, without any limitation or restraint ; (b) Limited, as when the King doth grant letters of denization to an alien, & to the heirs males of his body, or to an alien for term of his life; (c) It may be granted upon condition, for cujus est dare, ejus est disponere, & this denization of an alien may be effected three manner of ways: by Parliament; by letters patent, as the usual manner is; & by conquest, as if the King & his subjects should conquer another kingdom or dominion, as well antenati as postnati, as well they which fought in the field, as they which remained at home, for defence of their country, or employed elsewhere, are all denizens of the kingdom or dominion conquered.

(5) Concerning the local obedience it is observable, that as there is a local protection on the King's part, so there is a local allegiance of the subjects' part.

(6) In the oath of allegiance five things were observed:—(a) That for the time it is indefinite, & without limit, "from this day forward." (b) To be true & faithful. (c) To whom, "to our sovereign lord the King & his heirs." (d) In what manner, "& faith & troth shall bear, etc., of life & member," that is, until the letting out of the last drop of our dearest heart's blood. (e) Where & in what places ought these things to be done, in all places whatsoever, for, "you shall neither know nor hear of any ill or damage, etc." that you shall not defend, etc. so as natural allegiance is not circumscribed within any place.

(7) The King hath two capacities in him:—one a natural body, being descended of the blood royal of the realm; & this body is of the creation of Almighty God, & is subject to death, infirmity, & such like; the other is a politic body or capacity, so called, because it is framed by the policy of man & in this capacity the King is esteemed to be immortal, invisible, not subject to death, infirmity, infancy, nonage, etc. Now seeing the King hath but one person, & several capacities, & one politic capacity for the realm of England, & another for the realm of Scotland, it is necessary to be considered, to which capacity allegiance is due; & it was resolved, that it was due to the natural person of the King (which is ever accompanied with the politic capacity, & the politic capacity as it were appropriated to the natural capacity) & it is not due to the politic capacity only, that is, to his Crown or Kingdom distinct from his natural capacity.

(8) The title is by descent; by Queen Elizabeth's death the Crown & Kingdom of England descended to his Majesty, & he was fully & absolutely thereby King, without any essential ceremony or act to be done ex post facto: for coronation is but a royal ornament & solemnization of the royal descent, but no part of the title.

(9) By the laws of England there can be no interregnum within the same.—CALVIN'S CASE (1608), 7 Co. Rep. 1a; Jenk. 306; 2 State Tr. 559; 77 E. R. 377; sub nom. UNION OF SCOTLAND & ENGLAND CASE, Moore, K. B. 790.

3. Under statute—Statutory entail.]—The Crown is entailed to the King by Act of Parliament with all the prerogatives & franchises belonging to it: this Act does not extend to take away the liberties or franchises which lords & others have by charter or lawful prescription. SECT. 1.—DUTY OF THE CROWN TOWARDS THE SUBJECT.

6. To govern & protect.]—CALVIN'S CASE, No. 2, ante.

7. — On narrow seas.]—Letters patent are to be construed benign, favourably & liberally.

The narrow seas are parcel of the allegiance of the King, he is to scour them, & to defend his merchants in them, for their safer conduct; the narrow seas are parcel of the allegiance of the King, & parcel of the Crown of England.

The King's grants ought to have a very beneficial construction, & this for the honour of the King, & for the relief of his subjects, & not to have any strict or literal construction made in subversion of his grants.

J.—VOL. XI.

It is to be observed for a rule, quod privilegium est beneficium personale, & extinguitur cum personâ.

Portus est locus inclusus & that for safety from pirates, & the King is at the charge of this, & ports are as the gates of the kingdom, & none is owner of them but the King only.

As to that which hath been said, that a woman may be a citizen: this she cannot be, to what end, she cannot bear civilia, or publica onera of the city, she cannot do any thing for the benefit of the city, she cannot perform watch & ward, she can bear no office in the city, neither can she be of any of the companies; she cannot be an attorney, she may be a free woman, but this is only to have her will (as many so have), but to no other purpose: but if she be to have any benefit of this immunity, this is only as executrix of her husband, & she hath only relied upon this.

Prisage is a prerogative of the Crown to take so much wine from English merchants bringing in wines from the ports beyond sea, & the Crown can grant exemption.

This charter also was made, pro melioratione civitatis: also here is death in the case, which is the act of God, & the rule of law is, that the act of God shall turn no man to a prejudice: & notwithstanding here is not civis, yet these wines are vina civium, & so to be discharged of prisage. If George Hanger had sold these wines to a stranger, he should pay prisage, for this was his own act.

The last & principal reason, is because this grant here made was for the advancement of trade & traffic, & therefore this is to be taken & construed favourably & largely: & all charters made which do hinder trade & traffic are to be void.—R. & WALLER v. HANGER (1615), 3 Bulst. 1; 1 Roll. Rep. 138; 81 E. R. 1; sub nom. WALTER v. HANGER, Moore, K. B. 832.

a. Definition of loyalty.]—Attachment to the person of the reigning sovereign does not complete the idea of loyalty. That comprehensive term includes within its meaning not only affection to the person, but also to the office of the King; not only attachment to royalty, but, as the word itself imports, attachment to the law and to the constitution of the realm; & he who would, by force or by fraud, endeavour to prostrate that law & constitution, though he may retain his affection for its head, can boast

b. Abjuration of allegiance—Occupied territory—Progress of hostilities.]—Where territory is occupied in the course of hostilities by an enemy's force, even if the annexation of the occupied country is proclaimed by the enemy, there can be no change of allegiance during the progress of hostilities on the part of a citizen of the occupied country.—R. v. VERMAAK (1900), 21 N. L. R. 204.—S. AF.

solemn promise, is, owing to his want of religious belief, incapable by law of "making and subscribing" the oath of allegiance appointed by the Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866, ss. 1, 3, as amended by the Promissory Oaths Act, 1868; & if he takes his seat & votes as a member, although he has gone through the form of making & subscribing the oath appointed by those statutes, he will be liable upon an information at the suit of the A.-G. to the penalty imposed by the Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866 (c. 19), s. 5. In order that the oath of allegiance imposed upon members of the House of Commons upon taking their seats by the Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866 (c. 19), as amended by the Promissory Oaths Act, 1868 (c. 72), may be "solemnly and publicly made and subscribed" within the meaning of sect. 3 of the former statute, it must be taken by a member with the assent of the House according to the requirements of the Standing Orders, & after he has been called upon by the Speaker to be sworn. Upon the trial of an information at the suit of the A.-G. against a member of the House of Commons for voting without having taken the oath of allegiance within the meaning of the Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866 (c. 19), as amended by the Promissory Oaths Act, 1868 (c. 72), evidence of the practice observed in the House of Commons as to taking the oath of allegiance is admissible for the purpose of explaining the construction of those statutes, & the journals of the House of Commons are admissible as evidence for the purpose of showing, from the member's conduct as therein recorded, that owing to his want of religious belief he is by law incapable of taking an oath.—A.-G. v. BRADLAUGH (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 667; 54 L. J. Q. B. 205; 52 L. T. 589; 49 J. P. 500; 33 W. R. 673, C. A.

21. Affirmation in lieu of oath.—A person presenting himself for military service is entitled to make an affirmation instead of taking the oath. 22. Royal style & titles — "Rex."—"Supremum caput ecclesie anglicane" was omitted from a writ:—Held: writ was good for it was not part of the Royal name but only an addition. The law & customs of England are the inheritance of the subject, which he cannot be deprived of without his assent in Parliament.—OATHS BEFORE AN ECCLESIASTICAL JUDGE EX OFFICIO (1607), 12 Co. Rep. 26; 77 E. R. 1308.

24. ——CALVIN'S CASE, No. 2, ante.

25. Capacities of Sovereign.—(a) By the common law no act which the King does as King, shall be defeated by his nonage. (b) The King has in him two bodies, viz. a body natural, & a body politic. His body natural if it be considered in itself, is a body mortal, subject to all infirmities that come by nature or accident, to the imbecility of infancy or old age & to the like defects that happen to the natural bodies of other people. But his body politic is a body that cannot be seen or handled, consisting of policy & government, & constituted for the direction of the people & the management of the public-weal, & this body is utterly void of infancy, & old age, & other natural defects & imbecilities, which the body natural is subject to, & for this cause, what the King does in his body politic, cannot be invalidated or frustrated by any disability in his natural body. Therefore his letters-patent, which give authority or jurisdiction, or which give lands or tenements that he has as King, shall not be avoided by reason of his nonage. (c) If the King has land by descent, on the part of his mother or other ancestor, or which he, when King, purchased in fee in the capacity of his body natural, or which he purchased before he was King, if he, being King, gives them to another during his nonage, such gift, by the course of the common law, shall never be defeated by reason of his nonage. For although he has or takes the land in his natural body, yet to this natural body is conjoined his body politic, which contains his royal estate & dignity, & the body politic includes the body natural, but the body natural is the lesser, & with this the body politic is consolidated. So that he has a body natural, adorned & invested with the estate & dignity royal, & he has not a body natural distinct & divided by itself from the office & dignity royal, but a body natural & a body politic together indivisible, & these two bodies are incorporated in one person, & make one body & not divers, that is the body corporate in the body natural, et c contra the body natural in the body corporate. So that the body natural, by the conjunction of the body politic to it, which body politic contains the office, government, & majesty royal, is magnified, & by the consolidation hath in it the body politic, for which reason the acts which the King does touching the things that he possesses or inherits in the body natural, require the same circumstance & order as the things which he possesses or inherits in the body politic do; for the thing possessed is not of such consideration as to change the nature of the King's person, but the person who possesses it changes the course of the thing possessed (per CUR.).—LANCASTER (DUCHY) CASE (1561), 1 Plowd. 212; 75 E. 31. Right to coronation.]—On June 9, 1821, a Royal Proclamation declaring the King's pleasure to celebrate his coronation on July 19 was published. On June 25, 1821, the Queen presented a memorial claiming, as Queen-Consort, a right to celebrate the ceremony of coronation at the same time as the King. The question, whether she was of right entitled to be crowned with the King, was referred to a Committee of Lords of the Privy Council:—Held: a Queen-Consort is not entitled as of right to be crowned.—QUEEN CAROLINE'S CLAIM TO BE CROWNED (1821), 1 State Tr. N. S. 949.

SECT. 3.—THE QUEEN DOWAGER.

32. Status of Queen.]—Eleanor Queen Dowager of Henry III. in 1273 endowed St. Katharine's hospital reserving to herself during her life & to her successors Queens of England the nomination of the master. In 1660 Henrietta Maria Queen mother granted the mastership to H. Montague for life & the King in the same year reciting his mother's grant & that the right of it belonged to her confirmed it by his letters patent & by the same letters patent granted the mastership to Montague. The King afterwards married Katherine who granted the mastership to Sir Robert Atkins for life. The lessee of Sir Robert Atkins brought ejectment for part of the lands of the hospital against G. Montague:—Held: (1) an inheritance might be limited in this manner in a thing de novo. (2) This reservation being to Queen Eleanor, & her successors, Queens of England, did not exclude Queen Dowagers, & extend only to Queen Consorts, for (a) a Dowager Queen is Queen of England, & has the prerogative to sue in the Exchequer. (b) When once she is so qualified as to have the estate vest in her, it shall continue, though she doth not remain in the same capacity. (3) Queen Eleanor was only Dowager at the time of the foundation, & so could never be intended to exclude such Queens as should succeed her in that capacity. (4) During such time that there should be no Queen the King was to constitute the Master; for he was heir to Queen Eleanor.

(5) A thing of this nature could not be granted in reversion; for it was not like an office, but rather as a Prebendary or Incumbency of a Church; & the master, as head of the corp., with his brethren, had the whole estate in him.—ST. KATHERINE'S HOSPITAL CASE (1671), 1 Vent. 149; 86 E. R. 102. Annotations:—As to (5) Refd.* Owen v. Saunders (1696), 1 Ld. Raym. 158. Generally, Mentd. Stainer v. SUB-SECT. 1.—TITLES OF THE HEIR APPARENT.

33. By inheritance—Duke of Cornwall—Whether title limited to first born son or eldest surviving son included.]—Held: (1) the instrument by which Prince Edward was created Duke of Cornwall & the possessions of the dukedom of Cornwall given to him, with special limitations, & the possessions annexed to the duchy so as they shall not be severed, with a special clause of revivification if the special limitations at any time should cease, etc. was a charter made by authority of Parliament. Note differences touching letters patent which pass by bill signed without Privy Seal, those which pass by bill signed & by Privy Seal also, & those made by authority of Parliament; (2) the charter having the authority & force of Parliament was sufficient in itself without any other Act & if the King's sci. fa. had sufficient matter, it should never abate, for surplusage not material; (3) the prince had an estate in fee-simple in the dukedoms; (4) this Act was an Act whereof the Judges & all the kingdom ought to take notice; (5) if the prince, as Prince of Wales, had judgment to recover & afterwards the Crown descended to him, he, as King, should sue execution; (6) the Act by 3 Eliz. of confirmation of letters patent supplied only particular defects as misnomer of the manors, &c. misrecital, &c. & made the letters patent good only against the King, his heirs & successors, with a saving to all others; (7) the son & heir apparent of the King, if he was not the first begotten son, was not within the limitation in the instrument.—THE PRINCE'S CASE (1606), 8 Co. Rep. 1a; 77 E. R. 481.

But that has ever been held a mistake of that great man. He was also mistaken in the fact in saying that Henry VIII. was not Duke of Cornwall because not primogenitus for Lord Bacon in his history of Henry VII. affirms the contrary that the Dukedom devolved to him upon the death of Arthur. Part. V.—The Royal Prerogative.

SECT. 1.—NATURE AND LIMITATIONS GENERALLY OF THE PREROGATIVE

SUB-SECT. 1.—NATURE OF THE PREROGATIVE.

42. Origin of prerogative—Common law.]—The prerogative of the King is a treatise of the common law, & not statute nor declaration by Parliament.—ANON. (circa 1547), Bro. N. C. 152; 73 E. R. 913.

43. Extent of prerogative—Applies to inland & foreign trade.]—EAST INDIA CO. v. SANDYS, No. 47, post.

44. ——— Runs to colonies.]—A legatee of personal property, having been convicted of felony, was sent out to Botany Bay, where he was again convicted for penal offences, & administration having been granted of his estate:—Held: the property was forfeited to the Crown.

The prerogative of the Crown runs in the colonies to same extent as in England.—Re BATEMAN'S TRUSTS (1873), L. R. 15 Eq. 355; 42 L. J. Ch. 553; 28 L. T. 395; 37 J. P. 484; 21 W. R. 435; 12 Cox, C. C. 447.

45. ——— Ascertainment by law of colony in which question of prerogative arises.]—(1) The prerogative of the Crown with regard to aliens, must be determined by the laws of the particular colonies in which the questions arise, & not by the law of England, which is only to be looked at in order to determine who are, & who are not, aliens.

(2) The droit d'aubaine became the law of Lower Canada, with regard to aliens, on the ancient French law being established there, by 14 Geo. 3, c. 83.

(3) The Judicial Committee will not notice any alteration of rights that may have taken place between the parties in consequence of an Act of the provincial Legislature, but which does not appear on the record.—DONEGANI v. DONEGANI (1835), 3 Knapp. 63; 12 E. R. 571, P. C.

Annotations:—As to (1) Reid. Re Adam (1837), 1 Moo. P. C. C. 460; A.-G. for Canada v. Calh., A.-G. for Canada v. Gilhula, [1906] A. C. 542.

46. Classification of prerogatives.]—(1) The issue was whether the King could by writ under the Great Seal when the good & safety of the kingdom demanded it command his subjects at their charge to furnish such number of ships, men & stores as he should think fit, & for such time as he should think fit:—Held: the imposition without Parliamentary authority was lawful.

(2) The chief prerogatives royal are: (a) the King may give laws to his subjects, & this does not detract from him, when he does it in Parliament; (b) to make peace & war; (c) to create supreme magistrates; (d) that the last appeal be to the King; (e) to pardon offences; (f) to coin money; (g) to have allegiance, fealty & homage; (h) to impose taxes, without common consent in Parliament (CRAWLEY, J.).—R. v. HAMPDEN, SHIP MONEY CASE (1637), 3 State Tr. 826.

PART V. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.

d. Extent of prerogative — Applies to all British Empire.]—Whenever a demand may be properly sued for in the name of the Sovereign, the prerogative right of the Crown attaches in all portions of the British Empire subject to English law, irrespective of the locality in which the debt arose & of the govt. in right of which it accrued.—R. v. SIVEWRIGHT (1896), 34 N. B. R. 144.—CAN.

44 i. ——— Runs to colonies.]—The prerogatives of the Crown exist in British colonies to the same extent as in United Kingdom,—

47. ———.]—A patent is good to make persons a corporation & to enable them to enjoy & apply to trade all the privileges derived from being a body corporate.

A monopoly not only grants to a person or corporation rights of trading, but seeks to restrain other persons & corporations of a freedom they had before or to hinder them in this lawful trade.

It was an inherent prerogative of the Crown that none should trade with foreigners without the King's licence.

By declaring war the King can determine a public trade though settled by Act of Parliament.

All subjects are bound to take notice of the King's Great Seal & Privy Seal. The prerogative of the Crown applies both to inland trade & to foreign trade.

The common law takes note of the law merchant which is part of the law of nations.

The king is absolute master of law & peace & is the fountain of honour & may ennoble as many of his subjects as he pleases.—EAST INDIA CO. v. SANDYS (CASE OF MONOPOLIES) (1685), 10 State Tr. 371; Skin. 132, 165, 197, 223; 2 Show. 366; 90 E. R. 62, 76, 91, 103.

48. ——— Imposition of tolls.]—The King cannot at his pleasure put any imposition upon any merchandise to be imported into this kingdom, or exported, unless it be for advancement of trade and traffic. Such impositions so put cannot be demised or granted to any subject.

Although the King may prohibit any person in some cases with some commodities to pass out of the realm; yet this cannot be where the end is private, but where the end is public.

At common law no customs were paid but only for wools, wool-fells, & leather.

The subsidies of tonnage & poundage might be granted by the King so long as he lived.

For the benefit of the subject, the King may make an imposition or toll within the realm to repair highways, bridges, & to make walls for defence: but then the sum imposed ought to be proportionable to the benefit.—CUSTOMS, SUBSIDIES & IMPOSITIONS (1607), 12 Co. Rep. 33; 77 E. R. 1314.

49. ———.]—No private individual has a right to fix a toll, which is a royal prerogative, although he may take a composition from individuals. He may do so indeed by Act of Parliament, & erect gates & stop passengers till a toll is paid.—NORTHAM BRIDGE & ROADS CO. v. LONDON & SOUTHAMPTON RY. CO. (1840), 6 M. & W. 428; 1 Ry. & Can. Cas. 665; 9 L. J. Ex. 165; 4 Jur. 892; 151 E. R. 479.

e. Removable only by ———. Crown prerogatives can only be taken away by express statutory enactment.—MARITIME BANK v. R. (1888), 17 S. C. R. 657.—CAN.

52. When part of law of England.]—BROADFOOT'S CASE, No. 494, post.

53. Assignment of prerogatives—By statutory authority.]—(1) In the Charter establishing the Supreme Ct. of Judicature at Bombay, the following clauses on the subject of appeals were contained:—"And it is our further will & pleasure, that, in all indictments, informations, & criminal suits & causes whatsoever, the said Supreme Ct. shall have full & absolute power & authority to allow or deny the appeal of a party pretending to be aggrieved, & also to award & regulate the terms upon which the appeal shall be allowed in such cases in which the Ct. may think fit to allow such appeal. & we do hereby also reserve to ourselves, our heirs & successors in our or their Privy Council, full power & authority, upon the humble petition of any person or persons aggrieved by the judgment or determination of the Supreme Ct. of Judicature at Bombay, to refuse or admit his, her, or their appeal thereupon, upon such terms, & under such limitations, restrictions, & regulations, as we or they shall think fit, & to reform, correct, or vary such judgment or determination, as to us or them shall seem meet:"—Held: there was no power to the Crown to grant appeals in criminal cases created or reserved by this Charter; but the reservation was confined to civil cases only.

(2) Although the Crown may not of its own authority part with any portion of its prerogative, yet, where the Crown has acted under the authority of Parliament, it may part with its prerogative:—Held: under the words of the Charter, that Charter having been granted by the Crown by force of an Act of Parliament, the Supreme Ct. had the sole & absolute power to allow or refuse permission to appeal in cases of alleged error of record in criminal cases; & the Crown had pro tanto delegated its prerogative.—*R. v. SUB-SECT. 2.—LIMITATIONS OF THE PREROGATIVE.

A. In General.

55. Limited to prerogatives allowed by law.]—The King, by his proclamation, cannot create an offence which was not an offence before. The King hath no prerogative but that which the law of the land allows him. If an offence be not already punishable in the Star Chamber, the prohibition of it by proclamation cannot make it punishable there. The King, for prevention of offences, may by proclamation admonish his subjects that they keep the laws & do not offend against them.—PROCLAMATIONS' CASE (1611), 12 Co. Rep. 74; 2 State Tr. 723; 77 E. R. 1352. Annotation:—Mentd. Middleton v. Crofts (1736), 2 Atk. 650.

56. Must not be contrary to liberty of subject.]—Royal prerogative which tends to the high prejudice of the subject is not allowable.—WARRAM'S CASE (1587), Moore, K. B. 239; 72 E. R. 553.

57. —.]—The ct. is cautious of extending the prerogative of the Crown, in such a way as to restrain the liberty of the subject, & his power over himself & his estate, further than the law will allow.—Ex p. BARNSELY (1744), 3 Atk. 168; 26 E. R. 899, L. C.

Annotations:—Refd. Ex p. Wragg (1800), 5 Ves. 450; Ex p. Cranmer (1806), 12 Ves. 445.

58. Crown cannot make contract limiting future power of executive action.]—During the war neutral shipowners, being aware of the liability of neutral ships to be detained in British ports, obtained an undertaking from the British Govt. that if they sent a particular ship to this country with a particular class of cargo she should not be detained. On the faith of that undertaking the owners sent the ship to a British port with a cargo of the stipulated kind. The British Govt. subsequently withdrew their undertaking & refused her clearance. On a petition of right for damages for breach of contract:—Held: the Govt.'s undertaking was not enforceable in a Ct. of law, it not being within the competence of the Crown to make a contract which would have the effect of limiting its power of executive action in the future.—REDERIAKTIEBOLAGET AMPHITRITE v. R., [1921] 3 K. B. 500; 91 L. J. K. B. 75; 126 L. T. 63; 37 T. L. R. 985.

B. As regards Creation, Suspension, Dispensation and Alteration of Laws.

See, now, Bill of Rights, 1688 (c. 2).

C. As regards Taxation.

61. Power to impose taxation without parliamentary sanction—Before Bill of Rights, 1688 (c. 2).]—A.-G. v. BATES, IMPOSITIONS' CASE

PART V. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

55 i. Limited to prerogatives allowed by law.]—Where the greater rights & prerogatives of the Crown are in question, recourse must be had to the public law of the Empire by which alone they can be determined, but where its minor prerogatives & interests are in question, they must be regulated by the established law of the place where the demand was made.—A.-G. & BLACK (1828), Stuart, K. B. 325—CAN.

i. Crown can create legislative assembly in colony.]—The Crown, by its prerogative, can create a legislative assembly in a settled colony, subordinate to Parliament but with supreme power within the limits of the colony for the govt. of its inhabitants.—KIELLEY v. CARSON, KENT (1841), 2 Nfld. L. R. App. 10.—NFLD.

58 i. Crown cannot make contract limiting future power of executive action.]—The undertaking by a Minister of the Crown on behalf of the Crown that the Crown by its representative will do a certain act at a future time conditional upon the occurrence in the meantime of an event yet uncertain is not one which H.M.'s responsible ministers have any power or authority to enter into so as to bind the Crown.—A.-G. v. GOLDSBOROUGH (1889), 15 V. L. R. 638.—AUS.

PART V. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

g. Power to make or unmake laws—By Order in Council.]—H.M. has prerogative powers to make laws for the govt. of her subjects by Orders in Council.—R. v. WEAVER (1889), Udall, 155.—FIJI.

h. Power to dispense with laws—Abandonment of revenue.]—W. imported certain cement, upon which a duty was leviable, into a colony. The Govt. agreed to abandon the duty & to allow the cement to be landed free of duty:—Held: Govt. could not legally abandon a statutory source of revenue.—CUSTOMS COLLECTOR v. CAPE CENTRAL RAILWAYS, LTD. (1889), 6 S. C. 402.—S. AF.

62. — Income tax.—A resolution of the Committee of the House of Commons for Ways & Means, assenting to income tax at a certain rate for the ensuing financial year commencing Apr. 6, does not either per se, or after adoption by the House of Commons authorise the Crown to levy on the subject the tax so assented to, before the tax has been actually imposed by Act of Parliament; nor can the Bank of England, before the tax is so imposed by statute, lawfully deduct any income tax from the dividends payable by the Bank to a stockholder without the assent of the holder.—BOWLES v. BANK OF ENGLAND, [1913] 1 Ch. 57; 82 L. J. Ch. 124; 108 L. T. 95; 29 T. L. R. 42; 57 Sol. Jo. 43; 6 Tax Cas. 136.

SUB-SECT. 3.—EFFECT OF DEMISE OF THE CROWN.

66. On annuity by Sovereign—Binding on successors.—King Henry VIII. grants to one an annuity for the exercise of the office of usher of the Privy Chamber to Prince Edward his son, in this case if the service is not done, the annuity shall cease as well as it should if the service was to be done to King Henry VIII. himself, & though by the death of King Henry VIII. & the prince's accession to the Crown, the patentee was discharged by law from doing the service any longer to Edward when King, & by the death of King Edward he was discharged by law from doing the service at all after his death, yet he shall have the annuity, not only during the life of King Edward, but after his death, as long as he the patentee himself lives, & this notwithstanding

King Henry VIII. did not expressly bind his heirs or successors in the grant of the annuity, but wholly omitted to mention them in the patent. In such a case a writ of execution shall be granted to petitioner directed to the Treasurer & Chamberlain of the Exchequer.—WROTH'S CASE (1572), 2 Plowd. 458; 75 E. R. 678.

Colbourne, [1914] 2 Ch. 533; British Actors Film Co. v. Glover, [1918] 1 K. B. 299.

68. On bond to Sovereign—Subsisting to successors.—A bond to the King in his political capacity subsists to his successor. Whereas a writ of scire facias issued against deft., upon his not having performed the condition of a bond entered into by him, & P., in the penalty of £500 to her late Majesty Queen Ann, her heirs, exors., & administrators, to which, upon rules given, deft. appeared, & put in a demurrer, & his Majesty's A.-G. having joined in the same:—Held: the bond having been given to her late Majesty in her political capacity, the same subsisted to his present Majesty as her successor, & therefore the demurrer should be over-ruled.—R. v. BRADFORD (1714), Dick. 24; 2 Ld. Raym. 1327; 21 E. R. 175.

69. On appointment of justices—Names added to schedule in commission after death of Sovereign.—The Crown Office Act, 1877 (c. 41), does not authorise the addition of names to a Commission of Oyer and Terminer or of Gaol Delivery, & no mere Commission to act as a Justice of the Peace can confer the jurisdiction of these Commissions.

Conviction quashed as being coram non iudice, some of the convicting justices sitting only by virtue of their names being added, after the demise of the Crown issuing a Commission, to a schedule in that Commission.—R. v. HOLDICH (1920), 15 Cr. App. Rep. 122; 37 T. L. R. 300, C. C. A.

PART V. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 3.

k. On contract respecting construction of public work.—An action arising out of a contract for the hire of horses to be used in the construction of a public work lies against the executive authority of the Dominion, & is not affected or defeated by the demise of the Crown.—JOHNSON v. R. (1903), 8 Exch. C. R. 360; 24 C. L. T. 2.—CAN.

l. On status of justices.—A justice had been for many years on the commission of the peace & was in the fresh commission issued since the accession of King Edw. 7, but had not taken afresh the oaths of allegiance & office after the death of the Queen: he had attested an affidavit of debt:—Held: the ct. could not inquire, upon a question of the validity of such affidavit, into defects of his qualification.—Re CARDEW, Ex p. BANK OF AUSTRALASIA (1900), 10 Q. B. J. 176.—AUS.

Part. VI.—The Crown in relation to the Executive.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

70. Sovereign acts by executive officers—Formerly might have acted himself.]—The Offences at Sea Act, 1536 (c. 15), directs a commission to be made by the Chancellor to certain persons. Although there be no Chancellor, the Keeper of the great Seal may do it; if there be neither Chancellor nor Keeper of the great Seal, the King may make such a commission. This Statute concerns Government; it was made only for the ease of the King, & not to take from him the power of Government, which God, Nature, Birthright & the Common Law have given him.

So of the Patent for Alnage, notwithstanding stat. 35 H. 6, c. 5, which ordains it to be granted by the Treasurer. So of the King's Patent for Plurality of Benefices without the Archbishop's dispensation, notwithstanding stat. 25 Hen. 8, c. 21. So for the appointment of sheriffs, notwithstanding the stat. 9 Edw. 2. These things concern the Government of the public; & before these statutes the King might of himself do all the matters aforesaid; & so he may at this day.—ANON. (1561), Jenk. 225; 145 E. R. 156, Ex. Ch.

71. Right to subjects' services—General rule.]—The King has a natural interest in every subject & may compel him to serve in any function in which he shall judge him capable.—R. v. Prerogative of the King by letters patent, to suspend a public officer, though the office is granted for life. After suspension the officer is entitled to receive the salary, but not to exercise the functions, of the office.—SLINGSBY'S CASE (1680), 3 Swan, 178; 36 E. R. 821.

77. — Dismissal at pleasure of Crown—Colonial servant—Office held during pleasure.]—The office of Commissioner of Crown Lands, in New South Wales, created by the Act of the Legislature of that Colony, 4 Will. IV., No. 10, is not a patent office, though made under the Great Seal of the Colony, within the meaning of the Colonial Leave of Absence Act, 1782 (c. 75); but is an office held durante bene placito, & there is no right of appeal to the Queen in Council under that statute, from an Order of amotion from such office by the Governor-General & Executive Council.

The Colonial Leave of Absence Act, 1782 (c. 75), applies only to offices held by patent, for life, or for a certain term.

The Judicial Committee have no jurisdiction to take into consideration the propriety of the dismissal of a public servant by a Governor-General of a Colony from an office held during his pleasure, unless the matter is expressly referred to them by the Crown.—*Re NEW SOUTH WALES (GOVERNOR-GENERAL & EXECUTIVE COUNCIL), Ex p. 84. Military officers.—Dismissal at pleasure of Crown.]—The Secretary of War is not personally responsible for everything said or done by a Regimental Board of Inquiry; when a Board of Inquiry is appointed it is their duty to conduct it according to established rules, and if they do not do so, prima facie, the responsibility rests upon them; unless it is shown that not mere irregularities, but errors inconsistent with substantial justice, were brought to the personal knowledge of the Secretary for War.

Semble: the Secretary of State for War could only give evidence of the grounds of his recommendation to Her Majesty by first obtaining the permission of Her Majesty, as without that permission his oath as a Privy Councillor would have precluded his doing so.

If a public servant does an act in the honest discharge of his public duty he is responsible to his Sovereign, but not before a jury. The removal of an officer under such circumstances by the Secretary for War is not a judicial act at all. It is an exercise of the pleasure of the Sovereign through a high officer of State. The Sovereign has the power of dismissing any officer. He receives his commission from his Sovereign & holds it at his pleasure, & it is in the will of the Sovereign to withdraw it. It is the will of the Sovereign to exercise that power through respon-

SECT. 4.—OFFICIAL SECRETS.

101. What are official secrets—Information obtained through position as public servant—Not entrusted in confidence to such servant.]—C. a clerk in the War Office, handed to H. a director & secretary of a firm of tailors, copies of documents containing particulars of contracts between the War Office & contractors for army officers' clothing. Proceedings were taken against C. & H. by summons under the Official Secrets Act, 1911 (c. 28), in regard to the communication & receiving of the information.

The case was heard at the Westminster Police ct., & the magistrate dismissed the summons. Later the prosecution received the direction of the A.-G. to prefer this indictment against C. & H.:—Held: there was evidence that C. having in his possession information which he had obtained owing to his position as a person who held office under his Majesty, communicated it to a person other than a person to whom he was authorised to communicate it. It was not necessary to show that the documents had been entrusted specially in confidence to C., but it was sufficient if it was shown that he obtained the documents owing to his position as a person who held office under his Majesty. Where there was no ambiguity in the enacting part of the statute the words could not be altered or limited merely by the title "Official Secrets," but, even if this could be done, there was evidence that these documents were official secrets. Official Secrets Act, 1911 (c. 28), s. 2, applied to any document or information of an official character which had been obtained by a person holding office under his Majesty, provided that he communicated it to some person to whom he was not authorised to communicate it.—R. v. CRISP & HOMEWOOD (1919), 83 J. 102. ——— Plans not relating to or used in prohibited place.]—The Official Secrets Act, 1911 (c. 28), s. 2, sub-s. 1 (b), provides: "If any person having in his possession or control any sketch, plan, model, article, note, document, or information, which relates to or is used in a prohibited place or anything in such a place, or which has been made or obtained in contravention of this Act, or which has been entrusted in confidence to him by any person holding office under His Majesty or which he has obtained owing to his position as a person who holds or has held office under His Majesty, or as a person who holds or has held a contract made on behalf of His Majesty, or as a person who is or has been employed under a person who holds or has held such an office or contract . . . retains the sketch, plan, etc., in his possession or control when he has no right to retain it or when it is contrary to his duty to retain it: that person shall be guilty of a misdemeanour":—Held: in that clause the words "which relates to or is used in a prohibited place or anything in such a place" belonged to the first of the alternative provisions of the clause only, & were not to be read into any of its subsequent alternative provisions beginning with the words, "or which"; &, consequently, if a person having in his possession any sketch, plan, etc., which he had obtained as a person holding office under His Majesty, or employed under a person so holding office, retained the sketch, plan, etc., when he had no right to do so, he was guilty of an offence under the clause, notwithstanding that the sketch, plan, etc., did not relate to a prohibited place.—R. v. SIMINGTON, [1921] 1 K. SECT. 5.—THE MINISTRY AND THE CABINET.

104. Ministers of the Crown—Not exempted from attendance on subpoena.]—The ct. has jurisdiction both in civil & criminal cases to set aside a subpoena served on a witness where it is satisfied that such witness cannot give relevant evidence, & that the subpoena has been served, not with the object of obtaining relevant evidence, but for some ulterior purpose. Ministers of the Crown have no special privilege exempting them from the obligation of attending upon subpoena to give evidence.—R. v. BAINES, [1909] 1 K. B. 258; 78 L. J. K. B. 119; 100 L. The Lord Chancellor, sitting in Bkpcy., committed the solr. to the commission, for not obeying an order :—Held : (1) the Lord Chancellor had jurisdiction so to do, & that no action lay against him for so doing; (2) the Lord Chancellor, in an action brought against him for so doing, need not plead specially.

The Lord Chancellor has authority, in any particular case, to make an order altering the practice of the Ct. of Ch.—DICAS v. BROUGHAM (LORD) (1833), 6 C. & P. 249; 3 State Tr. N. S. 569; 1 Mood. & R. 309, N. P.

SECT. 8.—THE SECRETARIAT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

110. Petition to Sovereign—Petition of right—Duty of Secretary of State to inquire into claim & tender advice to Sovereign—Not examinable on advice tendered.]—An action having been brought against the Secretary of State for the Home Department, for not submitting to Her Majesty a petition of right left with him by pltf., it appeared at the trial that he had, in fact, submitted the petition, but, at the same time, had advised Her Majesty not to grant her fiat as prayed :—Held : this was a complete answer to the action, & no question, if objected to, would be allowed to be put to the Secretary of State touching any advice given by him to Her Majesty.

Semble : it is the duty of the Secretary of State to inquire into the circumstances of petitioner's claim, & to tender to the Sovereign his advice thereon; & the power to present a petition of right is limited to such matters as are cognisable in a ct. of law between party & party (*ERLE, C. inconsistent with them, & praying that his plea might be heard in one of the cts. of law, refused to submit the case to the Queen, as the question could not legally be tried before any ct. of law. Thereupon S. applied to the ct. for a mandamus to the Lord President to present the petition:—Held: as the petition did not refer to any judicial matter, but to a matter of state, the proper medium of communication if there was any under the circumstances was probably the Secretary of State & not the Lord President; & as, even if the petition were presented & listened to by the Queen, there was no judicial body in the country by which the validity of an Act of Parliament could be questioned, the ct. would not grant the mandamus.—*Ex p. Money for particular purpose.]

By a royal warrant booty of war was expressed to be granted to the Secretary of State for India in Council, in trust to be distributed by him or any person he might appoint amongst the persons found entitled to share it by the judgment of the Ct. of Admty. The warrant authorised the Secretary of State, or referees nominated by him, to give a decision on any doubts that might arise, which was to be final, unless within three months the Queen should otherwise order:—Held: the warrant did not operate as a transfer of property or create a trust; the Crown still retained control of the booty; & the Secretary of State, being merely an agent for the distribution, could not be made to account by those found by the Ct. of Admty. entitled to share.—*KINLOCH v. SUB-SECT. 1.—THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

A. In General.

122. Position, functions & powers of.]—I wish to say a word or two about the position of the A.-G., because in my judgment it is of importance in this case, & his position appears likely to be lost sight of. Everybody knows that he is the head of the English Bar. We know that he has had from the earliest times to perform high judicial functions which are left to his discretion to decide. For example, where a man who is tried for his life & convicted alleges that there is error on the record, he cannot take advantage of that error unless he obtains the fiat of the A.-G., & no ct. in the kingdom has any controlling jurisdiction over him. That perhaps is the strongest case that can be put as to the position of the A.-G. in exercising judicial functions. Another case in which the A.-G. is pre-eminent is the power to enter a nolle prosequi in a criminal case. I do not say that when a case is before a judge a prosecutor may not ask the judge to allow the case to be withdrawn, & the judge may do so if he is satisfied that there is no case; but the A.-G. alone has power to enter a nolle prosequi, & that power is not subject to any control. Another case is that of a criminal information at the suit of the A.-G., a practice which has, I am sorry to say, fallen into disuse. The issue of such an information is entirely in the discretion of the A.-G., & no one can set such an information aside. There are other cases to which I could refer to be found in old & in recent statutes, but I have said enough to show the high judicial functions which the A.-G. performs. There is one other matter to which I will refer before I come to the facts of this case. In Re Van Gelder's Patent (No. 128, post) the position of the A.-G. in these matters is stated in the judgments in the Divisional Ct. & in the Ct. of Appeal. I will read a passage from the judgment of Bowen, L.J.: "At common law, the A.-G. is, when he is exercising his functions as an officer of the Crown, in no case that I know of a ct. in the ordinary sense." It follows that his decisions, when exercising such functions, were not subject to review by the ct. of Q.B., & are not now subject to review by the Q.B. Div. or this ct. (A. L. SMITH, L.J.).—*R. v. 128. Not a court—Prohibition does not lie against.]—V. having applied at the Patent office for leave to amend his patent S. opposed. The comptroller allowed the proposed amendment. S. appealed to the Law Officer & the A.-G. then intimated that the amendment should be allowed. S. applied to the Ct. of Q.B. for a prohibition to prohibit the A.-G. from allowing the amendment on the grounds: (a) that the amendment if allowed, would make the specification claim a larger invention than that originally patented; (b) that the amendment proposed to be allowed had not been advertised. A rule having been granted. S. appealed & the Ct. of Appeal intimated that the owners of the patent & the A.-G. ought to be heard in the matter & directed them to be served with notice of motion. This having been done, the matter was argued:—Held: no prohibition would issue against the A.-G. in the matter.

The A.-G. is not a ct. He may have a judicial function to perform, but he is not a ct. & prohibition does not lie to him (ESHER, M.R.).—Re VAN GELDER'S PATENT (1888), 6 R. P. C. 22, C. A.

C. When acting as Counsel.

131. Control of court over.]—The cts. exercise over the A.-G. the same authority which they exercise over every other suitor; & the A.-G. will not, any more than any other suitor, be permitted to prosecute any proceeding which is merely vexatious, or has no legal object; but the A.-G. conducts the proceedings on a scire facias according to his own judgment & discretion, & may, when he thinks fit, stay the proceedings, or enter a nolle prosequi. The control which the A.-G. exercises is subject only to the responsibility to which every public servant is liable in the discharge of his duty, & subject to the jurisdiction which the cts. may have over him, upon a charge properly brought against him, for a negligent or erroneous performance of his duty.—R. v. PROSSER (1848), 11 Beav. 306; 18 L. J. Ch. 35; 12 L. T. O. S. 509; 13 Jur. 71; 50 E. R. 834.

132. Authority to appear presumed.]—The ct. will assume that law officers appearing for divers departments of state have authority to appear without requiring them to prove their instructions.—THE DICKENSON (1776), Marr. 1.

133. Precedence of—Over Lord Advocate of Scotland—In House of Lords.]—The A.-G. of England has precedency over the Lord Advocate of Scotland, in all matters in which they may appear as counsel at the bar of the House of Lords.—A.-G. v. LORD ADVOCATE (1831), 2 Cl. & Fin. 481; 6 E. R. 1236, H. L.

before him to show cause why their charter should not be revoked by order in council:—Held: whether the right of cancellation of letters patent of incorporation be now only statutory & merely a power, or whether the prerogative right still subsists, the bringing of an action does not clothe the ct. with jurisdiction to restrain the exercise of the power. The ct. has no jurisdiction, at the suit of a SUB-SECT. 3.—WHAT MAY BE PARDONED.

185. All sentences of punitive character.

The Chief Justice of a colony wrote two letters to a newspaper in which he discussed questions affecting the sanitary condition of the town. An anonymous letter was published in reply commenting in sarcastic language on the letters & conduct of the Chief Justice. The editor, who was also proprietor & publisher of the paper, refused to give up the name of the author of the letter, or the manuscript of it. The Chief Justice thereupon adjudged him to be guilty of contempt in publishing the letter, & also in refusing to give up the name of the author, & sentenced him to imprisonment during pleasure & to payment of a fine in respect of each act of contempt, & to further imprisonment till they were paid. He was released the next day by order of the Governor of the colony:

Held: the prerogative of the Crown extends to the remission of all sentences of a punitive character, & the Governor of the colony had power, under his commission, to exercise the royal prerogative in that respect. Re BAHAMA ISLANDS, SPECIAL REFERENCE FROM, [1893] A. —HOW FAR THE CROWN IS BOUND BY CUSTOM.

235. General rule.]—An information was brought against A. for some of the King's jewels which came to his hands & were detained by him. Deft. pleaded the custom of London that if any goods are pawned there they may be lawfully detained by him to whom they are pawned until the sum lent upon the pawn be paid, & that the jewels were pawned to him for £100 which was not paid:—Held: as nullum tempus nec locus occurrit Regi the custom did not extend to the King's goods & the King should have judgment for his jewels.

No custom binds the King for his person or goods, as pontage, murage, waifs, strays, toll, lapse, alienation of a villein before seizure; but otherwise of customs which go with the land, for these bind the King, as gavelkind, borough English, etc.—ANON. (1457), Jenk. 83; 145 E. R. 59.

By C.'s marriage settlement her husband had covenanted to settle all after acquired property of his wife. C. died without having become bkpt. or having assigned her interest in the legacy & having by will appointed the same to her children equally. The Comrs. of Inland Revenue insisted that C.'s share did not go to her children directly under the will but that her husband must take out administration to her estate in order to obtain possession of it. By consent the question was raised upon a petition for the opinion of the ct. under the Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859 (c. 35), s. 30:—Held: (1) by consent the question, although between the Crown & a subject, might be decided on this petition; (2) under the will the legacy upon C.'s death went directly to her children.—Re WARE'S TRUSTS (1871), 41 L. SUB-SECT. 3.—ROYAL PALACES.

242. General rule—Royal palaces & royal palaces also royal residences distinguished—What constitutes a royal residence.]—There is a distinction between a royal palace & a royal palace which is also a royal residence. Hampton Court Palace is a royal Palace but not a royal residence, & therefore is not exempt from execution within it of civil process. The sovereign does not, in fact, reside there, & the circumstances that the chief officials & the chaplain together with the house-keeper & the gardener are all appointed by the Crown & paid out of the civil list, that a pew is always kept in the chapel ready for the royal use, that certain apartments there are known as state apartments, though now used by Her Majesty's permission as picture galleries in which pictures the property of the Crown are exhibited to the free inspection of the public, that a guard of honour is always posted there, that the inmates to whom the sovereign has graciously granted the use of apartments hold such apartments entirely at the pleasure of the Crown, & could be displaced at a moment's notice, & that the grapes grown in the vinery are always kept for the service of Her Majesty's table, do not constitute it a royal residence so as to confer the exemption upon it.

A fi. fa. had been levied in some of the apartments in the palace:—Held: the sheriff was not liable to an information for intrusion.—A.-G. v. DAKIN (1870), L. R. 4 H. L. 338; 39 L. J. Ex. 113; 23 L. T. 1; 35 J. P. 167; 18 W. R. 1111, H. L.

Palace. In 1820 L., a creditor of S., attempted to force an entry into the palace for the purpose of executing in the apartments which S. occupied a pinding of pictures belonging to her. Being denied admittance he obtained letters of open doors. S. presented a bill of suspension & interdict. No Sovereign was residing in Holyrood at the time when the attempt was made to execute diligence, but the palace was still kept up as a royal residence:—Held: (1) Holyrood was still a royal palace; (2) actual residence of the King was not necessary to preserve the privilege to it; (3) an attachment of movables was a violation of that privilege.—STRATHMORE (EARL & COUNTESS) v. LAING (1820), 2 State Tr. N. S. 207, H. L.

245. What palaces privileged—From execution of legal process or arrest—Westminster Palace.]—A. & B. were cited by W. in the palace at Westminster:—Held: the palace was a place exempt from all ordinary jurisdiction, as well on account of the king's crown & dignity as on account of the liberty of the Church of Westminster, & specially at the time of the king's own presence there during the session of his Parliament, so that none might serve summonses or citations there & specially on such as were the King's blood, to whom greater reverence was due than to others, & the offending officer should be committed to the Tower of London during the King's pleasure.—NYERFORD v. Defts. pleaded that they committed the trespasses under the authority of a commission of sewers for tax assessed by the said commission:—Held: a distress cannot be levied for sewers' rates within the precincts of a royal palace occupied by the Sovereign, & Kensington Palace is within this description. Semble: the averment in this information did not sufficiently show the palace to be the residence of the Sovereign.—A.-G. v. DONALDSON (1842), 10 M. & W. 117; 11 L. J. Ex. 338; 152 E. R. 406.

One room therein was furnished as an office by the Comrs. of Works & another was set apart for the use of the deputy-lieutenant. The surveyor contended that the house was liable to assessment as an ordinary dwelling-house. The Comrs. discharged the assessment, considering the Tower to be a royal palace:—Held: the Comrs. were right.—Re WHIMPER (1862), 11 L. T. 88.

252. Arrest in verge of royal palace—No right of release in person arrested.]—Deft. was arrested upon a peace warrant at the Salopian Coffee House, within that part of the verge declared to be part of the palace by stat. 28 Hen. 8, c. 12, & carried before a justice, by whom he was discharged; & on his return was arrested in a civil action at the suit of pltf. It was contended that this arrest, being made under colour of the peace warrant to elude the franchise, was void:—Held: as it appeared to have been a contrivance it was the same as if deft. had been arrested within the verge of the court. But such arrest was not void. The person making the arrest was liable to answer to the person possessed of the franchise which had been violated; but the person arrested was entitled to no action.—FITZPATRICK v. instead of 5 per cent. A. obtained other licenses containing similar provisions as to "burnt timber," & cut timber under such licenses, but, owing to mistake and inadvertence, the returns furnished by him did not show that a portion of the material cut was "burnt timber." Royalties were paid upon the basis of there being no burned timber cut, & the Crown claimed for damages for timber cut by A. in trespass on vacant lands; in effect claiming the difference between the royalty for which he was liable under his licenses & the dues he would have been liable for had the timber in question been cut under a permit to cut the same on Dominion lands:—Held: the Crown was not estopped by the laches of its officers from claiming as damages a larger sum than already paid as royalties.—*GENELIE v. SUB-SECT. 4.—INTERLOCUTORY PROCEEDINGS.

313. Action for interim injunction—Whether Crown bound to give undertaking as to damages.]—The ct. will not, in favour of the Crown, depart from established practice; therefore, in the case of an action by the Crown to restrain defts. from proceeding to construct certain tramways, the ct. refused to grant an interim injunction against defts. unless the Crown would consent to be bound in the usual undertaking in damages.—

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR v. CHUBB (1880), 43 L. T. 83.

Annotations:—Distd. A.-G. v. Albany Hotel Co., [1896] 2 Ch. 696. N.F. Secretary of State for War v. Cope, [1919] 2 Ch. 339.

314. ——— —.]—This was an action brought by the A.-G. on behalf of the Crown against the assignee of a lease of Crown property for an injunction to restrain him from selling intoxicating liquors by retail in breach of a covenant contained in the lease. The ct. held on the facts that the Crown was entitled to the injunction, & deft. asked for the usual undertaking as to damages. The A.-G. refused to give any undertaking:—Held: the Crown, suing by the A.-G., never gives such an undertaking, & as a general rule, is entitled to an injunction without giving any undertaking.

Semble: cases might arise in which the ct. ought to refuse to grant an interlocutory injunction in favour of the Crown on the ground of the hardship to deft. caused by the absence of any undertaking.—A.-G. v. ALBANY HOTEL CO., [1896] 2 Ch. 696; 65 L. J. Ch. 885; 75 L. T. 105; 12 T. L. R. 631, C. A.

Annotation:—Refd. Secretary of State for War v. Cope, [1919] 2 Ch. 339.

315. ——— Action by Secretary of State for War.]—The settled rule of the ct. that in actions by the A.-G. on behalf of the Crown an undertaking in damages will not be imposed when granting an interlocutory injunction, also applies where the Secretary of State for War sues in respect of property vested in him or under his control or disposition, on behalf of the Crown.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR v. COPE, [1919] 2 Ch. 339; 88 L. J. Ch. 522; 121 L. T. 547; 35 T. L. R. 666; 63 Sol. Jo. 725; 36 R. P. C. 273.

316. ——— To restrain action—When rights of Crown involved.]—The Queen, as lady of a manor, granted to two licensees, in pursuance of certain manorial rights, power to enter the lands comprised in the manor & search for & carry away minerals, making to the copyholder & terre tenant respectively a customary compensation for surface damage. The licensees entered without the consent of either copyholder or terre tenant & began operations; whereupon the terre tenant commenced an action of trespass against them. The A.-G. on behalf of the Queen & licensees, filed an information & bill against copyholder & terre tenant, praying that the rights of the Crown within the manor should be declared, & the action of trespass restrained:—Held: (1) the rights of the Sovereign being involved in the proceedings in the action, the Sovereign was entitled jure coronæ to be actor in any litigation affecting those rights; (2) the injunction must issue.—A.-G. v. BARKER (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 177; 41 L. J. Ex. 57; 26 L. T. 34; 20 W. R. 509.

SUB-SECT. 5.—THE HEARING.

A. Trial at Bar.

318. Right of Crown to—Not affected by Judicature Acts—Interest requisite to support right.]—DIXON v. FARRER, No. 302, ante.

319. —.]—Trial at bar was granted to the A.-G. because the King defended the case.—BELLAMONT'S (LORD) CASE (1700), 2 Salk. 625; 91 E. R. 529.

320. —.]—The A.-G. may of right have an information exhibited by him, tried at bar.—R. v. JOHNSON (1725), 1 Stra. 644; 93 E. R. 754.

321. — Ore tenus.]—(1) The Crown may forbid the issuing of a writ of nisi prius in any action in which the King has an interest. A suggestion ore tenus by the A.-G. that the Crown is interested in a suit depending between subject & subject, is a sufficient ground for ordering a trial at bar.

(2) The estate of the Duchy of Cornwall is of a very peculiar nature. It is an estate vested in the Duke of Cornwall & when there is no Duke it is vested in the Crown. Whether the Duchy be vested in the Crown or in the Duke the Crown has a peculiar interest in it at all times.

(3) An ancient extent of Crown lands found in the proper office & purporting to have been taken by a steward of the King's lands & following in its construction the directions of Stat. 1 of 4 Edw. 1 will be presumed to have been taken under competent authority, although the commission cannot be found.

(4) An enrolment in the office of the Duchy of a lease purporting to be granted by the King vacante ducatu, is primary evidence of such lease.

(5) An enrolment in the Duchy office of a lease purporting to be granted by the Duke is primary evidence of such lease.

(6) Whether there be or be not a Duke there is an officer called the auditor of the Duchy who is one of the officers appointed to manage that property, whether in the hands of the Duke or the Crown.

(7) The conventional tenants within the assessionable manors of the Duchy have a perpetual indefeasible right to them & their customary heirs & surrenderees, to renew their estate from seven years to seven years.

(8) In order to entitle a tenant of this description to minerals the burden is cast upon him to prove that he has a right to take them, & unless the tenant can show the right to be in him the right must remain where by law it would be vested, namely in the lord.—*ROWE v. 338. ——— By deed—Estoppel in fact binding.]—Deft. bought the site of a house & garden on a manor to which Assessionable Manors Act, 1844 (c. 105), applied. She built a wall round the garden, & made substantial structural alterations to the house. The alterations were made openly, & the mineral agent of the Duchy was aware that they were being made. Deft. was also the owner of certain garden land adjoining two cottages in the same manor. Upon an information by the A.-G. to the Prince of Wales, claiming declarations of title to the lands & the buildings thereon, & an injunction restraining deft. from asserting any title to them:—Held: (1) inasmuch as deft. had made the alterations & additions to the house supposing it to be her own, & the agent for the Duchy, although he knew that she was making them, did not intervene, deft. had a good defence on equitable grounds to the claim of the duchy; (2) such a defence although based upon estoppel was binding upon the Crown; (3) the Crown is bound by estoppel in fact though not by estoppel action was brought by A.-G. against an electric railway co., to restrain it from erecting gas works in a city, & for abatement of what was alleged to be a public nuisance. Pltf. alleged that three bye-laws of the city prohibited the erection of the works. Defts. denied the validity of the bye-laws, & set up that, by virtue of the powers derived from another co., they were not subject to the bye-laws. At the trial, defts. sought to amend by alleging that the question of their having these powers was res judicata because of a judgment of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in a former action brought against defts.:—Held: A.-G. was not a party to the former action; & not bound by the proceedings in the former action.—A.-G. Whether set-off.]—An information was filed by the Crown against deft. for entering upon lands of the Dominion & cutting & converting to their own use timber & for money owing to the Crown for dues in respect thereof. Defts. claimed to set off sums due to them from the Crown under contracts of a greater amount than the sum claimed in the information:—Held: as the claim against the Crown arose out of the same contracts between the parties & as the dealings between the parties were so continuous & inseparable that the claims on one side could not properly be investigated apart from those of the other, the rule against pleading a set-off against the Crown did not apply.—*R. v. 340 ii. — Breach of trust by advisers of Crown.]—In an action by the Crown against Road Trustees to recover interest upon debentures purchased from them by the govt. of the late Province of Canada, with trust funds held by them belonging to the Common School Fund, defts. pleaded that the Crown was estopped from recovery inasmuch as, at the time of their purchase, the advisers of the Crown were aware that these debentures were being issued in breach of a trust & with the intention of misapplying the proceeds towards payment of interest upon other debentures due by them in violation of a statutory prohibition:—Held: as there was statutory authority for the issue of the debentures in question, knowledge of any such breach of trust or misapplication by the advisers of the Crown could not be set up as a defence.—QUEBEC NORTH SHORE TURNPIKE ROAD TRUSTEES v. R. (1906), 38 S. C. R. 62.—CAN.

342. Application of rule—In courts of Equity.]—A charity information was filed under Stat. 59 Geo. 3 (c. 91), without a relator:—Held: the ct. has jurisdiction to order deft. to pay the A.-G. his costs.

It is said that although this result may not have been in the contemplation of the legislature it is the necessary consequence of a general principle that the Crown can neither pay nor receive costs. I find no such general principle in cts. of Equity (LEACH, V.C.).—A.-G. v. ASHBURNHAM (EARL) (1823), 1 Sim. & St. 394; 57 E. R. 157.

343. —.]—The principle of the rule that the A.-G. never receives or pays costs will for the future be modified thus, that the A.-G. is not to receive costs in a contest in which he could have been called upon to pay costs, had he been a private individual, but the rule is not to be without exception. There is no general rigid inflexible rule in equity, whatever may be the case at possession of the parties claiming as heirs, the onus is on the Crown to show that the last proprietor died without heirs. It is open to deft. in such suit to set up jus tertii to bar the claim of the Crown.—GIRIDHARI LALL ROY v. BENGAL GOVERNMENT (1868), 1 B. L. R. P. C. 44; 10 W. R. 31.—IND.

344. In proceedings under Summary Jurisdiction Acts—Appeal under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43).—The ct. may make an order for costs for or against the Crown in an appeal against an order of justices under the above Act.

Where upon an appeal against a conviction upon the information of an officer of excise prosecuting for the Crown by order of the Commrs. of Inland Revenue the ct. had held the conviction right, & given the costs of the appeal to resp.:—Held: such order was right, & a rule nisi to amend a rule of ct. by striking out so much of it as ordered & costs of the appeal to be paid by applt. was discharged.—MOORE v. 351. To devise in trust for alien.]—Testator, who died in 1827 without issue, by his will dated in 1826 devised real estate in England to trustees upon trust to convey the same to the heir-at-law now in America his heirs & assigns for ever. In 1763 testator's eldest brother, A., emigrated to Philadelphia where he resided until his death in 1815. A. left an eldest son B., who was born in Philadelphia in 1773, & resided there until his death in 1833. B. left an eldest son C., who was born in Philadelphia in 1806, & had always resided there. R., who would have been entitled in case of an intestacy, & if C. were an alien, filed a bill against the trustees of the will & the A.-G., as representing the Crown, for a conveyance of the estate to him by the trustees:—Held: (1) the words heir-at-law were used in a popular sense, & the expression heir-at-law of my heir-at-law now in America described C.; (2) C. was an alien, & the devise in trust for him therefore failed; (3) the devise did not enure the benefit of the Crown; (4) the Crown being an unsuccessful claimant would be ordered to pay its own costs.—*RITSON v. A convicted felon who had received a conditional free pardon became entitled as one of the next of kin of a testator to a share in personal property:—Held: (1) he was entitled to hold it against the Crown; (2) as the A.-G. pressed the claim of the Crown & failed he was not entitled to his costs of appearance.—GOUGH v. DAVIES (1856), 2 K. & J. 623; 25 L. J. Ch. 677; 27 L. T. O. S. 181, 260; 20 J. P. 515; 4 W. R. 618, 757; 69 E. R. 931.

In a count of an information by the Excise, for twenty penalties the Crown recovered a verdict for one penalty only, & in another count deft. was charged with the wilful omission of an entry & the Crown had a verdict:—Held: (1) the Crown was only entitled to the costs of the witnesses necessary to prove the single penalty; (2) the Crown was entitled to the costs of all such witnesses as were reasonably necessary to prove that the omission was wilful.—A.-G. v. SHILLIBEER (1849), 4 Exch. 606; 7 Dow. & L. 236; 19 L. J. Ex. 115; 11 L. T. O. S. 273; 14 J. P. 7; 154 E. R. 1356.

363. — — — Question for decision one of novelty & difficulty.]—A charity held annually a festival consisting of a dinner followed by a concert. The donations & subscriptions procured at the festival were devoted exclusively to the funds of the charity, & the expenses of the festival were borne by the stewards & persons participating in it. Stewards not attending the festival contributed the sum of one guinea, & no question arose with regard to that contribution. Stewards & other persons attending the festival contributed a further guinea each, & in respect of the guineas so paid the Crown claimed entertainments duty under the Finance (New Duties) Act, 1916, s. 1 (1). It was conceded by the Crown that the dinner apart from the concert was not an entertainment within the meaning of the Act. The dinner was the main part of the proceedings, the concert being a subsidiary & separate, but at the same time, important, part:—Held: the concert must be regarded as an essential part of the festival & as a part separate & distinct from the dinner, & the expenditure upon the concert could not be looked upon as negligible, & as the guinea was a lump sum paid in expectation that it would secure admission to a concert, & it did in fact secure such admission, entertainments duty was payable.

One question only remains, that of costs. The rule prevails in these cases that the successful party, be it Crown or deft., receives costs, but I think here the proper order is that there should be no costs for these proceedings. The question for decision under the above Act is one of novelty & of some difficulty, & those who represented the Crown expressed themselves desirous of obtaining a decision upon it as a possible guide in other cases which have arisen or may arise (ROCHE, J.).—A.-G. v. McLEOD, [1918] 1 K. B. 13; 87 L. J. K. B. 89; 117 L. T. 631; 34 T. L. R. 29; 62 Sol. Jo. 105; 15 L. G. R. 881.

A considerable tract of land was allotted to him in accordance with the regulations but his claim to a still larger extent was refused by the Colonial Office. A bill was filed by permission of the L. C. many years subsequently for the purpose of enforcing his claim:—Held: on demurrer (1) pltf. was entitled to have the bill answered; (2) no costs should be given on either side.—*LAUTOUR v. 373. — Unsuccessful claim—To income tax deducted from annuities.]—Applt. co. carried on the ordinary business of a life insurance co. including the granting of annuities & had a very large annual income from interest dividends & rents, from which income tax was deducted at the source. The income from interest dividends & rents was amply sufficient to pay the annuities in full. The co. also had an income from premiums, but if the income from interest dividends & rents had been deducted from the co.'s revenue the trading of the co. would have resulted in a deficit. No formal appropriation of the income from interest dividends & rents was made in the books, nor was any particular fund specially charged with the payment of the annuities. In paying their annuities the co. deducted the amount of income tax due in respect thereof & retained the amount of the tax so deducted:—Held: (1) the co. were entitled to retain for their own benefit the whole of the income tax deducted from the annuities under the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1888 (c. 8), s. 24 (3); (2) the claim to the tax having failed the Crown was liable for costs in the ct. below & at the present hearing in the same manner as if the action had been between subjects.—*EDINBURGH LIFE ASSURANCE CO. v. Solr. was directed to appear for deft., & he accordingly became the solr. on the record. The rule was discharged with costs. Objection was taken on taxation that deft. was not entitled to recover costs:—Held: the Treasury Solr. was entitled to act, by direction of the Crown, for a subject in any matter in which the Crown has an interest, even though he has not a solr's. certificate, & deft. was therefore represented by a duly qualified solr. & was entitled to recover his costs from the prosecutor.—*R. v. The justices dismissed the informations but ordered each of the three defts. to pay a sum as costs which was in excess of the ct. fee. No application was made at the time for costs by the Inland Revenue officer. The sums so ordered to be paid as costs were paid to the clerk to the justices, who claimed to retain them on behalf of the County Treasurer:—Held: the Crown was entitled to the costs paid by defts. in excess of the ct. fees.—*A.-G. v. 380. Must not be enforced wantonly & without due regard to humanity.—Deft. the sheriff of Tipperary was engaged in suppressing an insurrection in Ireland; having received information that pltf. was the secretary of a revolutionary assocn. he arrested him & ordered him to be flogged, although pltf. had offered to surrender. In an action brought by pltf. no charge having been brought against him, deft. contended that by the severity of his system of dealing with the rebels that he had gained useful information & restored

The jury are not to imagine that the legislature by enabling magistrates to justify under the Indemnity Bill, has released them from the feelings of humanity, or permitted them wantonly to exercise power, even though it be to put down rebellion (CHAMBERLAIN, J.).—*WRIGHT v. 381. In time of war—Jurisdiction of civil courts over actions of military authorities ousted.—The members of the provisional govt. of a recently conquered country seized the property of a native of the conquered country, who had been refused the benefit of the articles of capitulation of a fortress, of which he was governor, but who had been permitted to reside under military surveillance in his own house in the city in which the seizure was made, & which was at a distance from the scene of actual hostilities:—Held: the seizure must be regarded in the light of a hostile seizure, & a municipal ct. had no jurisdiction on the subject.

Semble: The circumstances, that at the time of the seizure the city where it was made had been for some months previously in the undisturbed possession of the provisional govt.; & that cts. of justice under the authority of that govt. were sitting in it for the administration of justice, do not alter the character of the transaction.—*ELPHINSTONE v. Lord Coke & Sir William Blackstone, when writing on the laws of England, & when they came to speak of martial law, would have been wholly silent as to the power of applying it to the trial & punishment of civilians in times of civil disturbance & insurrection, if any power of so applying it had in their opinion existed (COCKBURN, L.C.J.).—R. v. NELSON & BRAND (1867), Cockburn's Charge 59.

386. Strictly limited to necessity.]—Deft. was charged with having, while governor of Jamaica, illegally proclaimed martial law.

It has not been settled what is the Crown's prerogative as to enforcing martial law; but it is by no means an unbounded, wild & tyrannical prerogative; & if martial law exists at all, it must be strictly limited to necessity (BLACKBURN, J.).—*R. v. 387. Validity of acts of recognised foreign government—English courts will not inquire into—Whether recognition de jure or de facto material.]—The cts. of this country will not inquire into the validity of the acts of a foreign govt. which has been recognised by the Govt. of this country. In this respect it is all one whether the foreign govt. has been recognised as a govt. de jure or de facto.

The Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic passed a decree in June, 1918, declaring all mechanical sawmills of a certain capital value & all wood working establishments belonging to private or limited cos. to be the property of the Republic. In 1919 agents of the Republic seized pltf.'s mill & stock in Russia. In August, 1920, agents of the Republic purported to sell a quantity of the stock to defts., who imported it into England. In April, 1921, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs stated that His Majesty's Govt. recognised the Soviet Govt. as the de facto Govt. of Russia; that a govt. known as the Provisional Govt. came into power in March, 1917, & was recognised by His Majesty's Govt., & remained in session until December, 1917, & was then dispersed by the Soviet authorities:—Held: (1) the Govt. of this country had recognised the Soviet Govt. as the de facto Govt. of Russia existing at a date before the decree of June, 1918; (2) the validity of that decree & the sale of the stock to defts. could not be impugned.—*AKSIONAIRNOYE OBSHESTVO A. 395. Who is privileged as ambassador—Councillor of legation—Acting as chargé d'affaires in absence of ambassador.]—(1) A councillor of legation of a foreign sovereign, who has the charge of the executive of the said legation, subject to the directions of the minister plenipotentiary, & who acts as chargé d'affaires in the absence of such minister, is a public minister of a foreign prince within the meaning of Diplomatic Privileges Act, 1708 (c. 12), & entitled as such to the privileges of an ambassador.

(2) An ambassador who voluntarily appears to an action brought against him in this country & who thus submits to the jurisdiction of the ct. is not entitled to have the proceedings set aside, or the action stayed against him, on the ground of his being privileged as an ambassador from suit.

(3) A foreign ambassador does not lose his privilege of exemption from suit by trading in this country, although his domestic servants

396. Not official agent under trade agreement.]—In an action for the price of goods sold & delivered deft. applied that the service of the writ upon him should be set aside on the ground that he was the authorised representative of a foreign state & was entitled as such to immunity from civil process. By the Trade Agreement of March 16, 1921, between his Majesty's Govt. & the Russian Socialistic Federative Soviet Republic, deft. had been recognised & received by the British Govt. only as the Soviet Govt.'s official agent, appointed under & for the purposes of that agreement, which provided that official agents thereunder should be immune from arrest & search, but did not provide for immunity from civil process:—Held: that as deft. had not been recognised by any competent authority in this country in any capacity other than that of official agent under the agreement, his status was insufficient to carry with it the immunity accorded to accredited & recognised representatives of foreign states.—FENTON TEXTILE ASSOCN., LTD. v. KRASSIN (1921), 38 T. L. R. 259, C. A.

397. Nature of privilege—Personal to minister—Exemption from customs duty—Ceases when goods transferred to unprivileged person.]—Foreign wine had, by permission of the Treasury, in accordance with the usual practice, been admitted into England for the private use of the ambassador of a foreign state without payment of the customs duty. The ambassador, upon his retirement left the wine in his cellar, & his agent instructed deft. to sell it. Deft. sold it without any condition as to payment of the duties by the purchasers & received the price & paid it over to the ambassador's agent. Deft. afterwards paid the excise duty, & obtained leave to pay reduced customs duty, but did not pay it:—Held: the liability to customs duty which could not be enforced against the goods in the hands of the ambassador, could be enforced when they passed into the hands of a person who had no privilege.—A.-G. v. D. Servants of Ministers.

(a) In General.

413. Privilege of ambassador not of servant.]—

(1) The privilege of freedom from arrest of an ambassador's servant is the privilege of the ambassador & not of the servant.

(2) Although an ambassador's servant may be privileged as to his person, it does not follow that all his goods are privileged also, so as to enable the sheriff to apply to set aside a fi. fa. issued against him.

(3) In order to exonerate a sheriff from returning a fi. fa. on the ground that deft. is privileged as domestic servant of a foreign minister under Diplomatic Privileges Act, 1708 (c. 12), s. 5, his acts of attendance on & actual bond fide service of the ambassador must be clearly shown.

(4) On an application by the sheriff to quash a rule to return a writ of fi. fa., it is not sufficient to show that defts. name is in the list transmitted by the Secretary of State to the sheriff's office, of persons privileged as attached to an embassy in pursuance of the above Act, but it must be clearly shown that deft. is in the actual & bond fide service of the ambassador.

(5) Semble : a chorister bond fide hired & paid by an ambassador to assist in the Roman Catholic ritual in his chapel for himself & suite & attending there to do that service is within the above Act.—FISHER v. BEGREZ (1833), 2 Cr. & M. 240; 2 Dowl. 279; 1 Tyr. 35; 149 E. R. 750.

414. Servants must be bond fide menial & domestic.]—There is no privilege to servants of ambassadors unless bond fide menial & domestic.—POITIER v. CROZA (1749), 1 Wm. Bl. 48; 96 E. R. 26.

Annotation :—Consd. Parkinson v. Potter (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 152.

415. "Domestic servant"—Distinguished from menial servant.]—Deft. moved to be discharged upon the Act of Parliament as a domestic or menial servant of Baron H., envoy from the Duke of M., & obtained a rule nisi. The words of the envoy's certificate produced by deft. were menial servant only, which was not within the Act, the words of the Act being domestic servant :—Held : the rule must be discharged.—TOMS v. HAMMOND (1733), Barnes, 370; 94 E. R. 959.

Annotation :—Reid. Carolino's Case (1744), 1 Wils. 78.

416. — Nature of service must be shown—By person claiming exemption as.]—(1) To be a privileged servant within Diplomatic Privileges Act, 1708 (c. 12), the party need not actually live in the ambassador's house.

(2) It is not enough that he is registered in the secretary's office as a servant.

(3) When he comes for the benefit of the Act, he must show the nature of his service.

(4) Qu. : whether a servant, who, as an infant was a trader but exercised no trade since attaining full age was excluded from privilege under the above Act.—WIGMORE v. ALVAREZ (1731), Fitz-G. 200; 94 E. R. 719; sub nom. WIDMORE v. ALVAREZ, cited in 2 Stra. 797.

Annotation :—As to (1) (2) & (3) Reid. Lockwood v. Coysgarne (1765), 3 Burr. 1676.

417. — Necessity of proof that servant not a trader.]—Diplomatic Privileges Act, 1708 (c. 12), does not extend to any servant who is a merchant, or trader, & the affidavit on which deft. moves, should show that he is no trader.—CRUTCHFIELD v. LOCKMAN (1734), Cunn. 97; 94 E. R. 1086.

418. — Cannot become bail.]—The domestic servant of a foreign ambassador cannot become bail.—LOCK'S CASE (1831), 1 Dowl. 124.

419. Wife of secretary—Not privileged.]—

Where the wife of a foreign ambassador's secretary was arrested upon a writ issued against husband & wife, the ct. refused to quash the writ, though the husband swore that before & at the time of the arrest, he was in the actual employment of the ambassador, & in daily attendance upon him in writing dispatches & other official documents.—ENGLISH v. CABALLERO (1823), 3 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 25.

423. — Defendant must swear to actual service in capacity employed.]—On a rule to show cause why deft. should not be discharged out of custody for being a servant to an ambassador :—Held : deft. should have sworn that he actually served in the capacity he was hired, & the rule was discharged.—BALL v. FITZGERALD (1730), 1 Barn. K. B. 401; 94 E. R. 270.

Annotation :—Reid. Carolino's Case (1744), 1 Wils. 78.

424. — —.]—Privilege from a foreign minister is not allowed, unless deft. swear to the nature of his employment, & to the actual performance of it.—FONTAINIER v. HEYL (1765), 3 Burr. 1731; 97 E. R. 1070.

425. — Defendant must be in service at time of arrest.]—On showing cause why deft. should not be discharged out of custody as a domestic servant to R. Minister from the Prince Bishop of L., he swore himself to be bond fide English secretary to R. and to have been bond fide hired by him as such & to have bond fide received wages as they became due :—Held : as he had not shown he was in service at the time of arrest he was not entitled to privilege.

The process of the law shall not indeed take a person out of the service of a public minister, but on the other hand a public minister cannot take a person out of the custody of the law by afterwards taking him into his service (ASTON, J.).—HEATHFIELD v. CHILTON (1767), 4 Burr. 2015 ; 98 E. R. 50.

426. — Appointment must be bonâ fide—Not colourable.]—It is not a sufficient justification to the sheriff for refusing to execute process, that the individual against whose person or goods it issues has the appointment of domestic servant to a foreign minister at our ct. & that notice of this has been stuck up at the sheriff's office, unless the appointment be bonâ fide ; and in an action against the sheriff for a false return, pltf. may show that the appointment was merely colourable.—DELVALLE v. PLOMER (1811), 3 Camp. 47.

427. — Acts of attendance & actual bonâ fide service—Must be shown.]—FISHER v. BEGREZ, No. 113, ante.

428. English secretary — Actually exercising office.]—Deft. was secretary to the resident from Venice, but yet was taken in execution. Upon affidavit from the resident that he was so, & that his name was entered in the Duke of N.'s office, though it was not transmitted over to the Sheriff of M. at the time he was arrested, & upon affidavit that he really exercised the office, the ct. discharged him.—WARD v. Annotation :—Refd. Carolino's Case (1744), 1 Wils. 78.

429. — — — — Actual bonâ fide service sufficient proof.]—It is not to be expected that every particular act of the service should be particularly specified : it is enough, if an actual bonâ fide service be proved, & if such service be sufficiently proved by affidavit, we must not, upon bare suspicion only, suppose it to have been merely colourable & collusive (LORD MANSFIELD).—TRIQUET v. BATH (1761), 3 Burr. 1478 ; 1 Wm. Bl. 471 ; 97 E. R. 936.

431. Chaplain to ambassador.]—A chaplain to an ambassador, if he does no duty in his house, is not protected.—SEACOMB v. BOWLNEY (1744), 1 Wils. 20 ; 95 E. R. 469.

432. Interpreter to ambassador.]—C. was interpreter to the ambassador to Great Britain from the Bey of Tripoli & being arrested for a debt, a rule was made for the parties against him to show cause why he should not be discharged out of custody, which rule was founded upon C.'s own affidavit, that he was retained by the ambassador to be his interpreter, for the wages of 30l. per annum, & upon the certificate of the ambassador that he was his interpreter :—Held : that it did not appear C. was a domestic servant & the rule must be discharged.

It was formerly thought necessary that a foreign ambassador's servant must lie in the house to entitle him to protection under Diplomatic Privileges Act, 1708, c. 12 (WRIGHT, J.).—CAROLINO'S CASE (1744), 1 Wils. 78 ; 95 E. R. 502.

The civilians were asked for their opinion; they agreed that an ambassador is privileged by the law of nature & of nations; if he commits any offence against the law of nature or reason, he loses his privilege, but not if he offends against a positive law of another kingdom. The common law judges gave no heed to the civilian's opinions but held that piracy should be tried on the Stat. 28 H. 8, c. 15. Semble: it would not have been a felony if the seizure of the ship had been on land for it is lawful for one enemy to take from the other.—MARCHE'S CASE (1615), 1 Roll. 463. ——— Necessity for strict proof of waiver & full knowledge of party waiving rights.]—A foreign diplomatist is, by common law & statute, absolutely exempt from the jurisdiction of the English cts. If it is sought to show that he has waived his privilege, the waiver must be strictly proved, & it must also be shown that he had at the time of the alleged waiver a full knowledge of his privileged position & a desire to waive it. The privilege being that of the sovereign state which he represents, it is doubtful if a diplomatist can waive his right to exemption & submit himself to the jurisdiction of the English cts. without first obtaining the sanction of his own govt.—Re REPUBLIC OF BOLIVIA EXPLORATION SYNDICATE, LTD., [1914] 1 Ch. 139; 83 L. Deft. a minister to this country accredited by a foreign state, had been surcharged upon his accounts in administration proceedings, & had failed to comply with orders for payment into ct. notwithstanding that he had instructed counsel to waive his privilege as a diplomatic agent, & pltf.

applied for leave to issue a writ of sequestration against the property & effects of deft. for the enforcement of the orders for payment into ct. It appeared that deft.'s diplomatic position had ceased to exist, he having, while he was minister by the direction or with the consent of his govt. expressly waived his diplomatic privilege & voluntarily come in under the proceedings & taken advantage of them to obtain an order against pltf. to account:—Held: the ct. notwithstanding the ambassadorial character of deft. had jurisdiction to make the orders it had made, including the order for the issue of the writ of sequestration.—Re SUAREZ, *SUAREZ v. 475. Right of Crown—To grant protection of cartel.—A cartel was appointed in time of peace by an officer in the East India Co.'s service:—Held: it was valid against capture in the event of a subsequent war.

His Majesty has a power to confer the protection of cartel. Notwithstanding he may have given away the interest of all captures to the captors he may still grant such particular exemptions as in his wisdom he may deem expedient, & when a cartel appears to have been employed in the public service & for purposes of national utility that circumstance alone will entitle it to be considered as an engagement sanctioned by the public councils of State. 483. State of war—May exist de facto—Without formal declaration.]—A Prussian ship, carrying a cargo of nitrate of soda which was contraband arrived off Dunkirk, to which port she had been ordered by the consignees of cargo, & whilst lying there waiting for the tide her master, hearing that war had broken out between France & Prussia, put back to the Downs, where he arrived on July 17, to make inquiries, but hearing nothing more, & being stopped by his owner, he put into Dover on July 18, & there getting intelligence, refused to proceed to Dunkirk. The ship was running under charter entitling her to be sent to a safe port. War was not declared till July 19, but was imminent on July 16:—Held: (1) the ship on July 16 was not bound to go to Dunkirk, as she would have been liable to penalties for trading with the enemies of her country & capture by French cruisers; (2) a state of war might exist de facto between two countries, although there had been no formal declaration of war by their govts.—THE TEUTONIA (1872), L. 480 i. Sovereign alone has power—To declare war—Delegation of right.]—The right of making war belongs in every civilised nation to the supreme power of the state, & although this right may be delegated to its inferior authorities in remote possessions, no subordinate authority has the power of declaring war without such delegation express or implied, or without a subsequent ratification by the supreme authority.—Re Kok (1879), 9 Buch. 45.—S. AF.

484 i. State of war—Evidence of—In British Dominions—Declaration or other manifestation by Crown.]—Held: until the King, either by express declaration, or by some other manifestations of his hostile intentions, has placed his dominion in a state of warfare, the state of mutual & reciprocal hostilities between any country & the British Dominions cannot legally commence. When such manifestation is made, & not before, the complete legal state of hostilities exists with all its consequences.—THE DART (1812), Stewart, 301.—CAN.

incorporated & registered under the laws of, & carrying on business in, the South African Republic, was insured at Lloyd's to be covered while in transit from the co.'s mine at J. until its arrival in the United Kingdom. The perils insured against included arrests, restraints, & detainments of all kings, princes & people. On Oct. 2, 1899, the gold while in transit was seized by the Govt. of the South African Republic. At that date war was anticipated between Great Britain & the South African Republic but hopes of a peaceful settlement were still entertained. On Oct. 11 war actually broke out. In an action on the policy:—Held: (1) plffs. were entitled to recover; (2) the certificate of a Secretary of State as to the date when war broke out between this country & another is evidence of that fact.

I think that the intention of a foreign govt. at any given time ought to be treated by these cts. for such a purpose as that I am now considering as conclusively determined by the way in which our Govt. chooses or has chosen to deal with that foreign Govt., & that where our Govt. has not treated the foreign Govt. as being hostile at a particular time our cts. ought not to try & ascertain what was then in the minds of the King President or responsible Ministers or authorities of the foreign Govt. 486. Effect of—On commercial relations.]

—A declaration of war by this country against a foreign power, imports a prohibition of commercial intercourse with the subjects of that power.

A plea to an action upon a charterparty made between a subject of this country & a Russian subject for loading a cargo at Odessa, stated that at the time of making the contract plff. was a subject of Great Britain & the vessel a British vessel, & deft. a subject of Russia residing & carrying on trade there, & that before the expiration of the time for deft. to load the vessel according to the charterparty & before any breach thereof a state of war existed & had ever since continued between the two countries:—Held: this was a

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

489. Regulations under Defence of Realm Consolidation Act, 1914 (c. 8)—Binding as statutes.]—

Applt., a foreigner by birth, became a naturalized British subject in 1912 & changed his name by deed poll in 1915 from Ernst to Ernest. In 1919 he was convicted under reg. 14H (1) of the Defence of Realm (Consolidation) Regulations for that, not being a natural-born British subject, he used a name other than that by which he was ordinarily known at the beginning of the war. He contended that reg. 14H (1) was ultra vires on the ground that it was not competent by Ord. in Council, issued under the Defence of Realm Consolidation Act, 1914 (c. 8), to deprive him of any rights, powers or privileges which were not at the same time taken away from all British subjects, & that the regulation purported to override an Act of Parliament, although there was no power under the above Act to do so:—Held: (1) reg. 14H (1) was not ultra vires because it discriminated between naturalised & natural-born British subjects; (2) regulations made by the King in Council under the above Act have all the force of a statute & may take away a statutory privilege or impose a statutory duty.—*ERNEST v. 494. ——— To impress mariners—Though not expressly empowered by statute.]—Whenever the public safety calls for it, the Crown has the right to command the service of mariners who have freely chosen a seafaring life & are fitted for the service. The right of impressing mariners for the public service is a prerogative inherent in the Crown grounded upon common law & recognised by many acts of Parliament. It is therefore a great mistake to conclude that it is against law merely because no statute expressly & in terms empowereth the Crown to press. A prerogative grounded upon general immemorial usage not inconsistent with any statute, nor repugnant to the public utility, is as much part of the law of England as statute law.—BROADFOOT'S CASE (1743), Fost. 154.

499. ———.]—The Crown is not entitled as of right either by virtue of its prerogative or under any statute to take possession of the land or buildings of a subject for administrative purposes in connection with the defence of the realm without paying compensation for their use & occupation.

In May, 1916, the Crown purporting to act under the Defence of the Realm Regulations took possession of a hotel for the purpose of housing the headquarters personnel of the Royal Flying Corps & denied the legal right of the owners to compensation. The owners yielded up possession under protest & by a Petition of Right asked for a declaration that they were entitled to a rent for the use & occupation of the premises, or in the alternative that they were entitled to compensation under the Defence Act, 1842 (c. 94):—

Held: (1) the suppliants were not entitled to a rent for use & occupation apart from statute as there was no consensus on which to found an implied contract; (2) reg. 2 of the Defence of the Realm Regulations, issued under the Defence of the Realm Consolidation Act, 1914 (c. 8), when read with s. 1 (2) of that Act conferred no new powers of acquiring land, but authorised the taking possession of land under the Defence Act, 1842 (c. 94), while impliedly suspending the restrictions imposed by that Act upon the acquisition & user of land; (3) the Crown had no power to take possession of the suppliants' premises in right of its prerogative simpliciter; (4) the suppliants were entitled to compensation in the manner provided by the Defence Act, 1842 (c. 94).—*A.-G. v. g. Defence Acts, 1842–1873—Tender of gross sum for absolute purchase of all interests—Possession of Crown.]—The Secretary for War, requiring certain lands for defence purposes, caused the lands to be surveyed, & offered ptff. & his tenants a gross sum for the absolute purchase of the lands. He subsequently took possession of the lands, which included a small portion of the holding of deft. H., a statutory tenant from year to year of ptff. The Secretary for War had obtained from H. a conveyance of his interest in the portion of his holding so taken, but the compensation for ptff.'s interest in the lands taken had not been ascertained by a valid arbn. Ptff. sued H. & all parties concerned for recovery of possession of H.'s holding for non-payment of rent. The writ having been served on the Secretary for War, a motion was instituted on his behalf, that all proceedings in the action as against him should be stayed:—Held: (1) the offer of a gross sum in respect of the absolute purchase of all interests was a sufficient compliance with the statutes; (2) the Secretary for War was lawfully in possession of portion of the land as trustee for the Crown, & as ejectment for non-payment of rent does not lie against the Crown, all proceedings in the action should be stayed as against its representative.—*HARVEY v. They were also authorised to acquire either compulsorily or by agreement any licensed houses in the area, & the course of procedure for acquiring a house compulsorily was laid down:—Held: (1) the operations of the Board constituted an undertaking of which the Board were the promoters within the meaning of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18); (2) as there was nothing in the Defence of Realm (Amendment) (No. 3) Act, 1915 (c. 42), to exclude the application of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), & the Board were not in the position of the Crown, the owners of the property taken compulsorily by the Board were entitled to have compensation assessed under the Land Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18).—CENTRAL CONTROL BOARD (LIQUOR TRAFFIC) v. In 1916 the Minister of Munitions took possession of the land for the purpose of manufacturing munitions of war, & buildings of a permanent nature were erected thereon by the State. In 1919 the Minister of Munitions entered into an agreement to sell the land with the buildings thereon at a price which represented the cost to the Minister of obtaining the land together with the agreed value of the buildings. Resp. had been unable to find other suitable land within a reasonable distance, & would have been seriously hampered in his business if he were permanently deprived of the yard, & he refused to part with the land. The Minister applied under ss. 3, 13 (5) of the above Act for the consent of the Railway & Canal Commission to the compulsory purchase of the land:—Held: (1) as the ct. was intended to protect the subject against any undue exercise of the power of the Crown to deprive him permanently of his property it ought, before exercising its discretion in favour of the Crown, to be satisfied not only that the conditions precedent, that the Minister of Munitions was lawfully in possession & that buildings of a permanent nature had been erected on the land at the expense of the State for the purposes of the war, had been fulfilled, but also that the application was on its merits a proper one to which to accede; (2) the compulsory powers given by the above Act were not intended to be exercised when the Crown did not require the land at all or where it only required it in order to sell it to some other person, & the ct. ought not to consent to the compulsory acquisition of land merely because a substantial loss to the State would thereby be avoided; (3) the ct. had to consider not only whether the proposed order was expedient from a public point of view but also whether it would work a hardship and injustice to resp. if he were compulsorily deprived of his property; (4) the fact that resp. would obtain compensation was not sufficient to justify the ct. giving its consent; (5) the ct. should refuse its consent. — MUNITIONS MINISTER v. 520. Requisition under authority of proclamation—National emergency.]—In Jan. 1916 a ship belonging to plffs. was requisitioned under the prerogative on the authority of a Proclamation issued in Aug. 1914. After the ship had been used for some time for Govt. purposes the Admty. chartered her to a firm of munition makers in America at a rate of freight less than the market rate, & claimed to pay the owners at Blue Book rates, which would throw on plffs. the burden of sea risks. The ship was injured by a sea risk without the fault of the Admty. on a voyage with a cargo of ore for the service of the American charterers. In an arbn. between plffs. & the Admty. the arbitrators found plffs. had accepted terms which threw sea risks on the owners, but they stated a case for the opinion of the ct. on certain questions:—

Held: (1) there was evidence to support the arbitrators' finding that the sea risks were to be borne by the claimants; (2) in the national emergency existing in Jan. 1916 the Proclamation entitled the Govt. to requisition the ship; (3) the employment of the ship for the voyage in question was not an improper use of the prerogative at a time when munitions were urgently needed; (4) the fact of the Admty.'s receiving payment for freight did not entitle plffs. to any extra compensation in respect of the voyage.—CROWN OF LEON (OWNERS) v. The Shipping Controller wrote a letter to the managers of plffs.' steamships by which he purported to requisition plffs.' steamships, the services of the managers, & the profits of the owners under reg. 39 BBB (3) of Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations made under Defence of the Realm Consolidation Act, 1914 (c. 8). The scheme contained in the letter purported to be mandatory in all respects:—Held: (1) the scheme was indivisible & must be judged as a whole; (2) no power was conferred upon the Shipping Controller by reg. 39 BBB, where alone his powers were to be found, to requisition the services of the owners, & the scheme contained in the letter was ultra vires in that respect, & the order contained in the letter could not be supported; (3) an action will lie against an officer of State whether he is the head of a Department or not, for a declaration that an act done by him is not justified by any Act of Parliament or State authority, & it is not necessary that such action should be brought against the A.-G. as representing the Crown.—CHINA MUTUAL STEAM NAVIGATION CO. v. 524. Compensation for requisitioned ship—To what amount claimant entitled—Difference between contract price & increased cost of replacement—Not for loss of services.]—Under a contract made in Dec. 1914 between a Dock Board & a firm of shipbuilders, the latter were to build for the former a barge of special construction. In Feb. 1917, when the barge was nearing completion, the Admty. requisitioned her, altering her construction for purposes of their own, & in Aug. 1917 purchased her for the original contract price to be paid by them to the shipbuilders. If the barge had not been requisitioned she would have been completed & delivered to the Board in Apr. 1917. Owing to difficulties arising from the war it was impossible for the Board to replace the barge by another of like construction in less than three years from the last-mentioned date, or at a cost less than three times the contract price of the original barge:—Held: (1) the Board were entitled to recover the amount of the difference between the contract price of the original barge & the increased cost to them of replacing her; (2) they were not entitled to any compensation for the loss of the services of the barge during the above-mentioned period of three years, the damage thereby caused being too remote.—Re MERSEY DOCKS & ADMIRALTY COMRS., [1920] 3 K. The owner claimed in a petition of right to be paid the free market rate. The Admty. claimed that the rates payable were fixed by an Ord. known as the Limitation of Freights (French Ports) Ord. 1918, & in any event the matter was not within the jurisdiction of the Ct.:—Held: (1) the terms of the Admty. agreement were not a modification of the Blue Book rates within the meaning of the sched. to the above Act; (2) the principles of the sched., being inconsistent with those terms, were not applicable to the suppliant's claim; (3) his claim for payment did not come within s. 2 (1) (a) of the above Act; (4) the jurisdiction of the Ct. to deal with the matter was not transferred to the Board of Arb'n. established by the above Act.

On Aug. 17, 1916 the Army Council delivered to a firm of raspberry growers a requisition requiring them to place at the disposal of the Army Council a quantity of raspberries & to deliver same to such persons & in such amounts as the Director of Army Contracts might direct. The raspberries requisitioned were in substance gathered after the date of the requisition:—Held: (1) reg. 2B contemplated the separate existence, as chattels, of the articles to be taken possession of & did not give the right to take possession of growing crops; (2) as the requisition upon its true construction was a notice of intention to take possession of the raspberries when gathered it was within the powers given by reg. 2B; (3) an exercise of the powers under this reg. for the purpose of procuring a substantial quantity of a necessary supply for the use of the troops was an exercise of the powers for securing the public safety & defence of the realm.—*LIPTON, LTD. v. m. What amounts to requisition—Whether presumed in absence of intention to seize.]—During war, a horse belonging to pltf., a British subject, was seized by the military & taken into a protection camp. No receipt was given to show that the property was being duly requisitioned. When the horse was seized pltf. was a rebel, unknown to the military. There was no evidence of any intention by the military to requisition the horse for military use:—Held: (1) in the absence of evidence of such intention, the ct. would not presume requisition from the facts that the horse, after seizure, had come into the possession of a remount officer, who had branded him with the military brand, had been used for military purposes, & that pltf. had been a rebel; (2) the ownership in the horse belonged to pltf.—JOHNSON v. VAN DER WALT (1903), 13 C. T. R. 931.—S. AF.

Army Council or Air Council or the Minister of Munitions the price to be paid in respect thereof shall, in default of agreement, be determined by the tribunal by which claims for compensation under these regulations are, in the absence of any express provision to the contrary, determined." It also provides that regard may be had in determining such price to other considerations than the market value of the goods :—

Held : (1) the reg. so far as it purports to deprive persons whose goods are requisitioned by the naval or military authorities of their right to the fair market value & to a judicial decision of the amount is ultra vires; (2) it is an established rule that a stat. will not be read as authorising the taking of a subject's goods without payment unless an intention to do so be clearly expressed, & this rule applies no less to partial than to total confiscation, & a fortiori to the construction of a stat. delegating legislative powers.—NEWCASTLE BREWERIES, LTD. v. 531. ————.]—The Food Controller requisitioned certain cattle feeding stuffs under the Defence of Realm Regulations, but whether under reg. 2B. or reg. 2F. was doubtful. By reg. 2B. the price to be paid for goods taken thereunder was to be determined by the tribunal by which claims for compensation under the Defence of Realm Regulations were determined, but was not to exceed a certain maximum price fixed by an Ord. in Council. By reg. 2F. compensation for goods taken thereunder was to be paid as determined by an arbitrator taking into account the cost of production of the goods & a reasonable profit. The maximum price fixed by the Order in Council had been paid.

The Defence of Realm Losses Commission refused to entertain a claim for compensation & the owners of the goods presented a petition of right claiming that the Food Controller had acted under reg. 2F., & that they were entitled to compensation fixed by arbn. thereunder. The petition was dismissed. On July 22, 1920, the suppliants gave notice of appeal. On Aug. 16, 1920, the Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), was passed. By s. 1 of that Act, "No action or other legal proceeding shall be instituted in any Ct. of law in respect of any act done during the war before the passing of this Act if done in the public interest by a person holding office under the Crown, & if any such proceeding has been instituted, whether before or after the passing of the Act, it shall be discharged & made void":—Held : (1) the appeal was not a "proceeding instituted" within the meaning of that section; (2) these words did not include a final judgment given before the passing of the Act, & therefore the appeal well lay; (3) the provisions of reg. 2B for fixing the price of goods taken thereunder were not ultra vires; (4) the suppliants were not precluded by that reg. from having the price of their goods fixed by the Supreme Ct. upon the terms of the reg.; (5) the suppliants were entitled to payment for the goods at prices to be determined in accordance with reg. 2B & to an account of what was due to them on that basis.—ROBINSON & Co. v. By reason of the outbreak of war the vessel was not able to complete her voyage, & she put back into a Finnish port. In 1915 pltfs. paid her owners certain sums in consideration of her remaining in that port until she could proceed to Alexandria without war risk. In 1917 while the vessel was still in Finnish territorial waters the British Ministry of Shipping requisitioned her & the cargo eventually arrived in England. Deft., the Controller of Timber Supplies, then took possession of her without pltfs.' consent. In an action for a declaration that the requisition of the timber was ultra vires & that, if deft. kept it, he must pay for it, deft. alleged that the requisition of the timber was justified (a) under reg. 2B of Defence of the Realm Regulations, (b) under the right of angary :—Held : (1) reg. 2B had no application to the case; (2) the requisition of the timber was good under the right of angary & full compensation must be paid to pltfs.—COMMERCIAL & ESTATES CO. SUB-SECT. 9.—RESTRICTIONS ON BUILDING.

536. Under Defence of Realm Consolidation Act, 1914 (c. 8), s. 1 (1) (e)—Regulation prohibiting building or construction work when total cost exceeding £500—Whether ultra vires.]—An order made by the Minister of Munitions under reg. 8E. of Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, provided that no person should, without a licence, carry on any building or construction work except where the total cost of the completed work in contemplation did not exceed £500 & the use of constructional steel was not involved :—Held : such order was within the powers conferred by s. 1 (1) (e) of the above Act.—PUBLIC PROSECUTIONS DIRECTOR v. On July 14, 1916, an order was made by the Minister of Munitions that on & after July 20, 1916, no person should, without licence from the Minister of Munitions, commence or carry on any such building or construction work as therein defined, with a proviso that where the total cost of the whole completed work in contemplation did not exceed £500 the licence of the Minister of Munitions should not be required :—Held : the reg. & Ord. were intra vires & valid.—BRIGHTMAN & Co. v. 539. Internment of British subject—Under Defence of Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914, reg. 14B—Regulation not ultra vires—Naturalised British subject.]—By Defence of the Realm Consolidation Act, 1914 (c. 8), s. 1 (1), His Majesty in Council had power during the continuance of the war to issue regulations for securing the public safety & the defence of the realm. By reg. 14B, of Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations made under the above Act "Where on the recommendation of a competent naval or military authority or one of the advisory committees hereinafter mentioned it appears to the Secretary of State that for securing the public safety or the defence of the realm it is expedient, in view of the hostile origin or associations of any person, that he shall be subjected to such obligations & restrictions as are hereinafter mentioned, the Secretary of State may by Ord. require that person to be interned in such place as may be specified in the Ord."—Held: (1) the reg. was not ultra vires but was authorised by the express language of the stat.; (2) a naturalised British subject who had been interned under the reg. was not entitled to a writ of habeas corpus addressed to the commandant of the internment camp.—*R. v. The ct. refused a rule nisi for a writ of habeas corpus in the case of a British subject who had been interned under reg. 14B, of the Defence of Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914, as there was evidence on which the Home Secretary could reasonably come to the conclusion that appct. had hostile associations.—*Ex p. 541. Prohibition from residing in or entering particular locality—Under Defence of Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914, reg. 14—Order by competent military authority on "honest suspicion"—When legality of order questioned by court.]—Reg. 14 of Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations provides that where a person is suspected of having acted, or of being about to act in a manner prejudicial to the public safety or the defence of the realm, & it appears to the competent military authority that it is desirable that such person should be prohibited from residing in or entering any locality, the competent military authority may by order prohibit him from residing in or entering any area which may be specified in the order:—Held: (1) where the legality of an order made under this regulation is called in question, the ct., in the absence of evidence that the military authority did not honestly suspect the person to whom the order was directed, will not interfere to protect such person; (2) the ct. cannot enquire whether the grounds upon which the military authority suspected such person were reasonable.—*R. v. 543. Arrest without warrant—Under Defence of Realm (Consolidated) Regulations, reg. 55—"Behaviour" prejudicial to public safety—Not restricted to matters actually witnessed.]—Reg. 55 of Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations provided that any police constable, officer of customs, or any other person authorised for the purpose by the competent naval or military authority, might arrest without warrant any person whose behaviour was of such a nature as to give reasonable grounds for suspecting that he had acted or was acting in a manner prejudicial to the public safety or who was suspected of having committed an offence against those regulations:—Held: the word "behaviour" included all acts of which the competent naval or military authority might be credibly informed, & was not restricted to matters actually witnessed by the person giving such information.—MICHAELS v. BLOCK (1918), 34 T. L. R. 438.

SUB-SECT. 13.—RESTRICTIONS ON COMMUNICATION OR PUBLICATION OF INFORMATION USEFUL TO THE ENEMY.

544. Defence of Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914, reg. 18—Not ultra vires.]—Appct., a newspaper reporter, dispatched from Portland to newspapers in London telegrams giving information as to the sinking of a German submarine which would have been of service to the enemy. He knew the telegrams would go through the Press Bureau, & supposed the officials would strike out anything undesirable. The telegrams were stopped by the Press Bureau & the information never appeared in any of the newspapers. Appct. was convicted under reg. 18 of the regulations made under the Defence of Realm Consolidation Act, 1914 (c. 8), s. 1 (1). On an application for a certiorari to quash the conviction on the ground that the regulation was ultra vires & the conviction bad:—Held: the regulation was not ultra vires & the justices were justified in convicting.—Ex p. DYSON (1915), 31 T. L. R. 425, D. C.

545. — Communicating information to enemy—Whether information true or false immaterial.]—By regs. 18 & 57 of the Defence of Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, made under the Defence of Realm Consolidation Act, 1914 (c. 8), it was made an offence triable by Court-martial to attempt without lawful authority to communicate to the enemy military information calculated to be or which might be useful to the enemy, & a person found guilty of this offence was liable to penal servitude for life or any less punishment, or, if the ct. found that the offence was committed with the intention of assisting the enemy, to suffer death or any less punishment. By the Defence of Realm (Amendment) Act, 1915 (c. 34), s. 1, the offence was made triable by a civil court with a jury.

Applt. was indicted for attempting to communicate military information to the enemy with the intention of assisting the enemy, the averment as to the intent being contained in the same count as the charge of the attempt. The question of intent was left to the jury, they being directed that it made no difference whether the information sent by applt. was true or untrue, & applt. was convicted of committing the offence with intent to assist the enemy:—Held: (1) the averment as to intent was rightly inserted in the count charging the attempt; (2) the question of intent was a question of fact & was rightly left to the jury; (3) it was immaterial whether the information communicated by the applt. was true or false.

547. — “Press offence”—Communication of information for publication in newspaper—Notwithstanding use of words “for private information.”]—Reg. 18 of the Defence of Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914, makes it an offence for any person to communicate or attempt to elicit any information with respect to the movement numbers description condition or disposition of any of His Majesty's Forces. Under reg. 56 (13), if the offence against the regulation appears to the Director of Public Prosecutions to be a “press offence” the case, instead of being referred to the competent naval or military authority, must be referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions to determine whether the case shall be proceeded with. “Press offence” was defined as “the publication or attempted publication or communication or attempted communication for publication in any newspaper or other periodical of any information in contravention of the provisions of these regulations.”

The editor of a provincial newspaper in the course of a conversation over the telephone with a London press agency said: “For private information. Putting a lot of troops at Deal & Sandwich all day; arriving all day; several thousands; expect some liveliness on sea.” Proceedings were taken against him under reg. 18 by the competent military authority without the matter having been referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions, but the justices dismissed the information:—Held: (1) it was a communication or attempted communication of information for publication in a newspaper notwithstanding the use of the words “for private information”; (2) the alleged offence was a “press offence,” & the case ought to have been referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions before the proceedings were instituted; (3) if it were possible on investigation that an alleged offence against the regulations might turn out to be a press offence the matter must be referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions to decide whether or not proceedings should be instituted.—*FOX v. Pltf. issued a writ claiming damages, an injunction, & a return of the documents seized. Doft. applied to have the action stayed on the ground that it was frivolous & vexatious & an abuse of the process of the ct.:—Held: (1) the fact that all the documents seized were not seditious would not be sufficient to prevent the ct. from staying the action where the great bulk of them were clearly of a seditious & inflammatory kind; (2) doft. had acted within the powers conferred by reg. 51, & the action must be stayed.—*MAIRE NIC SHIBLAIGH v. A person was charged before a ct. of summary jurisdiction with an offence under reg. 27 of the Regulations:—Held: (1) the limitation imposed by s. 11 of the above Act had no application, & the ct. had jurisdiction to deal with the case although there was no evidence that the offence had been committed within six months of the date of the hearing.—*KAYE v. 553. Restriction on use of "motor spirit"—Defence of Realm (Consolidation) Regulations 1914, reg. 8G.]—Reg. 8G of Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914, prohibits the use for certain purposes of motor spirit, & provides that the expression "motor spirit" shall have the same meaning as in Part VI., s. 84 (7) of the Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8).

Appls. were convicted by justices under reg. 8G of using motor spirit which admittedly came within the definition of "motor spirit" in the Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), Pt. VI., s. 84 (7). There was no evidence before the justices that the liquid was inflammable at a temperature of less than 73° Fahr. or at any other temperature:—Held: the conviction was right, since there was no provision in the Finance (1909–10) Act, 1910 (c. 8), that the word "inflammable" meant inflammable at or below any particular temperature.—*LLANDUDNO MOTOR & GARAGE CO. v. 554 i. Paper Restriction (Posters & Circulars) Order 1917—"Advertising circular"—What amounts to—Liability of bookmaker for causing football coupons to be printed.]—Under the above order:—Held: (1) football betting coupons, sent by a bookmaker graph 17, "No advertising circular shall be despatched by or on behalf of any tipster whether in connection with a game sport or otherwise."

Applt., who was a tipster within the meaning of paragraph 17, despatched to ten persons who owed him money for tips on horse races a typed document & nine copies taken on a duplicating machine, asking for the money & also referring to his business generally. On an information against applt. for despatching an advertising circular on behalf of himself, a tipster, in connection with sport, the justices found that the document was primarily a circular issued for the purpose of advertising applt.'s business of a tipster, & was therefore an advertising circular, & they convicted him:—Held: the conviction must be affirmed, as the document had been sent to several persons & was therefore a circular, & as there was evidence on which the justices could find that advertising was its main object.—*CASHMORE v. 555. Notice under Defence of Realm Regulations reg. 2M.—Requiring grass field to be ploughed up—No justification for ploughing public footpaths across field.—A notice under reg. 2 M of Defence of the Realm Regulations requiring a grass field to be ploughed up is not a justification for ploughing public footpaths running across the field.—DENNIS & SONS, LTD. v. GOOD (1918), 88 L. J. K. B. 388; 120 L. T. 88; 83 J. P. 110; 35 T. L. R. 93; 17 L. G. R. 9, D. C.

556. Forged document of foreign government—Sufficiency of certificate of competent military authority—Jurisdiction of magistrate—Defence of Realm Regulations, reg. 45 (1).—Deft., a Russian, produced to a police officer a document which purported to be his Russian birth certificate. The document was examined at the Russian consulate & the police officer was there informed that it was a forgery. The police officer reported to Scotland Yard that deft. appeared to have infringed reg. 45 (1) (ccc) of Defence of the Realm Regulations in having in his possession a forged document so nearly resembling a certificate issued by a foreign Govt. as to be calculated to deceive. The case was referred to the competent military authority in accordance with reg. 56 (3), to investigate & determine whether the offence was such as could adequately be tried by a ct. of summary jurisdiction. The competent military authority gave his written authority certifying "that I have investigated the above case & have determined that it is to be proceeded with, & have further determined that it is an offence of such a character that it can adequately be dealt with by a ct. of summary jurisdiction." Deft. was brought before the magistrate & charged with "having in his possession on May 23, 1918, at Vine Street Police Station, W., without lawful authority or excuse a document so nearly resembling a certificate issued by a foreign Government as to be calculated to deceive, against reg. 45 (1) (ccc) of Defence of the Realm Regulations." The certificate of the competent military authority was produced to the magistrate, but the magistrate took objection to the form of the certificate on the ground that it did not define the offence which the competent military authority had investigated so as to enable the magistrate to identify the case before him as the one which the competent military authority had considered:—Held: the certificate of the competent military authority was prima facie evidence that the provisions of reg. 56 (3) had been complied with, & was sufficient to give the magistrate jurisdiction to hear the case; (2) there was no merit in the objection taken by the magistrate; (3) the rule for a mandamus directing him to hear the case must be made absolute.—*R. v. Restriction on use of current gold coin—Regulation providing for forfeiture of "goods" in respect of which offence committed—Forfeiture of money included.—Reg. 58 of Defence of the Realm Regulations provided that where a person was convicted of an offence against the regulations by a ct. of summary jurisdiction the ct. might, in addition to any other sentence which might be imposed, order that any goods in respect of which the offence had been committed be forfeited.

A man was convicted under regs. 30E & 48 of doing certain acts preparatory to using £1,800 in gold otherwise than as currency, & an order was made for the forfeiture of the £1,800:—Held: the money was "goods" within the meaning of reg. 58, & the order for forfeiture had been rightly made.—*R. v. Neither the Crown nor the corp'n. were at any time owners of the soil of the port of T. & no consideration for them was shown:—Held: (1) the Crown is entitled except where rights previously vested would be interfered with, to create a port for the landing of goods, & to assign its limits, though the soil be in a subject.

(2) Such creation is a good consideration for the receipt of port dues issuing out of a neighbouring port.—EXETER CORPN. v. WARREN (1844), 5 Q. B. 773; 6 State Tr. N. S. 1104; 1 Dav. & Mer. 524; 2 L. T. O. S. 420; 8 J. P. 181; 8 Jur. 441; 114 E. R. 1441.

560 i. General rule.]—In prize, a British subject forfeits every right, which he would be entitled to in that capacity, by residence in a foreign country. If Great Britain were in a state of peace, during a war between France & Spain, an Englishman who inhabited either of those countries would be liable to have his property seized by the respective enemies, as much as the natural-born subjects of the country. His British allegiance would afford him no protection.

Persons residing in a country, reaping the advantages of the trade of that country, & contributing to the well-being of that country, must for the purpose of trade be considered as belonging to that country.—T. NANCY (1805), Stewart, 49.—CAN.

k. Letters patent from Crown—Conclusive.]—When the Crown has issued the letters patent in view of all the facts, the grant is conclusive, & a party cannot set up equities behind the patent.—FARMER v. LIVINGSTONE (1882), 8 S. C. R. 140.—CAN.

PART XIX. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

1. In general.]—A grant of land from the Crown to A. in 1805 recited that a prior grant of the same land had been made to B. in 1765, under the Great Seal of Nova Scotia, & that such grant had not been registered in N.B., as required by Act of Assembly, cannot by law take effect, & such a grant is to be construed according to the proper signification of the words; (4) the King's grant passes only what he may lawfully convey; (5) when a patent is capable of two constructions one of which will make it good & the other bad the former shall be adopted; (6) general words in a patent will not pass things which belong to the King by virtue of his prerogative; (7) if the King grant his reversion without reciting the particular estate or make a second grant without recital of a former one, it is void; (8) the King's grant cannot enure to a double intent.—ALTON WOODS' CASE (1600), 1 Co. 592. Non-recital—Crown as tenant pur autre vie —Validity of grant of lease for forty years.]—A., seised of a manor in fee, by indenture covenanted to stand seised to the use of himself for life, afterwards to the use of B. in tail, & afterwards to the use of B. in fee. It was also covenanted that if A. by himself or by any other should, during his natural life, deliver or offer to B. a gold ring to the intent to make void the uses then all the uses should be void. A. was indicted for treason & outlawed, & the Queen by patent under the Great Seal leased his lands to C. & D. for 40 years. The attainder was confirmed in Parliament & it was enacted that he should forfeit to the Queen all his lands, manors, etc. the day of the treason committed or at any time after, & that they should be in the actual possession of the Queen. The Queen by letters patent under the Great Seal, reciting the uses & proviso of tendering a ring, deputed E. & F. to make the tender to B. to the intent to make void the uses:—Held: if the Queen as tenant pur autre vie made a lease for 40 years without any recital or mention of the estate for life the lease would be good, but if she had granted an estate in tail or in fee such grant would be void.—ENGLEFIELD'S CASE (1591), 7 Co. B. by indenture enrolled bargained & sold the lands & all his estate, right, title, etc. to C. during the life of A., remainder to the Queen her heirs & successors upon condition. A. suffered a recovery, the condition was performed & the Queen by letters patent, reciting that the grant & remainder to her were by fraud & covin, etc. prout nobis satis liquet granted her remainder to A. in fee:—Held: (1) although a false recital of a thing in a patent which sounds to the King's benefit avoids the grant, yet a false recital of a thing in pais executed & not material, does not hurt; (2) a false recital of a thing which need not be averred is not material; (3) a recital which is true in terms is sufficient.—CHOLMLEY'S CASE (1597), 2 Co. general words in the habendum of the King's grant of the lands, being sufficient to extend to all the separate estates but implying one entire continuing estate, could not pass all the separate estates; (3) where the King intended to pass one estate, & the patent in effect passed more than one, the King was deceived & the patent was void & when, instead of one entire continuing estate, several estates in fractions were created by a patent, that patent was void.—*HOLLAND v. SUB-SECT. 3.—AVOIDANCE OF GRANTS.A. For Mistake.

602. General rule.]—(1) Respecting patents, the following general rules have been laid down: (a) every false recital in a thing not material will vitiate the grant if the King's intention is manifest & apparent; (b) if the King is not deceived in his grant by the false suggestion of the party, but from his own mistake upon the surmise & information of the party, it shall not vitiate or avoid the grant; (c) although the King is mistaken in point of law or matter of fact, if that is not part of the consideration of the grant it will not avoid it; (d) where the King grants ex certa scientia et mero motu, those words occasion the grant to be taken in the most liberal & beneficial sense, according to the King's intent & meaning expressed in his grant; (e) although in some cases the general words of a grant may be qualified by the recital, yet if the King's intent is plainly expressed in the body of the grant the intent shall prevail & take place.

(2) A writ of sci. fa. to repeal letters patent lies in three cases: (a) when the King doth grant by several letters patent one & the self-same thing to several persons, the first patentee shall have a sci. fa. to repeal the second; (b) when the King doth grant a thing upon a false suggestion he, prærogativa regis, may by sci. fa. repeal his own grant; (c) when the King doth grant any thing which by law he cannot grant.

PART XIX. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 3. —A.

602 i. General rule.]—A patent may be good in part & bad in part, & may be set aside so far as it relates to certain of the property included in it. In order that a patent may be set aside it is not necessary to show that some person is entitled to the land. It is sufficient that there existed claims or material facts which, if present to the mind of the Crown, would have influenced it in dealing with the land. It is not an answer to a charge of improvidence & mistake, that the Crown had in its possession documents which disclosed the claims or material facts, if these are shown not to have been present to the mind of the official when granting the patent.—A.-G. v. FONSECA (1888), Man. L. R. 173.—CAN.

n. Where grant made deliberately—On ground of mistake.]—The Ct. may set aside a grant of land made by the Crown upon a deliberate view of all the circumstances of a case, on the ground of mistake.—SIMPSON v. GRANT (1855), 5 Gr. 267.—CAN.

s. — — — Or improvidence.]—A patent may be set aside upon the ground of improvidence although no fraud is charged against the patentees.—A.-G. v. FONSECA (1888), 5 Man. L. R. 173.—CAN.

t. — — — What amounts to "improvidence."]In an action to set aside letters patent for improvidence under Man. Act:—Held: effect must be given to the term "improvidence" as meaning something distinct from fraud or error; letters patent may be held to have been issued improvidently if issued in ignorance of a substantial claim by persons other than the patentee to the land which, if it had been known, would have been investigated & passed upon before the patent issued.—FONSECA v. A.-G. OF CANADA (1889), 17 S. C. R. 612.—CAN.

fact that the patentee, in a letter to the land-office, stated his unwillingness or refusal to sign the patent papers, when he in fact did not sign them, does not show "improvidence" in issuing the patent, particularly when his object for doing so was to defeat the payment of taxes & hinder judgment creditors.—*R. v. time of Charles I. as a jury could not infer that it was in those under whom the party claims, from time of legal memory. (2) If the King made a grant which cannot take effect according to its terms, it must be concluded that he has been deceived in his grant, & it is void. Where, therefore, wreck was conveyed by lease for a term of years, which had not expired; if such lease be not recited in a grant conveying an immediate estate in fee to the grantees, such grant is void, because the King having already leased the right of possession, he cannot convey same right to another, & all leases from the King must be enrolled.

(3) Although the King holds lands as Duke of Lancaster, he holds them as King also; & the prerogative & privileges of the King belong to him with reference to those lands, as they do with respect to those which belong to him immediately in right of his Crown; therefore, a grant under the Duchy seal is subject to all the incidents of a grant from the Crown.

610 iv. —.]—M. made an application for letters patent of grant of land upon which Crown dues remained unpaid by a former patentee, in which no mention was made of a sale by him. In an action for annulment of the letters patent granted to M.:—Held: the failure to mention the sale in the appln. for the letters patent was a misrepresentation & concealment which entitled the Crown to have the grant declared void & the letters patent annulled as having been issued by mistake & in ignorance of a material fact.—R. v. MONTMINY (1899), 29 S. C. R. 484.—CAN.

610 v. —.]—Deft., in making application for a grant of land from the Crown, represented that the land applied for was "near" the town of S. when in fact it was in it. Also, that the land was "unoccupied & unimproved" when in truth, to deft.'s knowledge, it was then in the occupation of D., being a part of land which had been expropriated by the town & conveyed to D. for use in connection with works:—Held: the Crown having been induced by false suggestions & fraudulent concealment to make a grant which it would not have made if the Crown officers had been properly informed, the grant must be set aside.—*A.-G. v. 614. Covinous conveyance—By third party to King—To evade mortmain—Grant by King to cognisant party—Void.]—The Friars Carmelites obtained from M. for a habitation land, held by him of the Bishop of W.; & because M. could not grant them the land by reason of the statute of mortmain, by covin between M. & the Friars Carmelites to toll the Bishop of his seignior, which was the impediment, M. granted the land to the King, his heirs & successors, whereby the Bishop's seignior would be extinct, to the intent that the King should grant over the same to the Friars Carmelites, which he did accordingly:—Held: the charter should be repealed, & the Friars Carmelites should be distrained to deliver the charter to be cancelled.

He who makes the King, who is the fountain of justice, to be the instrument of fraud & covin, & thereupon obtains letters patent, they are void, quia dolus circuitu non tollitur. If the King is endeavoured to be made an instrument to toll the right of another, & to that end a man obtains letters patent, such letters patent shall be repealed. Although such covin & fraud was not contained in the grant made to the King, but appears only by averment dehors, yet the patent shall be repealed. Although the Friars Carmelites were of a profession of religion, & had not any habitation before, so that it seemed to be a work of piety & charity to provide an habitation for them, yet non facias malum, ut inde fiat bonum. Such charter, so obtained, was adjudged to be repealed by the common law (per Cur.).—FRIARS CARMELITES' CASE (1313), Y. B. 17 Edw. 3, fo. 59, pl. 58; cited in 11 Co. Rep. 73 b; 77 E. R. 1246.

Surrender of lease—Lessee having demised part.]—(1) The Queen by letters patent made a demise for lives in consideration of the surrender of a former lease also made by letters patent; at the time of the grant last made, the patentee had made several assignments & demises of the premises:—Held: the demise for lives is void.

623. — Alleged right of grantee to certain profits of office.]—The King by Privy Seal, reciting that unserviceable munition belonged to the Master of the Ordnance, granted it to him, & he thereupon sold it & died:—Held: such munition could not be claimed as ancient fees, the office having been erected recently & the grant was void, for the Privy Seal was made upon a false suggestion & the King was therein deceived, & the exor. of the grantee was chargeable to the King for the munition.—DEVONSHIRE'S (EARL) CASE (1607), 11 Co. 624. — Grant ex mero motu.]—A patent is void when the King is deceived in the real consideration that causes this grant; for when the King makes a grant by the word ex mero motu & yet expresses a real consideration moving his grant, which is false, now, since these are contrary & cannot stand together, the law shall judge upon the express consideration & shall not regard the clause of the form ex mero motu, which is clausula clericorum, but shall reject that, as the ct. does the opinion of the jury, when they find the fact, & conclude upon it contrary to law.—NEEDLER v. 626. Time at which grant to take effect.]

J. leased to M. a close of land in B. for 44 years; M. was attainted of misprision of treason, & so forfeited to the King, who seised same. The King leased same to R. for 21 years, & died: Edward VI. in the fourth year of his reign, leased same to P. to hold, after the term to M. ended, for 21 years: R. surrendered to Queen Mary, who leased same again to R. for 30 years:—Held: the lease made to P., was utterly void, for the King was deceived in his grant; for the lease made to M. was long time before determined by extinguishment in the person of the King, who had it by forfeiture upon the attainder of M. & stat. 1 Edw. 6, c. 8, did not help that lease, notwithstanding the non-recital, or mis-recital of leases made before, for it was not matter of recital, but matter of estate & interest, which was not well limited for the commencement of it in the lease to P.; for there was not any certainty of the commencement of it, for that lease could not begin after the surrender of R., for the words of the limitation of the beginning of it, did not serve to such a construction.—HOLT v. ROPER (1559), 3 Leon. 5; 74 E. R. 504.

627. Point of title.]—Grant by letters patent of two pieces of land called N. & W., containing fifteen acres in W., lately in the tenure of C., & formerly belonging to the late monastery of W., quæ quidem præmissa a nobis, etc. concealata et detenta fuerunt. The lands were parcel of the manor of W., & it was found by special verdict that the manor non concealata nec detenta fuit, sed fuit in onere et compoto; & the rents & profits, except of the two pieces of land called N. & W., were answered to the King before & at the time of the letters patent:—Held: (1) although there was a certainty in the thing granted, in the names, in the content, in the town, county, tenant & in the title, yet the quæ quidem being false, avoided the patent for four reasons: (a) the clause quæ quidem, etc. was in law the suggestion of the patentee; (b) it was a clause of restraint to restrain the grant to that only which was concealed, & not in charge; (c) the final intention of the King & Queen by the letters patent was, to reward the service of the patentee, & not to diminish any part of their revenue; (d) the words are in the conjunctive, concealata et detenta fuerunt, & the land cannot be said to be detained from the King; (2) when the King & Queen were answered of the ancient rent of a manor, although the fermors, or officers & ministers of the King suffered an intrusion into parcel of the manor, yet that parcel was not in law concealed nor detained.

(3) Ex certâ scientiâ imports the King had knowledge of the thing he granted.

625 i. Consideration.—Undervalue & false particulars.]—A., on applying to the Crown lands department for the grant of land belonging to the Crown, knowingly misrepresented that the land "was not valuable for its pine timber." At that time the lot was embraced in a timber license to B.; but, in ignorance of that fact, the Comr. of Crown lands granted the appln., & a patent for the lot was prepared, but, before its issue, the fact as to B.'s license was discovered, & thereupon the Comr. indorsed upon the patent a memorandum that "these letters patent are subject to the renewal of the timber license for one year from " a specified date. In an action brought by a purchaser of the timber from the patentee it was decided that the reservation of the timber so made was unauthorised & invalid:—Held: in these circumstances, A.-G. was entitled to proceed for a repeal of the patent, on the ground that it had been issued improvidently.—A.-G. v. —The King leased a manor & mines, & granted that the lessee should have the sole vending of alum, reserving out of the premises £10,000 per annum to himself, & £1,640 per annum to M.:—Semble: the grant was void, as it appeared upon the face of the grant that the King was deceived in the very substance of the grant, & the rent was entirely reserved out of the whole.—MULGRAVE (LORD) v. MOUNSON (1676), Freem. Ch. 17; 22 E. R. 1029.

630. — Grant in fee of chattel interest.]

The estates of B. were seized after his death under an extent, & granted by the Crown to C. in fee:—Held: the King's interest under the extent being but a chattel interest, the grant by him in fee was bad, & the King had been deceived.—TRAVELL v. CARTERET (1683), 3 Lev. 134; 83 E. R. 616.

Afterwards the Queen granted to W. the waste, & afterwards B. authorised A. to enter into the waste, & on his behalf to make election of the moiety:—Held: the grant to B. was void for uncertainty, but if a common person had made such a grant it would be good & the grantee might make his choice & reduce the thing into certainty.—HUNGERFORD'S CASE (1585), 1 Leon. 30; 74 *E. 648. ——— Reservation of rent.]—K. complained against B. in ejectione firmæ; & B. pleaded not guilty. It appeared that the prior of St. John's of Jerusalem had demised the premises to C. for 50 years at a rent of £5 10s. 11d., with condition of re-entry if the rent was behind in part or in all. The premises came to the King's hands by surrender; & the King granted one of the houses to the lessee & another in fee. The rent fell in arrear, but before seizure or entry by the Crown, the residue of the premises was granted to one in fee who made a lease to K. B. was the assignee of the exor. of the first lessee; & on his entering, K. brought trespass:—Held: it was one entire lease; but the King's grant was to be taken favourably so that no prejudice should accrue to him; & the land devised to his patentee was discharged of the condition, the residue of the condition remaining with the reversion in the King's hands.—KNIGHT'S CASE (1588), 5 Co. 649. ——— General words.]—General words in the grant of a manor are not to be construed against the Crown. Where a manor was granted with "tot, talia, tanta, qualia, aliquis alius unquam habuit":—Held: it was not a sufficient answer in quo warranto for using certain liberties within the manor to show that King Henry VIII. had granted the manor to Queen Catharine with these liberties for her life.—R. v. WHITE (1617), 3 Bulst. 292; 81 E. R. 244.

650. ———.]—Where, on the dissolution of monasteries, the possessions of an abbey came to the Crown, & the Crown subsequently granted all the tithes yearly renewing, with all their rights, members and appurtenances:—Held: the Crown being the rector, or in loco rectoris, the tithes granted must mean the rectorial tithes, or all the tithes except such as had been withdrawn by an endowment for the minister; but royal grants being strictly construed, the ct. would not hold the grant extended to the rectory, the rectory not being granted in express terms.

In ascertaining the meaning & effect of a charter, contemporaneous documents, proceedings in causes relating to it, & parol testimony, may be resorted to, in order to explain & give to the charter a construction, but not to contradict it.—SCARLETT v. 651. ———.]—Article 4 of the Union with Ireland Act, 1800 (c. 67), prohibited the creation of a new Irish peerage except so often as three of the Irish peerages existing at the Union shall become extinct. It further provided that "if any peerage shall at any time be in abeyance, such peerage shall be deemed & taken as an existing peerage:

& no peerage shall be deemed extinct unless on default of claimants to the inheritance of such peerage for the space of one year from the death of the person who shall have been last possessed thereof; & if no claim shall be made to the inheritance of such peerage, in such form & manner as may from time to time be prescribed by the House of Lords of the United Kingdom, before the expiration of the said period of a year, then & in that case such peerage shall be deemed extinct: provided that nothing herein shall exclude any person from afterwards putting in a claim to the peerage so deemed extinct: & if such claim shall be allowed as valid by judgment of the House of Lords, such peerage shall be considered as revived: & in case any new creation of a peerage of that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland shall have taken place in the interval, in consequence of the supposed extinction of such peerage, then no new right of creation shall accrue to His Majesty in consequence of the next extinction which shall take place of any peerage of Ireland."

Sir B. Bloomfield in 1825 was created a baron of the kingdom of Ireland by a patent which recited that three peerages had become extinct. Although no claim for one of those peerages for above a year after the death of the last peer had been put in, a subsequent claim to the peerage was allowed by the House of Lords in 1828. Consequently, only two peerages were in fact extinct at the date of the creation of Baron Bloomfield. Subsequently, four peerages of Ireland became extinct, & in 1830 a new baron of the kingdom of Ireland was created by patent. The question whether the grant of the Bloomfield peerage was valid was referred by the Crown to the House of Lords, & the House referred it to the Committee for Privileges:—Held: (1) the patent was valid, & the rights conferred by the patent on the peer could not be taken away from him by the revival of a dormant claim. Such revival affected only the right of the Crown to create future peerages. The right of the Crown to confer a peerage exists at Common Law, & could only be taken away by direct words. (2) The Crown is an exception to the general rule as to the construction of grants against the grantor, & grants to which the Crown is a party are to be so construed in favour of the Crown.—BLOOMFIELD PEERAGE CASE (1831), 2 Dow & Cl. 344; 2 State Tr. 653. ——— Droits of Admiralty.]—To constitute wreck of the sea, goods must have touched the ground, though they need not have been left dry. Goods afloat on the high sea though within low water mark if they have not touched the ground, are droits. Wreck of the sea is land revenue & is generally granted to the lord of a manor on the coast.

Semble: the Crown cannot lawfully grant droits to a private person. All goods found afloat & derelict on the high seas belong, as droits, to the Crown, in its office of Admty. A claim to flotsam is therefore, in derogation of the general law, & of that right, & must be clearly made out before it can be admitted. The construction of such a grant, at the suit of the subject, is to be taken most beneficially for the King, & against the grantee, whereas the grant of a subject is to be construed most strongly against the grantor.—R. v. FORTY-NINE CASKS OF BRANDY (1836), 3 Hag. Adm. 257.

654. —.]—During the Russian war one of her Majesty's ships of war, on her passage to O., fell in with & took possession of a raft of timber, having the Russian imperial mark painted on the several spars composing the same:—Held: such timber must be condemned as a droit of the Crown, & not a droit of Admlty.

Droits of Admlty., being by grant from the Crown, are to be interpreted strictly. It must be satisfactorily shown that the right claimed was granted under the Orders in Council of Mar. 6, 1605, which were issued to set at rest doubts as to the rights of the Lord High Admiral in time of hostility.

If a grant is made by the Crown of any subject-matter, in clear & express terms, the necessary conclusion is, that the Crown reserves to itself all that has not so been granted (DR. LUSHINGTON).—RAFT OF RUSSIAN TIMBER (1859), 5 Jur. N. S. 1109.

655. —.]—In 1437 an almshouse or hospital was founded & endowed by the lord of the manor of Ewelme, for thirteen poor men, two priests, for praying for souls & the education of youth, & the right of nominating the master was vested in the lord of the manor for the time being. Previous to 1513 the manor & the rights of patronage became, on the attainder of the lord, forfeited to the Crown. In 1618 King James I., by letters patent, granted the right of nomination of the master to the University of Oxford, for the support of the Regius Professor of Medicine, & in 1818 the manor, with all its advantages & endowments, was duly granted by the Crown to J. B.:—Held: (1) the rights of nomination & visitation, incidental to the manor, did not, upon the forfeiture by attainder, become merged & extinguished, but vested in the Crown; (2) the property, etc., of the hospital was not affected by stats. 27 Hen. 8, c. 28, & 31 Hen. 8, c. 13, but remained vested in the Crown as before; (3) they were not, in any degree, affected by 1 Edw. 6, c. 14, so as to vest the property in the Crown, as its quasi private possessions; (4) by the grant of King James to the University of Oxford, the jus patronatus had, de facto, been severed from the manor of E.; (5) by the common law, the grant of a manor by the King cum pertinentibus would pass an advowson appendant to it, & stat. 17 Edw. 2, c. 15, created a restriction as to advowson of churches only & did not apply to the present case of a lay advowson. Grants by the Crown are construed favourably to the grantor, & in such a case the usual rule as to the construction of grants is inverted. If it be shown that the King is deceived in his grant, it will not include a subject-matter not expressed.—A.-G. v. EWELME HOSPITAL (1853), 17 Beav. 366; 1 Eq. Rep. 563; 22 L. J. Ch. 846; 23 L. T. The whole number of such inhabitant householders amounted to 48,000:—Held: (1) such second petition did not necessarily deprive Her Majesty of the power to grant such charter upon the first petition, but such first petition might still authorize the exercise of the powers conferred by the section of the act; (2) whether the first petition was, under all the circumstances the petition of the inhabitants, was a question of fact for a jury & the determination of the Privy Council to advise the Queen to act upon such petition was not conclusive of its validity; (3) the grant of such charter of incorporation was an exercise of the common law prerogative of the Crown, although such charter extended to the new corporation the powers of the municipal act, which the Crown had no power to do except by 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 49; (4) the Crown might by its common law prerogative appoint the number & set out the bounds of the wards in such borough; (5) & might also delegate the power of appointing the first members of such new corporation & might at all events appoint a person to ascertain the individuals who composed the class to whom such charter was granted; (6) such charter might be granted to part of the borough from the whole of which the petition has emanated & need not be conferred on the whole of such borough; (7) the appointment in such charter of parties to make out & revise the lists, & act as returning officer at the first election under such act was good, & times for holding the first election though not agreeing with the times mentioned for the elections in the municipal corporation act, might be appointed by the charter.

(8) The Queen's charters are to be so construed as, if possible, to give them effect. The petition required to empower the Crown to grant a corporation under the act, must be such a one as can fairly be considered as representing the will of the majority of the inhabitant householders. If two constructions can be made of a King's charter, & by force of one construction, the grant may be good, & by another it may be adjudged void, then, for the King's honour & the benefit of the subject, such construction shall be adopted as that the King's charter shall take effect; & of reasoning if one construction will defeat the express intention of the charter, & another effect it, the ct. is bound

661. ——— After long enjoyment—Unless outside power of Crown.—In the construction of a royal charter reserving a rent to the Crown, which rent has been paid for a considerable length of time, the ct. ought to adopt a construction consistent with the grant falling within the powers of the Crown rather than one which would make the grant in excess of the royal prerogative, & to assume unless there is clear evidence to the contrary, that the state of things at the date of the charter was such as to make the grant of it within the powers of the Crown.

In 1628 Charles I. granted to the predecessor of deft. a charter, part of the term of which was contemporaneous with a former charter & part contemporaneous with the term of a charter of 1638, & thereby he granted to the predecessor certain exclusive rights of navigation in the Ouse & the right to take tolls in respect thereof. This charter had never been put in force:—Held: if the acceptance of the later charter did not affect a surrender of the former by operation of law, the ct. could, if necessary presume a lost surrender.—A.-G. v. It is no objection to his agent's recovering for his use, that the loss is occasioned by the act of the hostile trader's own state from whose acts he separated himself by engaging in the traffic thus licensed. Licences to trade with an enemy are to be construed liberally, & not, like grants of property from the Crown, strictly, & therefore, although the agent, in obtaining the licence did not represent to the Privy Council that he applied on behalf of an hostile trader, the concealment did not vacate the licence, or vitiate the policy.—FLINDT v. 678. Followed by particular words.]—The Crown made a grant of a free Chapel with its appurtenances & also all tithe lands in A. & tithes there, & two other named closes & tithes in other places:—Held: the grant did not pass tithes except in A. The Crown expressed its intent in the grant & confirmed it by particularizing. Where

Where the Crown grants a manor & closes which are appurtenant thereto, the particularisation of a close is not material, because all closes that are parcel of the manor pass; so the grant of a rectory & the tithes of such & such a place passes all the rectory because natural parts of a manor, but a rectory & tithes are not natural parts of a chapel although they are appurtenant by usage.—*GRAHAM v. 680. Apparently limited by later charter—But no inconsistency.]—The charters of the city of London vest in that body fines for misdemeanors committed within the city, though imposed or adjudged by the Ct. of K. B., sitting in banc at Westminster, after a trial at the sittings at Guildhall.

Taking the charter of Charles I. by itself, the grant may appear to be more limited, but at all events, as that of Hen. VI. is not shown to have been surrendered, its comprehensive words will not be affected by the more limited but not inconsistent terms of the latter (LORD LYNTHURST, C.B.).—*R. v. 676 ii. —Public lands—No reservation.]—Where the Crown, having authority to sell, agrees to sell & convey public lands, & the contract is not controlled by some law affecting such lands, & there is no stipulation to the contrary, express or implied, the purchaser is entitled to a grant conveying such mines & minerals as pass without express words.—R. v. CANADIAN COAL & COLONIZATION CO. (1892), 24 S. C. R. 713; 3 Exch. C. R. 157.—CAN.

of land from the Crown without any express reservations gold & silver do not pass.—KENNEDY v. INMAN [1920], 1 W. W. R. 533; 51 D. L. R. 155; 15 Alta. L. R. 196.—CAN.

684 ii. Effect of
Though an ordinary Crown grant of land does not of itself convey to the grantee the Royal metals in the land, or prevent the Crown from working or authorising others to work them, yet the effect of the mining legislation of the colony is that the Crown has given up the prerogative right to mine for gold on Crown-granted land.—*AITKEN v. 687. Not forest.—A subject can own a forest by special words of grant but not by a general grant of forest.—JENNINGS v. ROCKE (1620), Palm. 93; 81 E. R. 994.

688. —.]—R. v. BRIDGES, No. 873, post.

689. "All other liberties"—Not forestal rights.—A grant of exemption from forestal duties, does not pass the forestal rights from which those duties spring. A grant of a manor to A. with particular words of reference to a previous grant to B. as "with all liberties etc. etc. etc. which B. had"—"in as full & ample manner as B. held & enjoyed etc. etc." is not sufficient to pass forestal rights, which had been granted to, & enjoyed by B. without express words. A decision in Eyre against a former grantee & submitted to by him, if followed by conformable usage is conclusive on those claiming under him.—A.-G. v. DOWNSHIRE (MARQUIS) (1816), 5 Price, 269; 146 E. R. 605.

Annotation:—Reid. R. v. Capper (1817), 5 Price, 217.

690. "All other tithes"—Whether common law rights of other owners affected.—A grant from the Crown containing general words such as "all other tithes" is not sufficient to bar the right of a person entitled at common law, such as the right of the rector to tithes, unless it had been expressly stated in the grant what was the right of the Crown.—EKINS v. DORMER (1747), 3 Atk. 534; 26 E. R. 1108, L. C.

691. "Tithes & hereditaments"—Not tithes in gross.—The King in right of his Crown has a general right to the tithes of all lands situate in extra-parochial places.

The words tithes & hereditaments occurring amongst words of general description in a grant, after a particular description of the thing intended to be passed will not pass tithes in gross.—A.-G. v. HARDLEY (LORD) (1820), 8 Price, 39; Dan. 271; 146 E. R. 1124.

Annotation:—Mentd. Chapman v. Gatcombe (1836), 2 Scott, 738.

692. Not wreck.—ALCOCK v. COOKE, No. 612, ante.

693. "Franchises"—Not treasure trove.—Where gold or silver articles whose owner is unknown are found buried & lying all together in one place, the presumption is that they were intentionally hidden for the benefit of the depositor & they are therefore treasure trove.

Treasure trove, being one of the jura regalia which belong to the King by virtue of his Royal prerogative, cannot be claimed under the general grant of franchises in a Royal charter, but must itself be expressly granted; although, when so granted, it becomes a franchise in the grantee.

A franchise is a royal privilege, or branch of the King's prerogative, subsisting in a subject by a grant from the Crown. So long as it is attached to the Crown it is called prerogative, but when granted to a subject it is called franchise. Privileges, accordingly, that belong to the King by virtue of his prerogative, for example, the right to treasure trove, cannot pass in a royal grant under the word franchise.—A.-G. v. BRITISH MUSEUM TRUSTEES, [1903] 2 Ch. 598; 72 L. J. Ch. 743; 88 L. T. 858; 51 W. R. 582; 19 T. L. R.

Grants of franchises generally.—See Sect. 6, post.

C. By Particular Words.

694. "Appurtenances"—Land occupied with house.—A grant from the Crown of a house cum pertinentiis will pass land that was occupied with the house.—JENNINGS v. LAKE (1629), Cro. Car. 168; 79 E. R. 747.

695. — All appurtenances—Although not expressly recited.—WIGGON v. BRANTHWAIT, No. 672, ante.

696. — Toll.—Where the King, before the time of legal memory, was entitled to the soil of the town of C. & to toll traverse within it, & afterwards granted to the burgesses of the town, "the town of C. with all its appurtenances": these words are sufficient to pass the toll.—BRETT v. BEALIES (1829), Mood. & M. 416; subsequent proceedings (1830), 10 B. & C. 508.

Annotations:—Mentd. Boaumont v. Mountain (1834), 10 Bing. 404; Woodward v. Cotton (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 44; Plin v. Curell (1840), 6 M. & W. 234; *Beaufort v. 697. — Advowson.—The Comrs. of Woods & Forests, having power under 57 Geo. 3, c. 97, to make sale of any royalties, honours, hundreds, manors, lordships, or franchises, or any rights, members, or appurtenances thereof, belonging to the Crown, within the ordering & survey of the Exchequer, contracted for the sale of the Crown manor of E., & all cts. baron, cts. leet, & all fines, reliefs, rents, profits, waifs, strays, doelands, & all other rights, members, emoluments, & appurtenances thereunto belonging:—Held: this being in effect a contract for sale by the Crown, the advowson of E., which was appendant to the manor, did not pass under the contract & consequently, the purchaser was bound to take a conveyance of the manor without the advowson. Semble: if the contract had been between subject & subject, the advowson would have passed; although, at the time of the contract, it was not known by either party to be appendant to the manor, & therefore the sale of it was not in their contemplation.

Under 57 Geo. 3, c. 97, & the Crown Lands Act, 1829 (c. 50), the issuing of a special warrant from the Treasury to the Comrs. of Woods & Forests is not a condition precedent to the making of any contract between the Comrs. & the purchaser of Crown lands; it is sufficient if a special warrant be obtained before certificates of sale are granted a. "All mines"—Not Royal mines.—A grant including in the description "all mines" will not pass Royal mines.—WOOLEY v. IRONSTONE HILL LEAD GOLD MINING CO. (1875), 1 V. L. R. 237.—AUS.

b. "As trustees"—No beneficial interest.—A Crown grant was issued to six natives in respect of land, the habendum being "to hold unto" the natives "as trustees" of a reserve as a site for a church:—Held: the words "as trustees" governed the whole grant & left no room for any beneficial interest, & that the whole of the land was granted to be held on the public charitable trust expressed in the grant.—Re HONE TURKIE, [1920] N. Z. L. R. 733.—N.Z.

c. "Bank or edge" of lake.—

Where a grant from the Crown to B. was described as beginning at a stake standing on the "bank or edge" of a lake, & thence south, etc., to a stake standing on the westerly "bank or edge" of the lake, & thence following the several courses of the "bank or edge," to the place of beginning:—Held: the words "bank or edge" were intended to express the margin, & made the water's edge the boundary

722. "Waste land"—Not gold or silver thereunder.]—A grant of waste lands in Victoria, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 36, & made before the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 55, does not transfer to the grantee the gold & silver that may be found under the lands so granted.—WOOLLEY v. A.-G. OF VICTORIA (1877), 2 App. Cas. 163; 46 L. J. P. C. 18; 36 L. T. 121; 25 W. R. 852, P. C.

723. Wreck—Not goods that have not touched ground.]—R. v. FORTY-NINE CASKS OF BRANDY, No. 653, ante.

724. — Seashore between high & low water mark.]—A grant of wreck to the lord of the manor is strong evidence of a grant of the sea shore between high & low water mark:—Held: the right of soil between high & low water mark was in the lord of the manor. The grant of the wreck was almost conclusive evidence that with it the sea shore was included.—CALMADY v. ROWE (1844), 6 C. B. 861; 4 L. T. O. S. 96; 136 E. R. 1487.

726. Grant of park with fee for exercising office—Park disparked.]—The King by patent granted the custody of a park to A. for life, & granted a fee for the exercise of it to be received by the hands of a bailiff of one of the King's manors:—Held: if the King disparked the park the fee would remain.—ANON. (1561), Jenk. 225; 145 E. R. 156.

Power of Crown to make grants of offices.]—See Sect. 5, sub-sect. 8, post.

E. Exceptions and Reservations.

727. Grant of all land of manor—Exception of deer & large trees in manor & park—Whether park passes.]—A question arose over the construction of a Crown grant by Queen Elizabeth purporting to grant to W. all lands belonging to the manor & hundred of O. except all deer & large trees in the manor & park, the park having been referred to in connection with the office of Park-Keeper, but there was no exception of the park from the grant:—Held: though the park as a royal franchise would not have passed under a general grant of lands yet by reason of the express exception of deer therein it was deemed to pass.—ZOUCH (LORD) v. MOORE (1624), 2 Roll. Rep. 274; 81 E. R. 795.

728. Grant of rectory—Exception of all churches & vicarages belonging thereto—Perpetual curacy not within exception.]—The grant of a rectory by the Crown contained an exception of all churches & vicarages thereto belonging:—Held: a perpetual curacy belonging to the rectory passed by the grant, not being included in the exception.—ARTINGTON v. CHESTER (BP.) (1790), 1 Hy. Bl. 418; 126 E. R. 243.

PART XIX. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.—E.

1. Reservation larger than instructions.]—The construction of a Crown grant cannot be limited by Royal instructions, directing the governor of a province to reserve to the Crown certain minerals. If the exception is larger than the instructions authorised, it may be a ground for repealing the grant, or the grantee may refuse to receive it, but the Crown may ratify the act of the Governor.—GESNER v. CAIRNS (1853), 7 N. B. R. (2 All.) 595. —CAN.

g. Grant of land—Reservation of right to resume.]—A reservation in a Crown grant of land of a right to resume any quantity thereof not exceeding 10 acres, as may be required for public purposes, does not constitute an exception repugnant to the grant. Such reservation when carried into effect operates as a defeasance.—COOPER v. STUART (1889), 14 App. Cas. 286; 5 N. S. W. W. N. 133, P. C. —AUS.

k. — — — Reserving right of entry for defence purposes—Whether grantee may dedicate for highway.]—Land was granted to corpn. of J., reserving a right to the Crown to enter at any time & erect barracks, batteries, etc.:—Held: this did not prevent corpn. from dedicating a part of the land to the public for a highway.—R. v.*

DEANE (1851), 7 N. B. R. (2 All.) 233. —CAN.

l. — — — Reservation of all mines & minerals—Includes mineral oils.]—In a grant from the Crown, all "mines & minerals" were reserved:—Held: "mineral oils" come within the reservation of "minerals."—Re MACKENZIE & MANN & FOLEY (1909), 10 W. L. R. 668. —CAN.

m. — — — Reservation of gold, silver, & coal—Whether vein of coal passes.]—A grant from the Crown reserved all mines of gold & silver, & of coals, with full & free liberty & power to search for, dig, & take away the same:—Held: veins of coal were excepted from the grant.—A.-G. v. BROWN (1847), 2 N. S. W. S. C. R. App. 30. —AUS

n. — — — Reservation of merchantable timber—Whether more than a license to enter & cut timber.]—A grant of land contained a reservation to the Crown or its agents of all merchantable timber:—Held: the reservation was merely a license to enter & cut the timber.—MACCRIMMON v. SMITH (1906), 12 B. C. R. 377; 3 W. L. R. 154. —CAN.

o. — — — Reservation of public road—Whether more than road in actual use.]—A Crown grant of land reserved a public road 21 links wide through the land granted. At the date of the grant a well-recognised & defined road, following the natural & only practicable line, was in use by the public:—

Held: grant only reserved the road actually in use.—WELLINGTON CORPN. v. PLIMMER & WELLINGTON DISTRICT LAND REGISTRAR (1903), 22 N. Z. L. R. 632. —N.Z.

p. — — — — —.]—The condition in grants of Crown land that all roads & thoroughfares shall remain free & uninterrupted, does not create any rights where none existed before, but reserves such rights of road as had been acquired against Govt. before date of the grant.—ELLMAN v. q. Grant of riverside property—Reserving free access for all persons—Whether more than easement to public.]—The patent from the Crown of a lot of land situate on the bank of a river reserved free access to the bank for all persons, vessels, &c. There was a quantity of stone on the lot, which pltf. desired to quarry, but was prevented by the penning back of the water of the river by deft., the owner of a mill thereon, below pltf.'s land:—Held: the reservation by the Crown in the grant was merely an easement to the public.—HAWKINS v. MAHAFFY (1881), 29 Gr. 326. —CAN.

r. Grant in fee—Condition against alienation.]—The Crown may, by its prerogative, annex a condition against alienation to a grant in fee.—FOWLER v. FOWLER (1865), 16 I. Ch. R. 507. —IR.

F. Effect of Misdescription.

729. Of thing granted—Rectory of M. in county of N.—Part of rectory in county of Y.]—The Queen being seised of the rectory of M. which extended into the counties of Y. & N. granted by letters patent the rectory of M. in the county of N. to S. in fee with all the lands glebes & other hereditaments with their appurtenances situated at the said rectory:—Held: the choses in Y. passed as the words were to be taken of the rectory of M. generally & not of M. in the county of N.—ANON. (1583), Sav. 55; 123 E. R. 1009.

730. —Manor & advowson formerly belonging to abbot & lately to bishop—Advowson appendant held by abbot but not by bishop.]—The King, seised of a manor to which an advowson was appendant, & which was before held by an abbot, granted the manor without the advowson to a bishop who regranted both the manor & advowson to the King. A grant was afterwards made by the King of the manor with the appurtenances, naming the advowson, & describing the whole as formerly belonging to the abbot, and lately to the bishop:—Held: by this grant the advowson passed.—*R. v. SUB-SECT. 5.—USAGE AS EVIDENCE.

732. To divest Crown of things which can only pass by matter of record.]—HARRIS v. PARKER, No. 683, ante.

733. Corroborative evidence of claims.]—Edw. VI. by letters patent erected a school at Shrewsbury & gave the bailiffs & burgesses power to nominate & appoint a master & to make laws concerning gubernationem et directionem pedagogi & for the preservation of the revenue. The bailiffs & burgesses made bye-laws providing that upon every vacancy of a master the college should elect & nominate a proper person to them & they should nominate him, but they reserved to themselves power to disapprove. The college covenanted to perform the by-laws & this method of election was observed for 150 years without any interruption. Upon an information by the A.-G. to compel the burgesses to nominate according to the by-laws & usage:—Held: the case was corroborated by the usage of 252 years.—A.-G. v.

SHREWSBURY TOWN (1726), Bunb. 215; 145 E. R. 652.

734. To control directions of grant.]—No usage can control the direction of a charter.—R. v. GROSVENOR (1734), 7 Mod. Rep. 198; Ridg. temp. H. 41; 87 E. R. 1187.

735. Where words doubtful.]—Usage will be good or bad according to circumstances; where the words of a charter are equivocal & it stands indifferent how to interpret, contemporary usage will explain the words (MANSFIELD, C.J.).—R. v. JOHNS (1772), Lofft, 76; 98 E. R. 541.

736. —.]—A charter granted jurisdiction to borough magistrates over a district not within the borough & contained words of reference to former charters in which exclusive jurisdiction was given to the borough justices within the borough, & added that they should have jurisdiction within the new district in tam amplis modo et forma, etc.:—Held: (1) if there was in the latter charter a saving clause of the rights of the Crown & of all other persons, the borough magistrates would have only a concurrent jurisdiction with the county justices; (2) where the words of a charter were doubtful, they might be explained by long usage; (3) the charter did not exclude the county justices in the absence of express words to that effect.—*BLANKLEY v. 737. —.]—A charter granted to the mayor & commonalty that any alderman being wanted, the rest of the aldermen might nominate two burgesses for the choosing of one of them as alderman by the commonalty:—Held: "commonalty" included the whole corpn. & an alderman so elected by the votes of the other aldermen as well as the burgesses at large was properly elected. Semble: contemporaneous & continuing usage may be resorted to in aid of the construction of doubtful words in an old charter.—*R. v. 739. To extend meaning of words used.]—Action by the Corpn. of London against deft. for disturbing them in exercising the office of gauger within the London Docks:—Held: (1) the words of a grant from the Crown might by contemporaneous exposition & constant usage be extended beyond their natural import so as to confer a right to exercise an office within a city & the liberties thereof though the right was granted only to be exercised within the City; (2) it was part of the ancient prerogative of the Crown as incident to the duty of customs to appoint officers to gauge all gaugeable articles imported into the kingdom whether for sale or otherwise.—*LONDON CORPN. v. PART XIX. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3. F.

729 i. Of thing granted.]—A patent from the Crown granted land to B., with the express condition that the patent must be consistent with the patents of other portions of a particular block. The description of the land in the patent was erroneous, which was apparent from the other patents and the registered & unregistered plans & had the effect of including land to which A. had a good title. In an action of trespass against B. for pulling down A.'s fence, & for a declaration as to his boundaries:—Held: the patent must be read as only including the land according to the proper description thereof, & would not include the portion in question.—DRULARD v. WEISH (1907), 9 O. W. R. 491; 14 O. L. R. 51. —CAN.

742. —.]—A charter of James II. granted & confirmed to the master pilot & seamen of N. certain ancient dues called "primage" to be paid by all persons being owners of goods brought in any ship from beyond the seas into the river T., or any creek or member belonging to the port of N. In an action for dues in respect of merchandise whereof defts., being merchants & natives of S., were the owners, & which had been brought by vessels into the port of N.:—Held: evidence of usage was admissible in explanation of the charter, & evidence of payment of the duty under the same circumstances as those under which plffs. were charged was not inconsistent with the right construction of the charter.—*BRADLEY v. 743. In favour of grant—Against the Crown.—Primâ facie all goods without an owner belong to the Crown, & if a claim be set up against the Crown the party setting it up must show either an actual grant or usage from which such a grant may be presumed, as might have been made conformably with law. Usage is not in itself good as against the Crown, except as evidence from which such a grant may be presumed (NICHOLL, J.)—R. v. TWO CASKS OF TALLOW (1837), 3 Hag. 744. To determine boundaries of borough—Usage of payment of rates.—Resps. rated applts. to the relief of the poor of the borough of P. as occupiers of the harbour or pool of S. & as receivers of the tolls profits & dues in respect thereof:—Held: in construing the P. charter of incorporation which defined the limits of the borough & having regard to other documents & facts set out in the case, & especially to the fact that S. harbour or pool & the dues & profits thereof had been rated to the relief of the poor by the guardians of the poor of P. continuously for the last 150 years, it was impossible to doubt the pool was within the borough.—*SUTTON HARBOUR IMPROVEMENT CO. v. 748. Tolls—Usage time out of mind.—If a person, claiming a toll for passing over a highway, can show that the liberty of passing over the soil, & the taking of toll for such passage, are both immemorial, & that the soil & the tolls were before the time of legal memory in the same hands, though severed since, it shall be presumed that the soil was originally granted to the public in consideration of the tolls; & such original grant is a good consideration to support the demand.—*PELHAM (LORD) v. 749. Grant which should be by matter of record—After 350 years.—A grant or charter from the Crown, which ought to be by matter of record, may be presumed, though within time of legal memory, & where the presumption was founded on a possession of 350 years:—Held: this was a sufficient ground.—KINGSTON UPON HULL CORPN. v. HORNER (1774), 1 Cowp. 102; Lofft, 576; 98 E. R. 989.

751. Franchise to grant licences—Exercised from remote times.—Where a franchise had been exercised from very remote times, under circumstances which made it reasonable to suppose that it emanated from a grant by the Crown, & there had, at no period, been any considerable opposition to it, the ct. would not allow an information in the nature of a quo warranto to try its validity, merely on the ground that it could not be distinctly traced to a legal origin, especially as the franchise had been partially recognised in ancient statutes:—Held: a rule for an information against the vice-chancellor of C., to try the validity of his title to grant licences to ale-houses must therefore be discharged.—R. v. ARCHDALL (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 281; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 696; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 440; 2 J. P. 486; 2 Jur. 1083; 112 E. R. 843.

SUB-SECT. 2.—WHAT GRANTS MAY NOT BE PRESUMED.

Lost grants generally.]—See Particular Titles, passim.

752. Grant void at law—Crown restrained by statute from making grant.]—Possession of Crown land commencing at least 55 years previously by encroachment on the Crown in the time of the lessor of pltf.'s father, maintained by the father till his death 19 years previously, & afterwards continued for two years by his widow, when deft. obtained possession, would be sufficient evidence for the jury to presume a grant from the Crown, if the Crown were capable of making such a grant. But it appeared that by Dean Forest Act, 1667 (c. 3), all grants of land subsequent to the Act by the Crown in the forest of D., within which the land in question lay, were avoided, & consequently no presumption could be made of a valid grant.—GOODTITLE v. 754. —.]—In an action by the A.-G. at the relation of the corpn. of London against deft. as lessee of the land & buildings known as S. Market & of the franchise for holding a market therein:—Held: (1) deft. was only entitled to hold the market on the days mentioned in the charter granted by Charles II.; (2) as the presumption of a lost grant is only resorted to to justify a long course of conduct pursued as of right & not otherwise explained, a lost grant could not be inferred.—A.-G. v. HORNER (No. 2), [1913] 2 Ch. 140; 82 L. J. Ch. 339; 108 L. T. 609; 77 J. P. 257; 29 T. L. R. 451; 57 Sol. Jo. 498; 11 L. G. R. 784, C. A.

756. Grant in favour of inhabitants of parish—Inhabitants not incorporated.]—A right claimed by the inhabitants of a parish to cut & carry away for use as fuel in their own houses fagots or baskets of the underwood growing upon a common belonging to the lord of the manor is a right to a profit d prendre in the soil of another. Such a right cannot exist by grant, unless it be a Crown grant which incorporates the inhabitants, & such a Crown grant will not be presumed from proof of user by inhabitants, if the presumption is inconsistent with the past & existing state of things, & there is no trace of such a corpn. having existed at any time.—RIVERS (LORD) v. The charter contained a proviso, that in case the corpn. should not comply with any of the directions & conditions in the said letters-patent it should be lawful for the Queen, by any writing under the great seal or the sign manual, to revoke the charter either absolutely, or under such terms & conditions as she might think fit:—Held: the proviso was intended & must be construed, to confer a cumulative & additional power upon the Crown, & not to restrict the prerogative of the Crown, or to interfere with the privileges of the subject. Semble: the Crown cannot grant a charter not subject to the right of the subject to contend that it has been forfeited by breach of a condition in which he has an interest, or by misuser or abuse.—EASTERN ARCHIPELAGO CO. v. 773. Grant to A. & his heirs male—Void.]—
The King granted land to A. & his heirs male:—
Held: this patent was void; for if A. had only a daughter & died & the daughter then had a son the fee would be in abeyance, for the daughter would be the heir & if she died her son should have the fee; but the law would not allow such ceasing & reviving of a freehold. Parliament could create such an estate but it could not be otherwise done.—ANON. (1527), Jenk. 199; 115

774. Grant in tail to hold of another.]—If the King makes a gift in tail to hold of another, this is a good tenure by his prerogative, but a common person cannot do this. If the King gives lands, which he has by reason of an honour, to hold of him in chief, it is good.—ANON. (1570), Moore, K. B. 93; 72 E. R. 462.

SUB-SECT. 7.—MONOPOLIES.

778. Definition.]—EAST INDIA CO. v. SANDYS (CASE OF MONOPOLIES), No. 47, ante.

779. Illegal—As contrary to Magna Carta.]—If a grant be made to any man to have the sole making of cards or the sole dealing with any other trade, that grant is against the liberty & freedom of the subject that before did use, or lawfully might have used that trade, & consequently against Magna Carta. Generally all monopolies are against that great charter because they are against the liberty & freedom of the subject & against the law of the land.—DARCIE'S CASE (1602), cited in 1 Co. Inst. 47.

780. — Unless for new invention—& for limited time.]—Held: (1) the King might make corpns. & grant to them that they may make ordinances for the ordering & govt. of any trade, but thereby they cannot make a monopoly, for that is to take away free trade, which is the birth-right of every subject; (2) if a man had brought in a new invention & a new trade within the kingdom or had made a new discovery of any thing, in such cases the King, in recompense of his costs & travail, might grant by charter to him, that he only should use such a trade or traffic for a certain time, because at first the people of the kingdom were ignorant, & had not the knowledge or skill to use it: but when that patent was expired, the King could not make a new grant thereof: for when the trade was become common, & others had been bound apprentices in the same trade, there was no reason that such should be forbidden to use it; (3) corpns. could not be empowered to decide whether there had been a breach of its charter, for in this way it would be a judge in its own cause, which was against the law, & the King could not grant unto another to do a thing which was against the law.—IPSWICH CLOTH-WORKERS' CASE (1614), Godb. 252; 78 E. Such a right might exist by prescription or statute. A charter containing a grant of privileges contrary to law is not aided by a non-obstante clause.—DUBLIN CORPN. CASE (1619), Palm. 1; 81 E. REBOW* (1687), 3 Mod. Rep. 126; 87 E. R. 81.

785. — — — Within certain limits—Enforcement by forfeiture of subjects' goods.]—The King may create a corpns. of merchants, & give them, by charter, an exclusive right to trade, & hold territories, within certain limits, but a clause prohibiting others to trade within the limits, under pain of forfeiture of their goods wheresoever found, is void, for the King cannot by letters patent create a forfeiture of, or by his own act, confiscate, removed the same. In an action by pltf. for damages the defence set up was that by virtue of a mining grant held by deft. the property abutting on the waters over which the erection had been placed was their sole & exclusive property & that pltf. was a trespasser:—Held: the granting by the Crown of such exclusive right would be contrary to public policy & in derogation of public rights secured by statute. SUB-SECT. 8.—OFFICES.

787. Office requiring skill—To unskilful man—Void.]—The King's grant of an office which requires skill to an unskilful man is void; even though it be made to him & his assigns. A grant of an office of skill to an infant to be exercised in presenti is void, but if in futuro & that he be of full age & expert, when the office is to be exercised, is good.—ANON. (1465), Jenk. 121; 145 E. 788. — To infant—Void.]—ANON., No. 787, ante.

789. Office in reversion—Of judicial office—Void.]—A judicial office cannot be granted in reversion; nor can the King grant it to any one with power to make a deputy. Where a judicial office was granted to A. & his assigns he could not assign it.—ANON. (1471), Jenk. 141; 145 E. R. 98.

790. — Office partly judicial & partly ministerial—Void.]—The nomination of auditors of the ct. of Wards must be under the Great Seal. This office is partly ministerial & partly judicial, & cannot be granted in reversion; for it is by Act of Parliament so entire, that the ministerial part cannot be divided from the judicial. A grant by the King of this office in reversion, to begin after a former grant of the same office in reversion, & which grant is recited in the last made grant, is not good, first, as being a grant in reversion; & secondly, because it recites a void grant as one that is good.

The grant of the office of one of the auditors of the ct. of Wards to two & the survivor of them is good; 32 Hen. 8, c. 46, makes them one officer.—CURLE'S (AUDITOR) CASE (1610), 11 Co. Rep. 2 b; 77 E. R. 1147.

SECT. 7.—ACCEPTANCE OF GRANTS.

815. Grant cannot be accepted partially.]—A. & B. join in a petition to the Crown representing an estate to have escheated & procure a grant of it to be made to them:—Held: A. could not afterwards set up a claim to one part under a prior title in himself, while taking the benefit of the grant as to the rest. Semble: the doctrine of election does not extend to grants from the Crown.—CUMMING v. FORRESTER (1820), 2 Jac. & W. 334; 37 E. R. 656.

816. —.]—A charter granted by the Crown cannot be partially accepted, unless it should appear to be the intention of the Crown that the grantee should have the option to accept in part & reject in part.

A charter vested the right to elect burgesses in the general body of an ancient corpn., & gave a power to make bye-laws to a select body. The general body made a bye-law delegating the power to elect burgesses to the select body:—Held: this was a good bye-law; for the power given by the charter to the select body to make bye-laws, did not divest the general body of the right to make such laws, which was incident to it at common law.—LOVELL v. WESTWOOD (1830), 2 Dow & Cl. 21; 6 E. R. 637; sub nom. R. v. WESTWOOD, 4 Bli. N. S. 213; 7 Bing. 1, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. R. v. WESTWOOD (1825), 4 B. & C. 781.

SECT. 8.—SECOND GRANT OF SAME SUBJECT-MATTER.

819. No actual surrender of prior grant—Extinguishment of prior grant.]—Queen Elizabeth being seised in fee granted to S. for life rendering a rent but these patents were subsequently restored to be cancelled, the Queen granting another patent accepting the surrender made & granting to S.

for life remainder to W. for life, remainder to J. for life, but without any actual surrender or cancellation of the first patents being effected. The question arose, what was the effect of the omission to surrender on the second patent:—Held: there was no surrender but there was extinguishment of the prior grant.—BRETT v. JOHNSON (1605), Lane, 1; 145 E. R. 249.

821. — Prior grant delivered up for cancellation—Necessity for actual surrender.]—Queen Elizabeth by letters patent demised the rectory of S. to the corpn. of the churchwardens of S. for 21 years; afterwards the Queen by other letters patent, reciting the former letters patent, & that the churchwardens lately having & now possessing the letters patent & all the estate, interest, etc. had surrendered them to be cancelled, demised to the said corpn. the rectory for 50 years in consideration of the surrender, etc. & also of a fine of £20 paid by the corpn. The corpn. at the time of making the lease for fifty years delivered up the first letters patent to be cancelled, & then paid the officers of the Court the fees due for cancelling & entering a vacat, but no vacat was made of the enrolment:—Held: (1) An actual surrender was not necessary; (2) the delivery of the letters patent in Ch. to be cancelled, by their hands without writing, was sufficient.—ST. 824. Second grant releasing power previously reserved—Second grant not in consideration of prior grant—Prior grant void—Validity of second grant.]—By an ancient Parliament roll, it appeared that the Commons, by their petition exhibited in Parliament, prayed King Edward III. that the charter made to his liege subjects, burgesses of the town of B., & the franchises by him granted to his burgesses should be ratified & confirmed in that Parliament. The answer to the petition was, that it was assented & agreed in Parliament that the franchises whereof the petition made mention should be ratified & confirmed under the King's Great Seal. The charter was ratified by King Edward III. accordingly:—Held: the Crown was not prevented by this proceeding in Parliament from granting a new charter to the burgesses of

SECT. 1.—DEBTS.

830. Priority of Crown—General rule.]—COKE'S CASE, No. 337, ante.

831. ———.]—Goods of debtor already seized under a fi. fa., but not sold, may be taken under an extent, in chief or in aid.

Where the rights of the Crown & the subject concur, that of the Crown is to be preferred. If however, the right of the subject be complete & perfect before that of the King commences, the rule does not apply, for there is no point of time at which the two rights are in conflict; nor can there be a question which of the two ought to prevail in a case where one, that of the subject, has prevailed already. But if whilst the right of the subject is still in progress towards completion, the right of the Crown arises, the two rights do come into conflict together at one & the same time, & the consequence in that case is that the right of the Crown ought to prevail (ALDERSON, J.).

At common law the King had very peculiar prerogatives, much beyond the common right of a subject for the recovery of his debts. These prerogatives have, at different times, been controlled & regulated by statutes; but these very statutes testify their existence. Thus, in the statutes of Magna Carta, 9 Hen. 3, c. 18. . . . Again, the stat. 25 Ed. 3, c. 19. . . . After the passing of this statute, which considerably abridged the ancient prerogative, although a subject might pursue his debtor to judgment, yet he could not sue out execution until the King's debts were paid or secured, the King being entitled to the first execution (TAUNTON, J.).—GILES v. GROVER (1832), 9 Bing. 128; 6 Bli. N. S. 277; 1 Cl. & Fin. 72; 2 Moo. & S. 197; 131 E. R. 563, H. L.

832. ———.]—Stat. 33 Hen. 8, c. 39, has not abridged the prerogative of the Crown, & the Crown, when in competition with the subject, is entitled to priority of enforcement of its debts, not only when proceeding by writ of extent under the statute, but also when proceeding by distraint or any other mode analogous to execution.—A.-G. v. LEONARD (1888), 38 Ch. D. 622; 57

q. Whether power to revoke.]—Pltf. purchased some land from a govt. agent, & obtained receipts for partial payment. Defts. were then living on the land, having made valuable improvements. Thereafter, an order of council was made, that on defts. making the required payments, pltf.'s money should be returned to him, & the sale to him cancelled:—Held: the Crown could not at its pleasure change a wrongful occupant into a rightful occupant, to the prejudice of their own vendee.—DOE d. HENDERSON v. SEYMOUR (1852), 9 U. C. R. 47.—CAN.

r. Express power of revocation reserved—No inquest of office necessary.]

—The Crown by letters patent granted to A. the right to occupy land for twenty-one years, unless the same should be sooner required by the Crown, on notice of which the grant was to cease and be void:—Held: no inquest of office was necessary to terminate A.'s right.—R. v. HERBERT (1852), 7 N. B. R. (2 All.) 427.—CAN.

s. License revocable at will—Evidence of revocation.]—When a depasturing license is revocable at the will of the Crown, the occupier becomes an intruder from the moment of revocation, & the uniform & persistent refusal of the Comr. of the Crown to accept rents, fees, & assessments is in itself sufficient evidence of revocation.—R. v. MCLEAN, 1 J. R. App. VI.—N.Z.

830 i. Priority of Crown—General rule.]—Whenever the rights of Crown & subject with respect to debts of equal degree come into competition, the Crown's right prevails, & Crown Remedies & Liability Act, 1890, s. 17 (No. 1080), does not affect priority, but applies to procedure only.—Re COMMERCIAL BANK OF AUSTRALIA (1893), 19 V. The debtor on the bond was also liable on two judgments in debt to one Andrew who took out execution for them. Subsequently to this execution the King also took out execution for his debt. The question having arisen as to which execution should be preferred:—Held: the King had many prerogatives pro bono publico, but under 33 Hen. 8, c. 39, the King's debt was only to be preferred when equal in degree with the competing debt.—A.-G. v. By the common law the King has a prerogative of preference in payment to all his subjects & to be first satisfied; Quia thesaurus Regis est pacis vinculum et bellorum nervi. Was the bond by the unity of possession of some manors subject & liable to the bond extinguished:—Held: if a commoner had a rent charge, & purchased parcel of the land charged, all the rent was determined. But otherwise of the Queen, if she purchased parcel she could have execution of the other land in the possession of others. 855. Crown not bound to offer acquittance or receipt.]—The King is not bound to offer an acquittance to any one, but the other is bound to offer it to the King; as if the King makes a lease for a term of years reserving rent, & the rent falls into arrear, the King may re-enter without any demand made for the rent, this is not so in the case of a common person (BRIAN, C.J.).

The King is not bound to offer an acquittance or discharge, still the demand must be made by him. But the King, it is true, is not bound to demand the rent in his own proper person; as a common person would be. In the case of a lease the King shall not enter until the rent be found to be in arrear by office. If the King grants me the rent & the re-entry, I shall not enter without demanding the rent. Part XXI.—Hereditary and Private Revenues of the Crown.

SECT. 1.—SURRENDERED REVENUES ARISING FROM CROWN LANDS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

857. Limit of operation of surrender—During life of Sovereign.]—In 1827 George IV. conferred upon Lord Dunglas for life the office of chamberlain & collector of the rents, revenues etc. of the lands & lordship of Ettrick Forest, at a salary exceeding the annual value of such rents & revenues, & charged the deficiency on another part of the hereditary revenues of the Crown of Scotland. In an action commenced in the subsequent reign to reduce or rescind the grant:—Held: (1) such grant, though purporting to be the grant of an office, was, in fact the grant of a pension to endure beyond the life of the royal grantor, & was so far an illegal alienation of the Crown property. (2)

The surrender of the hereditary revenues to the use of the public at the beginning of a new reign does not operate beyond the life of the sovereign making the surrender. (3) Where the Crown is resp. on an appeal to the House of Lords it is not the usage for the A.-G. to have a general reply on the part of the Crown. (4) The Lord Advocate or other officer suing on behalf of the Crown is not liable for costs even where the suit is improperly instituted. (5) The Lord Advocate, or other officer appealing to the House of Lords on behalf of the Crown, is not required to enter into recognizances to meet the costs of the appeal.—*LORD ADVOCATE v. See, generally, MINES, MINERALS & QUARRIES.

858. Mines containing gold or silver—Within realm—Belong to Crown.]—All mines of gold or silver within the realm, whether in the lands of the Sovereign or his subjects, belong to the Sovereign by prerogative, with liberty to dig & carry away the ores thereof & with such incidents thereto as are necessary for the getting of the ore. If a mine contain both gold or silver & base metal, then whether the gold, silver or the base metal be of greater value, both the gold & silver & the base metal belong to the Sovereign; otherwise if the base metal exceed the other in value. But where a mine contains only base metal, the proprietor of the soil shall have the ore. A mine royal, of either character, may be aliened by royal grant.—CASE OF MINES (1567), 1 Plowd. 313; 75 E. 878. —Produced from office of Land Revenue Record—To prove title of Crown.]—Documents deposited in the office of her Majesty's Land Revenue Records & Inrolments, under the Crown Lands Act, 1832 (c. 1) may be proved by examined copies, in a suit brought to establish the title of the Crown, or its lessee, to lands to which such documents relate, & that although the original purport to be the rental of a former grantee of the Crown. Expired leases by the Crown of lands or mines, tendered in evidence as acts of ownership by the Crown, are so proveable by examined copies, although the originals may not have been enrolled within six months after their execution, under The Crown Lands Act, 1829 (c. 50), s. 63.

An ancient extent of Crown lands, found in the Office of Land Revenue Records, & purporting to have been made by the steward of the Crown lands, is evidence of the title of the Crown to lands therein mentioned, & stated to have been purchased by the Crown of a subject.

Where an entire manor or other district has been in charge to the Crown within sixty years, acts done in different parts of it by different persons, such as the erection & occupation of lime kilns for burning limestone found within the district, & of cottages for the purpose of such occupation, & the sale of the lime so produced, do not amount to such an adverse possession as to displace the title of the Crown to the district, although they may have been continued for above sixty years.—*DOE d. 879. Survey of manor—On presentment of tenants—In Duchy of Lancaster—To prove extent & rights of manor.]—To prove the extents & rights of a manor, which had formerly been parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster, a document produced from the Duchy Office was tendered in evidence purporting to be a survey of the manor, made in 1591 while the manor belonged to the Duchy, by the deputy-surveyor of the Duchy, founded on the presentment of the tenants of the manor, at a ct. of survey, & it appeared that Queen Elizabeth had paid the expenses of the survey:—Held: it was inadmissible, either as a document made under public authority or as evidence of reputation.

885. Nature & extent of right of Crown].—Trespass for taking goods which were wreck & cast upon land within the manor & fee of H. which manor & fee, with wreck of the sea within the manor & fee, had by letters patent been granted by the Crown in fee to the father of plff. whose heir he was. Upon special verdict it appeared that parcel of the goods were wrecked & cast upon the shore within the manor, between the high & low water marks, & that the rest of the goods were floating between the high & low water marks:—Held: (1) the King should have flotsam & jetsam & lagan, when the ship perished or the owners of the goods were not known; (2) a man might have flotsam & jetsam by the King's grant, & flotsam within high water & low water mark by prescription; (3) Stat. West. 1, c. 4, is but a declaration of the common law, & its provisos as to wreck extend to flotsam, jetsam, & lagan. The Act de Praer. Regis, quod Rex hab. wrec. maris per tot. reg. is but a declaration of the common law, & notwithstanding it a man may prescribe to have a wreck; (4) by rule of the common law, where no man can claim property in any goods, the King should have them by his prerogative; (5) the King should have wreck, as he should have great fish, etc., because they are nullius in bonis, or as he should have animalia vagantia sive vacantia, scil. estrays, because none claims the property, & franchise might be granted of such wreck of sea & cattle estraying, conies, hares, partridges, & other savage beasts found in the grantee's soil, fee warrens, & demesne lands.—CONSTABLE'S CASE (1601), 5 Co. 886. —.]—By the ancient common law, all property stranded belongs to the King: after a year & a day it belong to him entirely; & during that time it is vested in him for protection until the owner can be found. In many cases lords of manors are grantees of the Crown of those royalties & privileges which may be established by the grants themselves, or by immemorial custom; but the grantees cannot stand on higher ground than the King, nor can their grants avail against the general principle of law to which I have adverted. Property of the description of wreck, may by the general law be acquired beneficially for the Crown. It is therefore very properly, in the first instance, placed in the custody of the Admlty.: the proctor of the Admlty. interposes for its protection, until a claim is given; but as soon as a lawful owner appears, he withdraws his claim; the right of the Crown to the property is then gone; the ship & goods are restored, & the charges of the Admlty. are paid. The disbursements of the officers of the Crown are made for the preservation of the property; when that is claimed, they are entitled to be indemnified (LORD STOWELL).—AUGUSTA (OR EUGENIE) (1822), 1 Hag. 885 i. Nature & extent of right of Crown.]—The officers of Excise & Customs have the right of custody of all stranded vessels, & the goods on board of such vessels, for behoof of the owners thereof. But they have no right to interfere with those holding the appointment of vice-admiral from the Crown, in regard to the exclusive custody of wrecks, & goods going under wrecks is reserved. Where a vessel, without any living creature on board, had been driven against a precipitous cliff, & the timbers & cargo washed on shore at some distance:—Held: this was not to be considered as the case of a vessel stranded or run ashore, but that it was a wreck, & the goods belonged to the donatory of the Crown.—BREADALBANE v. 902. —.]—Royal fish found & taken within the precincts, limits, liberties, or jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports, or their members, belong to the Lord Warden. The right of the Sovereign to royal fish, by which appellation whale & sturgeon are characterised, is a right as clearly established as any of the prerogatives of the Crown. A whale, found on the shore, or caught near the coasts, of Great Britain, is to be considered not only as being, but as having always been, the property of the Crown; property, indeed, so inherent in the Crown, that by a species of legal fiction, it is to be restored to the King as its rightful owner, veterem ad dominum debere reverti. 918. By King when no Duke in existence—Effect of birth of Duke—On leases made.]—If the King let the land, the lease is void when the Prince is born. But if he present to an advowson, the clerk continues.—ATKINS v. MOUNTAGUE (1671), 1 Cas. in Ch. 214; 22 E. R. 768.

919. — On presentation to advowson.]—ATKINS v. MOUNTAGUE, No. 918, ante.

920. Duke not bound—By laches or prescription.]—The Prince of Wales has a prerogative to protect the Duke of Cornwall from the Statutes of limitation running against them. The Duchy is an estate which by virtue of a charter given, is deemed to have the effect of an Act of Parliament, is vested in the Crown, purged from all disseisins or laches incurred by any preceding Dukes of Cornwall.—A.-G. v. PLYMOUTH CORPN. (1754), Wight. 134; 145 E. R. 1202.

922. — To chose his venue.]—An information was filed by the A.-G. to the Prince of Wales, to recover dues payable in Devon to the Prince as Duke of Cornwall, & the venue was laid in M. On an application by deft. to change the venue to D., it appeared that all the witnesses to facts resided there, but that, as the deft. disputed that the dues were payable to the Prince in right of the Duchy, the records of the office of the Duchy in London would have to be produced at the trial:—Held: on the above facts, & on the ground that the Crown would have a right to allege an interest in the suit, & to claim a trial at bar, application should be refused. Semle: (1) such a suit is in the nature of a transitory action, & the Crown filing the information, would be entitled to lay & keep the venue where it pleased; (2) the Prince of Wales, suing as Duke of Cornwall, would have the same right.—A.-G. TO PRINCE OF WALES v. CROSSMAN (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 381; 4 H. & C. 568; 35 L. J. Ex. 215; 14 L. T. 856; 12 Jur. N. S. 712; 14 W. R. 996.

928. King bound by statute De Donis.]—The King is bound by the stat. De Donis as well as a common person. Therefore if a remainder in tail is limited to the King, & for default of issue to the right heirs of A. this is an estate tail in the King, & he shall not be at liberty to take it as a fee-simple conditional, as before the stat. De Donis, & so to have power to alien after issue had, but upon failure of issue he in remainder in fee may well enter.—WILLION v. BERKLEY (1561), 1 Plowd. 227; 75 E. 929. When King tenant in tail—Right to bar estate tail.]—The King being tenant in tail by a gift made to some of his ancestors being subjects, may by fine levied on a grant & render bar the estate tail: but after the render made it seems necessary to have letters patent to grant to the conusee by express words, that he may enter into the land. Where the King claims in respect of his natural capacity as heir of the body of a subject per formam doni, he shall be bound by an Act of Parliament. But where he claims in his Royal & politic capacity, a general Act shall not bind him, unless he be expressly named, except in special cases.—CASE OF A FINE (1604), 7 Co. Rep. 32 a; 77 E. R. 459.

PART XXI. SECT. 4.

a. Gift relating to lands of Principality—By King—When Prince—Must be made as Prince.]—A gift of non-entry, relative to the Principality, was contended to be null, because given by the King, whereas the lands were holden of the Prince. Deft. answered that it was given when the King himself was Prince. Pltf. replied that the King should have designed himself Prince in the gift & given it as Prince:—Held: the gift was null.—JOHNSTON v. RICCARTON (1608), Mor. Dict. 11685.—SCOT.

t. ——— Must be as administrator to Prince—Must mention that lands are of Principality where no Prince existent.]—Lands pertaining to the Principality cannot be disposed by the King, there being a Prince, except by the King as administrator to the Prince. Where there is no Prince, there is no necessity to dispoise, but as King, but the disposition should mention that the lands pertained & were of the Principality.—HAMILTON v. BARGANY VASSALS (1626), Mor. Dict. 6622, 11686.—SCOT.

a. Rights of King when no Prince existent.]—P. having obtained the gift of the marriage of the Laird of L. by holding lands of the King as Steward & Prince of Scotland, pursued declaration for the avail of the marriage. Deft. alleged absolutor on the ground that no marriage was due, the Prince being the King's vassal & subject. It was answered that as there was no Prince existent, the Principality belonged to the King & all the casualties thereof fell to the King proprio jure:—Held: the King had right to the simple marriage holden of him as Prince while there was no Prince existent.—PURVES v. LUSS (LAIRD) (1680), Mor. Dict. 8542.—SCOT.
